Controlling Crows.

Various methods have been tried to keep crows away from poultry, most of which were ineffectual. One farmer tried five different methods. The first was a scarecrow, but this had little or no effect. In the second place corn soaked in strychnine solution was scattered on a field of planted corn, but no dead ones were found. No corn was pulled and there was no appreciable decrease in the number of chickens taken. Third, a steel trap was set on a pole near the chicken yard, without success. Fourth, white twine was run on the stakes around and across the chicken yard; this kept the crows from the yard, but the young chicks would get out and would then fall a prey to the crows. Finally a crow was shot and hung on a pole near the chicken yard, after which there was no further trouble.

Human Body Needs Light.

Slum dwellers, who live in narrow and crowded streets, are pale and undernourished. Improper nutrition has a good deal to do with it, but that is only one cause. All efforts to improve the condition of the poor in cities by giving them fresh air and cleaner quarters are in the direction of giving them more light.

Any physician will tell you that exercise in the open air is vastly more beneficial than any obtainable in a gymnasium. The chief reason why is that when you are playing tennis or golf, or riding a horse or a bicycle, or amusing yourself otherwise out of doors, you are getting the benefit of unlimited light.

X-Ray Boon to Humanity.

"It is through the infinitely little," Victor Hugo once wrote, "that the infinitely great overwhelms us." That thought comes back with the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the X-ray, discovered during the spring and summer of 1895 by William Roentgen, a professor of physics. His achievement disclosed an emanation which could be used in physical investigations with searching power; it furnished a means by which "shadow" pictures could be taken of the interiors of opaque objects and proved of priceless value to surgeons by enabling them to locate obstructions and abnormalities in the human body.
