"It would probably take many generations of adversity to train Americans into the far-seeing thriftiness of my people," once observed an American of Scotch birth. "I remember a case of a Scotch woman who had been promised a new bonnet by a lady. Before she undertook the purchase, the lady called and asked the good woman:
"Would you rather have a felt or a straw bonnet, Mrs. Carmichael?"
"Weel," responded Mrs. Carmichael thoughtfully, "I think I'll tak' a strae ane. It'll maybe be a mouthfu' to the coo when I'm done wi' it."

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE MINER
Enormous Sums Spent Every Year for the Farmers, How About the Miners and Their Interests? . .
It seems that the miners and the mining industry are about to receive the recognition they have so long been awaiting. Not only has a federal bureau of mines been established, in at least one of the land grant colleges, which are acquiring a knowledge of the rudiments of mining, metallurgy, assaying, chemistry, geology and mine surveying are now available, not alone for the high school graduate and the son of the well-to-do, but for the miner, the prospector, the mining man and for any others interested in the mineral industry whatever be their previous education or station in life.
For nearly ten years the State College of Washington has been maintaining any assayers' short course, beginning immediately after the new year. Last year this course was reorganized in keeping with the new and extensive equipment of the mining department and is now designated the winter school of mines. This may be either a ten or a twelve weeks course. A large number of men from Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana and enrolled last winter and all expressed themselves as delighted with the work and the benefit they had gained, a number of these men have signified their intention of returning this year to continue their work.
Last year the enrolment included not only a number of grizzled prospectors, but several college graduates, a mechanical engineer, and a licensed physician of 30 years' experience.
The winter months are dead ones in the mining camps. Can the prospector or miner spend a couple of months to better advantage than by attending such a course as this.
The faculty of the winter school of mines, includes, besides the instructors of the mining department, all of whom are highly trained specialists and graduates of the foremost mining schools, such men as the state chemist of Washington, the assistant state geologist, and others of equal note.
In the study of ore deposits, in methods of mining and treating of ores rapid strides are being made, and it is manifestly to the interest of the man interested in any way with the production of the metals to keep abreast of the times. There is probably no way in which this may be accomplished so thoroughly and with such a small expenditure of time and money as by attending such a course as is offered by the Pullman school of mines.
In a booklet descriptive of the course it is stated that "wherever possible the instruction is of a laboratory character, the student being taught to do by doing."
This is a practical course designed for practical men and it offers to prospectors, miners and mining men an opportunity of which we believe they would do well to avail themselves.
Particulars are to be had on application to Professor Francis A. Thomson, head of the mining department, Pullman, Wash.

CONVENTION DEFEATS STATE AID LAW

Good Roads Convention at Walla Walla Defeats State Aid Law and Chooses Wenatchee for Next Place of Meeting.

Walla Walla, Wash., Dec. 3.—Choosing R. H. Thompson of Seattle as president, and Wenatchee as the next meeting place, the sessions of the convention of the Washington Good Roads association closed here late yesterday afternoon, after what was probably the most bitter and most pugnacious meeting of the association that was ever held. From first to last it was a fight on state aid roads; but at times it graded off into a discussion of the King county roads, or the commissioners, or the Walla Walla roads, of H. L. Bowlby, of Mayor Seidel of Milwaukee, of almost anything.
It was a convention where every man thought he was an orator, and took no trouble to conceal that fact. Personalities were numerous, charges of theft and dishonesty freely made, the air was blue from morning until night with acrimonious remarks and bellicose statements, yet for all that, the convention is said to have been one of the most successful in the history of the association.
State aid roads were defeated. The vote on that was taken yesterday morning at 11:15 o'clock, after the debate was closed by Samuel Hill. With tears in his eyes, and with voice choking with emotion, Mr. Hill pleaded with the convention for the retention of the state aid road law, which meant the adoption of the majority report. His remarks were cut short by the previous question, and although the convention seemed willing to grant him more time, he would not take it.
The debate, as in two preceding days, was bitter, bellicose and excessively breezy. Everyone wanted to talk, and when Mr. Hill's time for talking came, he had to yield time after time to delegates who thought their utterances were of momentous weight.
H. A. Reynolds, who had the floor when adjournment was taken Wednesday night, resumed the argument at the opening of the session, with John P. Hartman still in the chair. Mr. Hartman's work as a presiding officer had been marked by decisiveness and accuracy, and upon the request of President Lawrence, he continued his work.
Mr. Reynolds continued his argument of the night before against the state aid roads, showing what had not been done in Walla Walla county. He was interrupted frequently to answer questions, which he did readily.
Benton of Klickitat county followed, and President L. C. Crow of the State Farmers Union came next. The former was for the state aids, the latter bitterly against them. The two were farmers, and represented fairly the farming communities of their sections. Mr. Benton told of the great results accomplished in Klickitat, and Mr. Crow followed with an equally eloquent address on the other side.
After more extemporaneous oratory on both sides of the question, Samuel Hill was given the floor. He took the platform, and in an address which was full of feeling, he asked the convention to stand for the majority report. He cited facts, figures, produced documents, letters and reports, and had time been long enough, his friends believe he would have carried the day. A clash came between Mr. Carrigan and Mr. Hill during this speech, when the latter asked Mr. Carrigan if the King County Good Roads association had not endorsed state aid roads. Mr. Carrigan started to explain.
"Yes or no, Mr. Carrigan," said Mr. Hill, "Did they?"
"They—" began Mr. Carrigan.
"Yes, or no, Mr. Carrigan," insisted Mr. Hill.
"They refused to take any action," said Mr. Carrigan.
"I refuse to discuss the matter, if that is what you say," said Mr. Hill. "Buit I will," said A. W. Gould of Seattle, springing to his feet. "I made the motion for the endorsement and it was passed."
A perfect storm of applause from the state aid adherents followed this. The fight still centered on King county, and Mr. Hill was just warming well to his subject, when W. A. Ritz of Walla Walla objected and asked the previous question.
"We have been washing dirty linen of every county in the state. We came here to act, let's get to work. I demand the previous question."
From all parts of the house came calls of "Give him more time," "Go on," "Hill, Hill, Hill."
Carrigan of Seattle jumped to his feet, and secured the floor.
"I move that Mr. Hill be given all the time he requires to fully explain himself, to finish his address, however long it takes."
The motion was put, but some half dozen people voted against it; and while the vote was overwhelming, was not unanimous, and Mr. Hill would not resume.

