An armistice celebration was held at the Masonic hall Tuesday evening. A large gathering was present and a good time was enjoyed by all. Prof. F. O. Kreager, head of the elementary science department of the W. S. C., spoke and his address was enjoyed by all. It is to be regretted that more were not out to hear him but goodness knows where they would have been placed. After Prof. Kreager's address, Mr. Elmore, who is president of the Farmers Union of Washington, gave an address in which he plainly stated the needs of the farmers of today. Prior to the addresses a most bountiful supper was spread which goes to show that the people of Albion believe in doing things in grand style. Now that we have things started, let's keep them going and come out and renew old acquaintances.

"TOLD IN THE HILLS" AT THE LIBERTY THEATRE

The magnificent panorama of rugged mountains and deep canyons that forms the background for "Told in the Hills," Robert Warwick's latest Paramount-Artaft picture, which appears at the Liberty theatre Thursday and Friday, November 13-14, is in keepink with the powerful story that is revealed.

To those in the audience who have read Marsh Ellis Ryan's famous novel, it was a rare treat to see their old favorites in action on the screen. Others who met big-hearted "Genesee Jack" Stuart for the first time through Robert Warwick's superb interpretation of the character were no less enthusiastic. The exciting story of love and adventure that centers around "Genesee" was excellently interpreted by a fine cast, which includes such noted players as Ann Little, Wanda Hawley, Eileen Percy, Tom Forman, Monte Blue, Guy Oliver, Charles Ogle, Margaret Loomis, and Hart Hoxie. George Melford was the director.

The story concerns the sacrifice of Jack Stuart, who kept a promise made to his dying mother, by marrying the girl his younger brother, Charles, had wronged. Providing for her, he took up a claim alone in the mountains of Montana among the Indians. There he meets Rachel Hardy, and they love each other at first sight. Only after Jack, wrongfully accused of theft, has saved the lives of his accusers by rescuing them from impending massacre, and had been almost fatally wounded, was he able at last to claim his happiness.

"Told in the Hills" is like a breath from another age—the hard-fighting, great-hearted West of 1880. Its wonderful story, great cast, and the lavish scale on which it was produced lift it far above the ordinary Western photoplay. It is a remarkably well presented all-American picture that every red-blooded American will enjoy. The picture was taken at Kamai, Idaho.
