STATE FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS

Mrs. Solon Shedd, President

If any wall now divides the study clubs of our state from those organized for social or civic activities that wall runs very low. Wide-spread and deep-seated is the conviction that a woman's club is not worthy the name unless in some way it makes its own community better and gives a helping hand to efforts for the public good. Working together is the very natural result of studying together.

Mrs. Winter, our retired chairman, expressed this thought in her definition of club papers. "They are," she said, "the device of clubs for securing unity of intention and action, through unity of information and opinion." We are all beginning to see this and to realize that the purpose of the study club is not the culture of the individual member, much less to store minds with information. The ultimate purpose is to fit the membership for harmonious, intelligent action.

The study element in our programs serves a double purpose. Often the topic studied or the papers read suggest a nearby need. One circle read together "The Spirit of Youth and City Streets." Out of the knowledge gained and the sympathy aroused by Jane Addams' experiences came a plan to start public playgrounds and the plan was worked out to a successful achievement.

Reading Zona Gale's delightful story of the community Christmas has been the inspiration of scores of community trees and celebrations, every one of them rich in blessed results.

Another club was studying modern drama and listened to "The War-brides" and "In the Vanguard." Hearts were stirred with a passionate desire for world-peace. The desire found expression at the ballot-box last November and in other ways. Later the reading of Galsworthy's "The Pigeon" gave members a better understanding of the girl of the street, the vagabond, the drunkard and a practical interest in the question of how is society to deal with these classes.

Every bit of keen character analysis which finds its way into a story, a drama or a poem furnishes an opportunity to broaden our understanding of men and women. It widens our acquaintance. No thoughtful person can read Mrs. Wharton, Margaret Deland or Mrs. Humphrey Ward without seeing something far better than "how the story comes out." The reader will see how such courses and such tendencies do come out, not in this particular story but in life. So it is good for a club to hear a review of any one of the really big stories. If it is written by one who knows human life and reviewed by someone who sees into the heart of it, the time is well spent. A good way to handle the program, Mrs. Winter told us, is for the leader to "give a resume in her own words, reading aloud striking passages and inviting discussion on discussable points." The bare story is never the chief thing in a real book. A Who's Who biography doesn't tell the real things about a life.

Interest in human welfare burns in the souls of so many of our best writers today that it is an easy thing for the program committee of a literary club to direct attention to any phase of social betterment. They need only make an intelligent choice of topics and authors. The writers need not always be of recent date. Poets and essayists for decades past have been saying some of the very things we call "new" and pointing out the paths we are beginning to walk in. "Din of old bugles; trumpets newly stirred" call to the same field of endeavor.

We have said that the hours given to study of literature serve a double purpose. Suppose that the members of a club see eye to eye and have an earnest desire to lend a hand in favor of a definite movement. It may be a public library or city beautiful, a county hospital or a community Christmas, the discouragement of public dances or steps to Americanize immigrant foreigners, getting manual training into the schools, securing a police matron—or any other of the splendid tasks to be done before "on earth as in heaven" is realized.

There is one best way to do each of these things and there are a dozen futile and expensive ways. Not only earnest but intelligent action is needed. It is good to know the successes and failures of those who have attempted the same thing in other places. Reading is an absolute prerequisite to wise action. Not even the most original mind is to be depended on; the most observant globe-traveler may not be a safe leader.

The literature on that particular line of work is a treasure-box of suggestions.

Frequent letters come from club secretaries to this committee telling of boxes or packages of reading matter sent to Monroe. Just as frequent are the acknowledgements from Superintendent Olson. In his recent report to the board of control he speaks of the substantial help given to the work of the reformatory by these supplies. The superintendent would be glad to receive more and a visit to the institution will convince any one that it is put to good use. There are 300 men and boys with necessarily many idle hours on their hands.

Miss Janet Moore says "Tell the clubs not to forget the girls at Grand Mound, when they are packing up their books and papers." Last week came an opportunity for a talk with Miss Campbell and this is the situation. The school for girls has far less use for miscellaneous literature and the needs are more specific. Just now copies of Century and Harper's would be welcomed. It would be good if someone would send current numbers as soon as read.

"Club Stories," our own state book, is still in stock, and at 50 cents is well worth buying. Forty or more copies were sold during the holidays. Order of Mrs. W. G. Hall, Seattle, Mrs. W. N. Hunt, Burlington or Mrs. R. B. Hassell, Everett.

Cordially yours,

MRS. R. B. HASSELL,
Chairman of Literature.

UNSHAKEN TESTIMONY

Time is the test of truth. And Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test in Pullman. No Pullman resident who suffers backache, or annoying urinary ills can remain unconvinced by this twice-told testimony.
