MEMORIAL DAY, 1922

(By Carl Philipp)

Soldier for aye, how goes the day?
Tell of your battle on Lethe's way.

Gone is the day and the battle
lost—
Peace to this marly dwelling.

Over me summer or hoary frost,
Empires gambling and kingdoms
lost.

Neath me thin waters are welling,
Loning to be in flower and tree,
Luring my heart into cavernous
sea.

Colonel forgets that our sentries
sleep.

Sergeant woos not the still maiden
Laying her head where, windrows deep.

Mammoth and bear through the hunter creep.

Eyelids eternity-laden,
While on all things the last bell
rings.

Taps of the dead in her evening
wings:

"Tollingatoll—on a narrow life,
Moll of the strong and the stronger,
Light is the home where a faithful
wife

Fondles your boy and beweeps the strife—

Heed her still crying no longer,
Toll—at our gate cease loving and
hate:

Toll, toll—to rest, the hour is late."

Crumbling battalions speed that song

Yond where year heavens darken;
Out in the wastes a weaving
through

Slacken their shuttle 'twixt right
and wrong

As to the peal they harken;
Harken with glee to a new rev-
elle:

"Furled are the flags and the warriors free."

Muffle the drum of our storming
fray.

Swing not your columns together,
Gently step into the blossoming
May.

Shield me my leaves through November gray.

Huddling like quail in the weather,
One is all clay on Lethe's Way:

Toll, toll—God and the endless
day.

MEMORIAL DAY

Next Tuesday will be Memorial day, when with tears in their hearts and flowers in their hands, the people of these United States will pay tribute to the memory of the men who fought and made sacrifices that their government and its institutions might endure.

The fatalities of the recent war have brought home to many a far deeper appreciation of the significance of the day than they ever had before and it seems an opportune time for the relatives and comrades of the dead heroes of all our wars to insist that in future the day shall be observed in the spirit in which it was first instituted, instead of being regarded as a holiday set aside for sports and entertainments and money making. Such desecration of the day has been an insult to the memory of our dead soldiers and an affront to their surviving comrades, which should never again be tolerated in this country.

It is a beautiful custom for all the people, once a year, to join in decorating the graves of our departed heroes and in pledging anew allegiance to the principles for which these dead fought. Tears shed in a common grief and honors rendered in a united spirit of gratitude will go far toward drawing the people of this nation closer together and deepening their love for the institutions for which so many of their countrymen offered their lives.

There are comparatively few of the veterans of the civil war left to see that Memorial day is fittingly observed, but the G. A. R. can now entrust that privilege to the American Legion, with full assurance that it will never be neglected, as long as a member of that organization survives, and when they too have passed away, the graves will still be decorated on May 30th.

"Till the stars grow old
And the sun grows cold,
And the leaves of the Judgment book unfold."

AN INVESTMENT IN GOOD WILL

Tomorrow the merchants of Pullman will hold their fourth sales day and they offer as a special attraction, in addition to many low bargain prices, an old fashioned horse-shoe pitching contest, open to everybody. Two hundred dollars in prizes will be awarded to the winners of the tournament, of which one-half will go to farmer contestants only.

The cost of arranging and advertising these sales days, providing the prizes and selling at bargain prices is considerable and the merchants are not passing it on to the consumers, but are taking it out of their margin of profit. They regard it as an investment in good will, which will eventually bring results by increasing the volume of trade which comes to Pullman and by establishing a better understanding and more friendly feeling among their patrons.

The merchants are in business to stay, and it is a self-evident fact that, in order to do so, they must treat their patrons fairly and give as low average prices as are quoted by stores in neighboring towns for the same quality of goods and same service. They want the farmers who feel that they can buy to better advantage elsewhere to talk the matter over with them frankly, so that both sides can lay their cards on the table and try to settle amicably any points of misunderstanding and dispute. Every farmer should be glad to do this for it will benefit him to build up as large a trading center as possible, and a feeling of good will between the town and country will be of great benefit to both.

