

DROWNED IN THE NATCHEEZ.—On Sunday last Alma, daughter of A. C. Engdahl, aged 16 years, was drowned in the Natchez. Mr. Engdahl lives about eighteen miles up the valley and the reports received of the sad affair are of a very meagre nature. The Herald's informant states that after dinner on Sunday Mrs. Engdahl asked her daughter to wash the dishes, remarking that she would get the supper. The dishes washed Miss Engdahl left the house and walked toward the river. Supper time arrived and the girl not returning the family became alarmed, and Mr. Engdahl and son found and followed her tracks leading toward the river. The river reached the searchers separated, one going up and the other down stream. About half a mile down stream the body of the girl was found lodged on a rifle. Life was extinct. The deceased was a sister of County Superintendent Hilda A. Engdahl.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS.—Last winter Martin Davern, who lived up the Ahtanum valley, died very suddenly and under circumstances somewhat peculiar. It was said that his death was the result of a spree held in the old town in company of Patrick Doyle. Doyle told the story that Davern being incapable of taking care of himself he loaded him into his wagon and took him to his (Doyle's) house, where he left him in the wagon all night. In the morning Davern was dead. One of the singular points in this case is that Doyle's wagon passed Davern's house and yet Doyle made no effort to get his neighbor home. Recently the officers have learned something new regarding the case which they propose to investigate, but in the meantime Doyle has evidently learned something too, for he has left these parts and his whereabouts are unknown.

PUT ON THE PREFIX.—While the trains do not stop at Yakima city the mails are delivered and received there by trains instead of passing through North Yakima as formerly. As a result, all mail intended for North Yakima, but simply addressed Yakima, goes to the old town, resulting in a delay, and often, much inconvenience. Publishers and correspondents from a distance are requested to bear this fact in mind and guide themselves accordingly.

NEW SALOON.—Frank O'Hara and M. H. Wills have handsomely fitted the old Shadlow & McDaniel building on Yakima avenue, and reopened it as a saloon. Messrs O'Hara and Wills are from Pendleton, where they have a large circle of friends and acquaintances, and stand well in the community. Mr. Wills was formerly sheriff of Umatilla Co., Ogn. Thomas Bradley will do the honors behind the bar.

NEW CITY BUILDING.—The city has bought of T. J. V. Clark and A. F. Switzer property on Front street for a new city building. The city clerk advertises in this issue for proposals. The building is to be of brick, two stories in height, thirty feet front and eighty feet deep, and is to be completed this season.

BORN.—At North Yakima, Monday, August 13th, to the wife of Dr. O. M. Graves, a son, weight 11 pounds.

DIED.—At Ellensburg, August 15th, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Newland.

PERSONAL.

Mayor F. R. Reed is on the Sound. Miss Scudder has returned from Alaska. Judge J. R. Lewis, of Seattle, is again in the city. Chief Justice Hanford, of Seattle, is registered at The Yakima. Chas. S. Fee, general passenger agent of the Northern Pacific, is in the city. Cashier W. L. Steinweg, of the First National Bank, is visiting at Whatcom. F. D. Nash returned Tuesday from York state to make this his permanent home. Dr. Walter F. Morrison left on Saturday last for New York via the Short Line and Union Pacific. Dr. and Mrs. Pugsley, parents of J. B. Pugsley, arrived in the city Tuesday from Walla Walla. A marriage license was issued by Auditor Bartholet last Friday to John Welch and Bridget Jordan. Judge Calkins is in the city listening to arguments pro and con in the Ahtanum irrigation cases. Mrs. Geo. B. Ferguson, formerly of Yakima but now of San Francisco, arrived today and is registered at The Yakima. F. D. Shadlow and wife and Harry Hampton and wife are encamped on the upper Natchez, enjoying good fishing and hunting. Geo. W. Goodwin and family and Mrs. J. H. Thomas and family have broken camp at the reservation soda springs and are home again. D. W. Alverson, who was formerly engaged in the tree business in this section, is now running an engine on the Bent road out of Walla Walla. T. J. P. Mulford, of Vance & Mulford, left Wednesday for New York to purchase his fall and winter stock of genteel furnishings. His wife will accompany him on his return. S. M. Abbott and wife, of Barrington, Rhode Island, are registered at The Yakima. Mr. Abbott is the recently appointed superintendent of schools at the Yakima Indian Reservation. John Lawrence, general superintendent of the Sunset Telephone and Telegraph Co., which is the Pacific branch of the Bell Telephone Co., is in the city with a view to the establishing of a telephone system in Yakima.

