Nothing is a better education than the possession of money. If your child has a bank account he will take an interest in arithmetic. It will create in him an interest "in" his money more valuable than the interest "on" his money. He will learn the value of money and time, and learn to look out for himself

A DOUBLE LOSS

When E. A. Bryan retires from the position of president of the State College next month, that institution will suffer a double loss. In the general regret felt over the approaching termination of his long and wonderfully efficient administration, many have overlooked the fact that his wife will also lay aside her duties as first lady of the college. This is a very responsible and difficult position to fill, but Mrs. Bryan has met its requirements with such gracious tact and sympathetic discrimination as to endear her to the members of the faculty, the student body, the alumni and all the people who have had the pleasure of meeting her.

As President Bryan will leave the impress of his personality in every department of the institution and every corner of the campus, so the influence of Mrs. Bryan's personality will long be felt in the social and religious life of the college and community. She has met the many perplexing problems incident to her position with a skill and wisdom that have minimized social friction and jealousy, thereby greatly lightening the burden resting upon her husband, and contributing much to the success of his administration. She has presided over her home and discharged her social duties with a gentle dignity and charming simplicity that has not only kept before the girl students a fine example of true American womanhood, but has also inspired in them a desire to emulate that example. She has been a real helpmate, and has rendered as valuable services to the college in her sphere as has her husband in his sphere.

In the honors and eulogies which are being showered on the retiring president, Mrs. Bryan should not be forgotten, for to her is due a full meed of gratitude and affectionate remembrance from all the friends of the State College of Washington.

A VITAL DISTINCTION

There are many organizations in the Pacific Northwest which are co-operative in name, there are few which are co-operative in fact. In the final analysis, the vital distinction between a corporation and a genuine co-operative organization is that the corporation puts the dollar above the man, while the latter puts the man above the dollar. The purpose of a corporation is to earn dividends on the capital invested, and the influence of each stockholder is determined by the number of shares he holds. The purpose of a co-operative organization is to secure benefits for its members, each of whom has an equal voice in the management, regardless of the amount of capital he has invested. The profits of a corporation are distributed solely on the basis of the money invested. The profits of a co-operative organization are distributed on the basis of reasonable interest on the money invested, and the balance on the amount of patronage furnished the organization.

For instance, suppose a number of farmers should organize a company to build a warehouse and handle wheat. Suppose the venture should earn 20 per cent interest on the capital stock. Suppose that one man should own 10 shares of stock and haul 1000 bushels of grain to the warehouse, while a neighbor should hold one share of stock and store 10,000 bushels of grain in the warehouse. When the profits were distributed the man holding the 10 shares of stock would receive 10 times as much dividend as the man who held one share, and in the stockholders' meeting would have 10 votes to the other man's one.

But suppose these same farmers had organized as a co-operative association instead of a corporation. In that case when the profits were divided seven or eight per cent would be set aside to pay interest on the capital and of this the man with 10 shares would receive 10 times as much as the man holding one share. But of the remaining profits, the man who had held one share but had stored 10,000 bushels of grain would receive 10 times as much as the man who held 10 shares but had stored only 1000 bushels, and in the stockholders meeting each would have one vote regardless of the number of shares he held.

In a corporation the dollars invested are given first consideration in the distribution of the profits and the control of the policy. In a co-operative association the patronage furnished by each individual is given first consideration in the distribution of profits and each stockholder has an equal voice in the control of the policy of the organization.

The corporation encourages a man to invest money in its stock. The co-operative association encourages a man to furnish patronage to the association. One emphasizes the power of the dollar, the other emphasizes the power of the individual.

SOME FACTS ABOUT THE PULLMAN SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

To provide a systematic and absolutely safe plan for the investment of savings, and to aid its members to acquire homes of their own is the object of the Pullman Savings and Loan Association. The Association is in every sense a Home Institution.

It is for the Practical Man, who realizing the uncertainties of business and of health, and of the folly of spending all his money as fast as he gets it, provides for an emergency.

It is for the Prudent Woman, who out of her earnings or allowance, desires to put away a little money, monthly, where it will be securely and profitably invested, and give her the least trouble and where she can get it when needed.

It is for the Young Man possessing the manhood and determination to save something every month from his earnings as a reserve fund, to draw on when sick or out of a position, for providing a home or for a start in business.

It is for Boys and Girls, to help them to be economical and industrious and to encourage them to acquire the habit of saving, provide a fund to educate them and to make them independent.

Who It's For

It is for Societies, Fraternal and Other Organizations wishing to invest their income for the purpose of creating a reserve fund, or for building.

It is for all Seeking a Home or who want to improve their property, or pay off a mortgage or to provide a fund for any other worthy purpose.

Made from the right crude

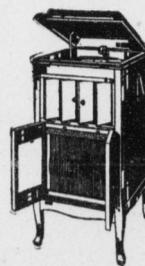

The Jury of Awards at both San Francisco and San Diego Expositions found an oil made from California asphalt-base crude, highest in lubricating efficiency. That oil was Zerolene. The fact, too, that such unbiased authorities as a U. S. Naval Engineer, engineers of the Packard and Ford Motor Companies, and others, have also gone on record in favor of oils made from asphalt-base crude—in accord with the decision of the Exposition juries—proves that Zerolene is made of the right crude, and made right.