There are always three sides to every question: your side, your opponent's side and the right side. The only way to get on the right side is to state your argument, to listen to the other fellow's argument, and then to make any concessions which are fair. Most of the trouble in this world starts from suspicion, based on misinformation or ignorance. Suspicion, after being nursed for a while, is likely to develop into open hostility and hostility inevitably breeds trouble.

It could do no harm and might do a lot of good for every farmer to inform himself regarding the stocks carried, the service offered and the why and wherefore of the systems used by his local merchants. The time may come when he will need friendship or advice or financial accommodations. He can not hope to get it from any mail order house, no matter how much he has traded with that house. He can usually get it from his home merchants. Friends are one of the most valuable assets any individual or community can have. Pullman merchants want the farmers to be friendly to Pullman, and that is why they are arranging to entertain them with a good old-fashioned sport tomorrow and at the same time to give them the benefit of old fashioned bargains on up-to-date goods.

Every dollar you spend in Pullman on Sales Day will ring a bargain.

MEANS MUCH TO PULLMAN

The fact that the contracts for the construction of the new men's dormitory at the State College, for the plumbing work and for the installation of the heating system in this building and for the construction of two new barns at the college, were all awarded to local firms means much to this city.

It means that some $200,000 will be spent here this summer and that a large part of this sum will be paid to local residents for labor and supplies. It means that the plant of the Pullman Manufacturing Co. will be kept running on full time. It means that local carpenters and mechanics and other wage earners can secure employment. It means additional business for the stores and restaurants and lodging houses.

Had the contracts gone to outside parties, they would have brought in their regular workmen and, while Pullman would have benefited by what money these men spent here, most of their wages would have been sent away. Now most of the wages will be placed in circulation here and will remain here. Whatever profits there are in the contracts will also remain in Pullman.

The success of the local bidders shows that Pullman has men with the ability, equipment and courage to successfully compete with prominent contractors residing in the big cities, which fact, by itself, is a valuable advertisement for the town.

"The sight of buildings going up always has a stimulating effect upon people who are thinking of building. Building activity is contagious, like business confidence. Work in progress begets more work. The awarding of these contracts to Pullman assures a busy summer to this community and augurs well for a prosperous fall.

It means that Pullman has started on the up-grade again and is progressing to the goal of a bigger college and a bigger and better city.

"THEY"

There is a whole mint of suggestion and truth in the following article which appeared in the Kiwanis magazine:

"I wonder why they don't fix that street? Wouldn't you think they'd pass a stricter ordinance against speeding? They didn't do much of a job on that school house, did they? They'd make a better town of this if they'd have a clean-up week occasionally. I can't understand why they don't have a better police force in this burg. If they'd only turn out on election day they wouldn't have to squeal so much about 'dirty politics.' They ought to be ashamed of such bad conditions in the city hospital. I wonder why they can't wake up to the fact that they are behind the times."

He didn't make all this speech at once, but at intervals. His name is Bill Jones—and there are hundreds of him. Our town has a number and your town probably has its share. If you ask a Bill Jones who "they" are, he will give you any one of a dozen answers, ranging from a "Huh?" to a vacant stare, and including such bromides as "why, the electorate" or "the people in authority" or "the government officials."

Not all Bill Jones are hopeless. Our town Kiwanis club took in a Bill Jones not long ago. He became a very enthusiastic Kiwanian. At his third meeting he asked the privilege of saying something. It wasn't very long, but much to the point.

"All my life," he said, "I've been asking questions about why 'they' don't do this, that, or the other necessary thing. I never thought very clearly just who 'they' were, except I knew it was a collection of 'other fellows.' But I know better now. I have found out who 'they' really are. When there is a wrong to correct, a civic mistake to be rectified, or a worthy cause to be espoused, I don't blatherskite about what 'they' ought to do, because I know 'they' either will do it, or are doing it!

