MELANDER RETURNS FROM WENATCHEE APPLE DISTRICT

Returning from a trip of investigation and propaganda in the apple belts of lowland and upland Washington, Dr. A. L. Melander, head of the department of zoology, says that the apple industry of the state last year suffered codling moth losses aggregating no less than five millions of dollars, at least four-fifths of which could have been prevented by proper spraying.

Dr. Melander says that the spraying methods worked out 12 years ago by the State College are still good, but that the later generation of apple growers either have departed from the old and safe way, or have taken up with inferior methods. He returned to the Wenatchee apple district today to take up again the codling moth campaign on the old lines which last year, followed by the old time apple men, proved better than 95 per cent efficient in saving the apples from the worm.

In the past few weeks Dr. Melander and assistants, Anthony Spuler and R. M. Fulton, have met individually and in groups, no less than 1700 apple growers of the central part of Washington. Melander says, on the basis of evidence collected, that spraying improperly done 1st year during the week following the dropping of the petals, cost the growers their five millions in apples.

STATE COLLEGE RECOMMENDED FOR MOTOR TRUCK UNIT

Friday Major Geremanos, of Washington, D. C., inspected the automobile engineering equipment of the State College to determine whether the institution should be recommended for a unit of the motor transportation service of the reserve officers' training corps. He said that he would recommend that the State College be one of the 20 institutions of higher education in the United States in which motor truck units will be established.

In explanation, Dean H. V. Carpenter, of the college of mechanic arts and engineering, says that any student in any department of the college may, by completing the required work each year, which will include training in the automobile engineering department, practice in truck driving and overhauling, together with six two-weeks summer encampments at one of the eastern motor transportation camps, obtain appointment in the reserve with the rank of second lieutenant.

Lieutenant Colonel Frasier, of the Coast Artillery, will inspect the college this Tuesday, May 20, with a view to the establishing of a unit in the coast artillery R. O. T. C. This artillery unit will be open only to students in mechanical and civil engineering.