A PLEA FOR THE CAPITAL.

The City of North Yakima Earnest in Desiring the Honor.

Reasons Why This Town Wants to Be the Place Where the Laws Are to be Enacted.

Correspondence of the Oregonian, August 20: North Yakima aspires to be the capital of Washington. For years the opinion has been general that the permanent seat of government would be located here. The situation is central; by measurement it is found to be the exact center from east to west, and by census it is found to be almost, if not quite, the center of population, and although somewhat south of the center geographically, by making a reasonable allowance for the mountainous country in the north to fill up, it will only place North Yakima that much nearer the center of population, thus making the location a fair one for all sections and all directions in the state. It is obvious that while the argument founded on central location is a strong one, the topographical position of North Yakima furnishes stronger reasons for the establishment of the capital here.

The town is situated in the Yakima valley which is less than 200 miles in length. Through this valley runs the Yakima river, about 100 miles from the mouth of which is located the town, on its left bank. Immediately above the town the Natchez river empties into the Yakima, and the Tietan flows into the Natchez about twelve miles above its confluence with the Yakima, and about four miles below the town the Ahtanum river joins the Yakima. Each of these rivers leads to mountain passes; the Natchez to what is known as the Natchez pass, the very best railroad route across the Cascades, and twenty-eight miles shorter to Puget Sound than the Stampede pass through which the Northern Pacific finds its outlet to the coast. The Tietan leads to the Cowitz and Cispus passes by its north fork; and by its south fork to the Klickitat pass; the Ahtanum opens the way to the Klickitat pass through the Siucoe gap. Thus by these various passes the way is open for steel highways to all parts of Puget Sound, the Columbia river, Vancouver, and Gray's harbor. The Yakima river leads the way to the Stampede pass and the Snoqualmie pass, through the former of which now runs the Northern Pacific railroad (main line). By means of the Northern Pacific railroad North Yakima has now direct communication with Pasco, and by means of the Northern Pacific, O. R. & N., and the Dent systems it has communication with Dayton, Walla Walla and all points south of the Snake river, and also by the Northern Pacific with Spokane Falls, Colfax and all points east of the Columbia river. North Yakima has an available railroad to Priests rapids by way of the Moxee route and thence through Waterville Davenport and the Big Bend country and all points north and northeast; and southward, across the Yakima Indian reservation to Goldendale. These various passes, all available for railroad routes, have all actually been surveyed and tested by the most competent engineers on the coast and are actually existing. It is to be seen that North Yakima is the natural railroad center of the future state. It will be borne in mind that in the construction of railroads through mountainous regions the water courses must be followed up one side and down the other in crossing the ranges, and it is equally true that when you once ascend the stream from the main basin or principal valley of any watershed, you are confined to that stream alone in crossing the mountain ridge where it rises. North Yakima is situated where all the tributaries of a great basin meet, and it is an excellent point for any of them for available railroad lines, but she has the advantage of them all, and no railroad could ever be constructed through any of the passes named and avoid the town.

As it is well known, a railroad has been already projected from North Yakima to the Columbia river, which will connect the counties of Clarke, Klickitat, Cowitz, Pacific and Yakima with Douglas and the Big Bend country, and two corps of engineers are now locating this line. This route is not available for any other town in Central Washington except North Yakima. It has been demonstrated that this route is entirely practicable, and that it runs through a country rich in coal, iron, lime and timber, sufficient to justify the outlay of capital necessary for its construction, and that when once into the great Yakima valley and from thence to the Big Bend country, it will carry the wheat, hops, fruits, livestock and all the products of a rich and varied agricultural region. In this connection it is proper to state that the extent of the country which would be tributary to such a road is but little understood. Immediately surrounding North Yakima are eight valleys converging at this local point. All these will furnish traffic for such a road beyond all present calculations on the subject, and by reference to the map it will be seen that the Big Bend country is one of the most extensive agricultural districts in the future state. Such a railroad route gives the Columbia river countries direct communication with North Yakima and the northeastern Columbia basin, including the Salmon river mines and Spokane Falls. The distance from Vancouver to North Yakima by this route is only a matter of 140 miles.

