

Tuberculosis Day.

April 30 has been set aside this year as "Tuberculosis Day" and will be observed in the 200,000 churches of the country in a manner similar to that of "Tuberculosis Sunday," in 1910, when over 40,000 sermons were preached on the "Prevention of Consumption." The Washington Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis hopes to enlist the co-operation of the people of the state in this movement, to the importance of which, as a great educational factor, the nation and state are gradually awakening.

The policy of the association is to engage in a campaign of education against the disease every day in the year, with special emphasis upon one or two strong general efforts annually. The urgency of making Tuberculosis Day, 1911, the most enthusiastic yet attempted will appeal to all, and as usual, pulpit and press have gladly accepted the responsibility. To concentrate our energy, it is suggested that our efforts be put forth on April 30th, or during the week preceding or following that date.

Literature and information may be secured from the Washington Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis, 915 Cobb building, Seattle, Wash.

Insane Man May Be Murderer.

Colfax, Wash., April 8.—An insane man answering the exact description of F. E. Jones, alleged murderer of Engineer Anthony Lowe at Washtucna, Wash., March 14, was arrested at Lewiston Junction today by Charles Shepard and A. Stewart.

The insane man was brought to Colfax and gives his name as J. Wesley Clarke. He was first seen by passengers arriving in Lewiston Junction from Lewiston today and was wandering along Snake river, nude.

He was given clothes after being arrested and claims to have been in an earthquake, having seen two children killed and a brick church dropped over on his clothes. Clark says he is a painter and worked in Sacramento and San Francisco before coming to Vancouver and Pasco. He admits being put off several trains, but said he never had any trouble with an engineer.

Clarke stated his father and mother spend their time working in Portland and Salem, and that his father's name is Dave Clarke. He is 5 feet 6 inches in height, smooth face, has light blue eyes and sandy, light hair. He has a bad wound on the right leg. Clarke answers every description of the murderer and will be held until the Spokane, Portland & Seattle officers reach Colfax.

JUDGE BEN LINDSEY, SATURDAY, APRIL 22

Judge of Denver Juvenile Court and Friend of the Children Will Lecture at College Auditorium, Saturday Evening, April 22.

Judge Ben B. Lindsey, who needs no further introduction to the public, will lecture at the College Auditorium, Saturday evening, April 22. Owing to his arrival on the 8:10 O. W. R. & N., the lecture will not begin until 8:30. No reserved seats.

The regular admission will be fifty cents to all who do not hold season tickets. The lecture will be along the line of Judge Lindsey's recent magazine articles.

Judge Lindsey's work among delinquent juveniles in the Denver county court has made him a national figure. From all over the civilized world come inquiries regarding the methods and the administrative system of the juvenile court of this man. It would be within the truth to say that Ben B. Lindsey's matinee court is the greatest single factor counting for righteousness in the state of Colorado.

Ben Lindsey, like Joe Folk, came from Tennessee. Left penniless by the death of his father the day after a $15,000 life insurance policy had lapsed, he came to Denver with his mother. He went to work as an office boy for a law firm, and added to the family income by doing janitor work for Judge Robert W. Steele.

It was in a fight against jury fixers that Ben Lindsey began his political career. Twice he and his law partner tried a celebrated damage case, and twice their bulk of well-massed evidence was brought to naught by the twelfth juror. So he "broke into" politics in order to obtain the passage of a three-fourths jury law in civil cases.

His ability soon became recognized, and he served as counsel for one faction of his party in a political fight for control of the machine. He received the appointment to an unfinished term as county court judge, for party services rendered. But before he had been judge a month it was plain that he was no tool of a machine or even of a party.

The problem of the children came home to Judge Lindsey in a strange way. Some street gamins were brought to his court charged with robbing a pigeon roost. As he talked with the trembling youngsters his memory jumped back fifteen years to a time when another party of boys had planned to rob that same cote, and in the attempt some had been caught and some had escaped. He recalled that one of those boys had died for his country on San Juan hill, that another was doing time in a state penitentiary, and that a third was now sitting in judgment on other lads whose futures as good citizens or as criminals might depend upon his wisdom in dealing with them.

And while he was still seeking light, young girls were brought to him charged with frequenting wine rooms. "Why don't you arrest the dive keepers?" he asked of the officers, and began at once a crusade against the evil. But the fire and police board had reasons of its own for not wanting to close the wine rooms. It actually secured from another judge an injunction against action by the board on the plea that the woman suffrage law gave a woman as much right as a man to visit saloons. Judge Lindsey refused to recognize the authority of the other judge, and the supreme court later sustained him. From that time mere politicians have feared and hated Ben Lindsey, not because he is a friend of the children, but because of necessity an enemy of "graft" in protecting the interests of the young.

More than half of the inmates of the reform schools and the penitentiaries of the country are under the age of twenty-three. Surely this implies on the part of the state atrocious neglect or a colossal error in the training of its youth. So it seemed to Ben Lindsey, and with characteristic energy he began to look for the cause of this waste of lives.

NEWHOUSE GIVEN MORE LAURELS

Awarded Honors in Eastern Institution.

Word has just been received by Milt Newhouse that he has been awarded a scholarship at Harvard for next year. Provided he "makes good," this scholarship will be renewed for three years. No one doubts his ability to fulfill such requirements, considering the record held by him here.

As a debater of ability, having represented the college in more debates than can be counted, as winner of the Stearns' medal, editor of the 1911 Chinook, winner of oratorical honors, and as holder of numerous offices in class and general student activities, "Milt" has rounded up his mental prowess with the addition of a few records in track and basketball. With all this, his class work has been above the average and to do so much and do it well betokens one who will still further honor us all at Harvard.

As president of the Students' Assembly, Mr. Newhouse has shown rare executive ability and has done much toward building another story on that already towering structure, the "W. S. C. Spirit."

Chas. Kincaid, who is farming the J. S. Klemgard ranch eight miles west of Pullman, after having lost ten colts by premature birth, has at last stamped out the mysterious disease that has affected his mares for the past few months. Mr. Kincaid states that he tried every remedy suggested by the veterinarians and some of them has had the desired effect, though he does not know which one of the remedies effected the cure. The malady has been diagnosed as contagious abortion by the state veterinarian and is said to be general throughout the Northwest.

Mike Kulzer, a prosperous merchant of Valley, Stevens county, was in Pullman this week visiting his cousin, George Wagner.