Judge Ronald of Seattle then arose and withdrew his resolution, which provided for the furthering of the Hill project, and for the passing of all the provisions agreed upon by the majority and minority reports, the differences in which were little.
"The resolution I made," said Judge Ronald, "contains the plan of Mr. Hill for a great state highway system, and I will not see it defeated here. It is evident we are licked, and I will not have it voted down. I withdraw my motion."
President Penrose of Whitman county then secured the floor, and offered a motion tabling both minority and majority reports. Although the motion was undebatable, there was considerable debate over whether Mr. Penrose was in order. Mr. Hartman, presiding, finally held that the previous question was on Judge Ronald's substitute resolution, and that that had been withdrawn, the convention was open again.

The vote to table the reports was taken, and fearing a misdeal, both sides insisted upon the ayes and noes. This was had, and by 106 to 83, the motion to table was lost.
The minority report was then taken up, and after some parliamentary skirmishing, was put to the vote. It was again decided that the ayes and noes should be taken. Question of the heavy minority vote of Walla Walla county was time and again referred to, and most bitterly by the majority followers.
The ayes and noes showed a count of 103 to 84. And state aid had been lost.

Mr. Reynolds then secured the floor, and offered the resolution which President Penrose would have put up, had his motion to table the reports have been carried. This resolution provides for the appointment of a good roads commission, as follows:
Resolved, That the legislature be asked to appoint a joint legislative commission on good roads to grant hearings at various points in the state, to collect evidence, and finally to draft a bill embodying the most practical methods of securing good roads, to be submitted to the legislature following.

This was passed by an easy majority, just before 7 o'clock, and adjournment was taken for the morning to consider the resolutions and nominations in the afternoon. It was the most strenuous of most strenuous sessions, and it was with a feeling of relief that even those who lost passed through the doors.

Stock and Crop Notes.
Montana ranchers are disposing of their extensive flocks of sheep to ranchmen in Alberta and Saskatchewan on account of the shortness of the feed, last month over 15,000 head being sold and shipped to these.
One farmer living between Pullman and Snake river recently sold 5,000 bushels of his crop of wheat for 59 cents a bushel. He had been offered $1.10 last year, but held for $1.25. His loss was 51 cents a bushel, in addition to the cost of handling, which amounts to not less than 5 cents more.
W. P. Resar, Walla Walla county's wealthiest wheat dealer, Wednesday sold 20,000 bushels of club wheat at 75 cents f. o. b. Walla Walla. This has sent a ripple of excitement through the valley, as the figure marked a 13-cent advance in wheat prices within 10 days. It is considered 1 1-2 cents a bushel above the market. The wheat was grown on Resar's ranch near the city and the barley was graded number one.
The station agent at Granger reports that a total of 213 cars of apples alone were shipped from that station during the month of October. For 15 days in November 78 cars of apples have left there and it is expected that as many more will be shipped by the end of the month.