Here at an elevation of about 1000 feet is North Yakima, a city of 3000 people, with the most delightful climate; a warm though bracing atmosphere, with skies as blue and bright as those of Italy. The surrounding country is rich in its yield of cereals, hops, tobacco, apples, peaches, plums, prunes, grapes, pears and other fruits, and melons not excelled in size and luscious flavor by those of Florida. The town is situated in the valley between the Yakima gap on the north and the Union gap on the south, the two gaps being directly opposite and about seven miles apart, the gaps being nothing more than breaks in the chains of hills through which flows the Yakima.

The town is laid out on a large and generous plan, its broad streets, alleys and numerous reservations for parks and public buildings, and its twenty-five miles of thrifty planted shade trees, now in vigorous growth, extending the entire length of every street; and rippling along by the side of these rows of shade trees, upon each side of the streets, are clear, sparkling streams of water that impart a cooling moisture to the summer air and render the place a clean, healthful and beautiful city. Its water supply, fed by the glaciers and snows of the Cascades, is unlimited, and is of the purest quality. It has been demonstrated here that the parks and public grounds can be cultivated to the same if not greater extent, and made as beautiful as those of the national capital.

As the site for the capital, North Yakima presents the most attractive and agreeable point that could be found; located further east or further west would not only place it away from the common center, but would be impracticable, considering the character of the country in either of these directions. To locate it further south or north would remove it from the thoroughfares and render it less accessible.

It is thus seen that North Yakima, standing as it does, in the center of the state, stands in the gateways of present and prospective travel, and equal distance from the several public institutions thus located and convenient alike to all sections, and fulfills in a remarkable degree every possible requisite and possesses every argument in its favor.

Shipping Notes.—Yakima is now shipping a car load of hay daily to the Sound. One or two car loads of ice are shipped weekly from Yakima to Tacoma. Next week sixteen car loads of sheep will be shipped from this point to Agent Humphrey reports that large quantities of tomatoes and vegetables of all kinds, and fruits, are being daily shipped from Yakima, principally to the various points in Kittitas county and to the Sound. Up to this date nineteen car loads of melons have been shipped from Yakima. Of this number, one was billed to Portland, one to Spokane Falls, one to Ellensburg, one to Roslyn, and the balance to Tacoma and Seattle. These shipments do not include the large number shipped in crates.

Treasurer's notice.—Notice is hereby given that I have on hand sufficient funds to redeem Yakima county warrant No. 508 issued in April, 1888. Interest will cease on the same from and after this date. G. W. CARY, County Treasurer, North Yakima, August 22, 1889. LOCAL RESOLUTIONS.—Buy your jewelry at H. Kuechler's. The republican primaries will be held Saturday. A. L. Shriver has made application to become engineer of the new steam fire engine. Service in St. Michael's church next Sunday at 3:30 p. m., by Rev. R. D. Nevius. The assessment of Yakima property for 1889 exceeds that of 1888 by nearly a million dollars. The plans of the new city hall building were drawn in Tacoma and they indicate a very handsome building. Hop growers should have their hop tickets printed at the Herald office. Good work and reasonable prices. P. Sanford Burke is an aspirant for the office of agent of the Yakima Indian Reservation to succeed Capt. Priestley. The city council is arranging to have two cisterns, with a capacity of 3,000 gallons each, built for fire protection. Rev. J. T. Eshelman will be home this week and services will be resumed Sunday evening, at the Christian church. Prof. L. E. Follansbee will lecture at the Presbyterian Church Sunday evening next. Subject, "The Great Contest." Admission free. The plans of the new school house, drawn by Architect Nestor, of Seattle, have been received by the directors who are highly pleased with them. Register Krutz has moved into the Sinclair house pending the building of his own residence on the bench west of the track. The present location of F. C. Keifer, who worked in Yakima during the past summer, is wanted. His wife is in destitute circumstances in the east and needs his assistance. Messrs. Shandy & Cadwell have abandoned their project of building a four-story hotel in Ellensburg, about which the telegraph wires have been burdened of late. Jim McCann, a tramp, is now enjoying a needed respite from skinning for grub in the city jail. He topped off a "hand-out" with a watermelon from S. J. Lowe's melon patch, for which Judge Weed granted him five days. The coroner's jury at Troutman, who sat upon the body of Fred J. Roslyn, who was lynched after shooting Thomas Thomas, brought in a verdict of "hanged by an unknown mob." The general verdict is that it served him right. Col. R. B. Kinne is assistant superintendent of the Cowychee Sunday schools, and the Herald is pained to hear it cruelly intimated that he has all he can do to refrain from running in a little bit of Ingersollism on his credulous scholars.
