ENLISTMENT DRIVE OF THE M. E. CHURCH

The enlistment drive which the Pullman Methodist church is to put on beginning February 8 is made necessary by the mighty demand for trained leaders. The church can now offer the most fertile opportunities and of the most diversified character.

1. Limitless fields for special work in foreign lands.

The preacher lays the foundations of a new moral and social order; he heals souls and transforms society; the physician teaches sanitation and hygiene, controls plagues, and heals the wounds of helpless millions; the educator reduces languages to writing, lays the foundations of school systems, stops famine by better agriculture and teaches all the crafts and trades. No man means as much for world peace as the missionary.

2. Limitless special work at home. Country preachers with vision to organize country life, men to organize great downtown city centers, powerful men to handle community churches, religious educators, secretaries, deaconesses, nurses, lecturers, great preachers, administrators.

3. Limitless opportunities as church members.

a. Religious education. Specialists as teachers of children, of high school age, of adults, as leaders of young people's societies. There are three reasons why this is the best of all fields for volunteer teaching. The text is the matchless teaching of Christ, the lessons are burning with religious fervor, and most of the teaching is to the receptive mind of childhood.

b. Christian recreation. Recreation should be furnished in an atmosphere that will make it helpful and conducive to a Christian America. There is limitless opportunity for boys' and girls' club work, or for leadership of young people or adults. The time has come to quit criticising the church in this matter. For long the church has wished to do great things but could not because people engrossed in pleasure and profit would not do the work.

c. Church management. Leadership in correct financial management, church and community singing, great financial and missionary drives, in personal evangelism, in visiting, church publicity, charity, organization.

d. Civic betterment. Leading the passion of the church in efforts for industrial betterment, for better housing, for community centers, lecture courses, play supervision, social purity, moral uplift,—the list is endless.

e. There are great fields of service not connected with the church for which a spiritual preparation is necessary.

The aims of the enlistment drive are twofold.

The first and greatest is the spiritual—to secure through fellowship with Christ and loyalty to his Kingdom a dominant love and zeal for service. The fellowship of the Cross—a great dedication in spirit is our needed foundation for the new world.

And, second, that every young person, as he prepares for vocational or professional leadership, shall also definitely prepare along some of these lines; so that he can go out, not as a money-maker and society leader only, but as a trained leader for the church, for society, and for the Kingdom of God.

The local Methodist church is striving to voice and to make real the highest and best aspirations of the time in the enlistment drive of February 8.
