Barney's Ideal Orchard Coal Heater

MORE HEAT FOR LESS FUEL COST.
 No oil tanks, no cistern, no pumps to buy. It takes 175 gallons of crude, not distillate, gas, smudge or partially refined to equal the fuel energy of one ton of coal, $5.50 against $10.50.
 Ninety per cent of Grand Valley of Colorado's fruit crop, amounting to $3,000,000, was saved with coal heaters, not oil.
 To give you the true facts of the case we submit a part of a list of over 3,000 names who know coal is cheapest and best.
 Palisade, Colo., January 25, 1910.
 The Ideal Orchard Heater Co., Grand Junction, Colo.
 Gentlemen: I have been traveling over this entire valley, from one end to the other, with the object in view of finding out just what the growers would use to heat their orchards with this spring, and what they thought of the two fuels, coal and oil. I have found no grower who used COAL to fire with last season that will abandon his coal heaters. I found the sentiment almost entirely in favor of coal for heating. Less than 5 per cent, I believe, will use oil. I found in different places in the valley where oil was used to fire with the last two seasons the crops were not nearly as heavy the past year as where coal was used to save the crop. I also found where oil was used in some orchards many of the lower branches had been burned.
 Yours truly,
 J. W. YOUNGEL
 We, the undersigned, have not abandoned our coal heaters for oil pots, but will continue to use them, believing coal to be the best fuel.
 Any of these or any of 300 other names we have will gladly answer any of your letters. If you will enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope. All are in the Grand Valley of Colorado.
 Grand Junction, Colo.—Z. E. McClure, Geo. D. Simons, J. F. Spencer, M. P. Smith, Elmer H. Harris.
 Palisade, Colo.—H. J. V. Box A. Sneed, G. W. Bowman, E. P. Updegraff, W. D. Newton.
 Fruita, Colo.—Chas. Whitford, L. C. Jones, W. L. Merryfield, M. Z. D. Page, J. H. Steverson.
 Clifton, Colo.—J. Schlenker, Louis Strickman, Day Bros., E. R. Anderson, W. C. Dittman et al.
 There is a reason why these people prefer coal to oil. Write the Grand Valley National Bank which did the heater business.