"Fellow Kiwanians, I am proud to tell you my discovery of the identity of 'they.' 'They' are 'we.'"

"CRUCIFIXION" AGAIN CROWDS GRAND THEATRE

Verl Keiser, tenor; Hobart Brown; basso; Leslie Sorenson, tenor. The excellent support and interpretations of Miss Irmgardie King, accompanist, lent much to the rendition.

"At the close of the program the visiting singers were entertained in the social rooms of the church by the local choir.

"This occasion is undoubtedly the first of a series of exchanges of musical good things between Pullman and Colfax, the artists from Pullman having agreed to come and put on the cantata only with the understanding that Colfax singers reciprocate when they have something especially worthy to offer. That it is a great help in the right direction goes without saying, and it will undoubtedly go far toward removing the old spirit of petty rivalry and jealousy heretofore existing and will lead to a marked improvement in good fellowship between the two cities."

DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL June 12-30

The Pullman churches will conduct a daily vacation Bible school this year with a somewhat enlarged program. In addition to the kindergarten and primary classes in the Baptist and Federated church buildings, there will be junior and intermediate classes in the United Presbyterian building. It is also planned to have two adult classes, one for high school students and another for older people. Full details will be published in next week's Herald.

RETROSPECTIVE

Pullman Thirty-three Years Ago

(From The Pullman Herald of May 25, 1889.)

ARTESIAN WATER!

For the past two weeks J. J. Shupe has been at work boring a well for M. C. True on his property on Main street where his new hotel will be built. The constant thud, thud of the drill was getting monotonous as it slowly bored through the hard rock. At 9 o'clock Friday morning the shrieks of the whistle announced that water had been struck, and when the drill was withdrawn water at once came to the surface. After boring a few feet more through the sand the water overflowed freely, to the satisfaction not only of Mr. True but of interested citizens who soon gathered to see Pullman's first artesian well. The hole is six inches in diameter and the flow, by actual measurement, is 50 gallons per minute, or 72,000 gallons in 24 hours, enough water to supply a town of 3000 inhabitants. Although it has not yet been analyzed magnetic iron is one of its prominent component parts. Dr. Webb, who has tested it, says: "If a steel knife is laid in the water for six hours, or possibly less, it will become so magnetized that a pin can be picked up with it."

A temporary ditch conveys the water to the South Palouse. When piped it can be raised to a height of at least 30 feet, which will enable Mr. True to have water in every room in his hotel. The value of this well to the owner cannot be overestimated, and the fact that artesian water can be had so easily makes it possible for Pullman to have, at small expense, a system of water works unequalled in the territory.

At a citizens' meeting last night it was decided to celebrate the Fourth of July and committees on finance and speakers were appointed, to report next Wednesday evening.

Lanning & Rice have added to their livery outfit a splendid new double seated carriage.

Drive where you may, any direction from Pullman, and you will see in almost every field teams at work breaking the virgin soil. Next year there will be at least as much more land in crop as there is now, and the increase this year over last is considerable.

TIME TO ACT

Don't Wait for the Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness. Profit by Pullman People's Experiences

Occasional attacks of backache, irregular urination, headaches and dizzy spells are frequent symptoms of kidney disorders. It's an error to neglect these ills. The attacks may pass off for a time but generally return with greater intensity. Don't delay a minute. Begin taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and keep up their use until the desired results are obtained. Good work in Pullman proves the effectiveness of this great kidney remedy.

Frank Klossner, carpenter, 300 Harrison St., Pullman, says: "I think heavy lifting is what weakened my kidneys and caused backache. When I stooped I often got a catch in the small of my back and I could hardly raise again. My kidneys acted irregularly and the secretions were highly colored. I also had severe headaches. I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills and three boxes from White's Drug Store gave me great relief, helping me in every respect."

OVER SIX YEARS LATER, Mr. Klossner added: "I haven't had occasion to use any kidney medicine since endorsing Doan's Kidney Pills. I give them credit for curing me." Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Klossner had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.
