Mrs. Peter Bach of Fruitvale, who has been visiting her son in Tacoma, returned to a business meeting of the Masonic Temple on Tuesday at which matters connected with the proposed new building were discussed.

A number of people both the upper and lower parts of the valley came to North Yakima Tuesday to hear the singing of Madame Schumann-Heink and were disappointed because of the postponement of her appearance at her appearance here. "Whoopie, real air!" shouted a young lady of the "Stubbson" Cider-cumpany as she stepped out her car at the North Yakima station Tuesday. That's the kind of booster the Commercial club secretary should invite to scatter the glad tidings.

D. S. Siegrist left North Yakima for Seattle Tuesday on a business trip.

Parker is to do without a license for the present. W. F. McNatt on Tuesday withdrew his application for a license before it got before the county commissioners for action. He stated that he had found considerable opposition to the request and that rather than have a controversy he would give up his petition.

C. H. Furman of Zillah was a North Yakima visitor Tuesday.

Instruments recorded on the fee book of the county auditor Tuesday numbered 218, probably the biggest in point of number the office has ever had in a single day. There were many stock subscriptions and contracts with the Sunnyside Water Users association.

King & Presson, Inc., is the name of a new Yakima county corporation with a capital stock of $6000, the incorporators being Arthur King, A. C. Presson and Lois E. King. The company will do a general merchandise, real estate, manufacturing and brokerage business at Mabton.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Lake, 915 North Front street, a daughter, Henry C. Kreeps, who recently received a patent on concrete railroad tie left Tuesday for Seattle, where he will get out two orders given him for experimental purposes by two different railroads. The tie according to the inventor promises to do away with the old wooden tie, it being so much more durable and secure. The tie is made of reinforced concrete and appears most practicable.

Work is to be resumed on the gravelling of the south Nob Hill road at which Contractor Clarkson was at work when the cold weather closed in. That portion of the road over which he had worked has been in excellent condition all spring and is in marked contrast with the remainder, on which work will begin as soon as practicable.

series of meetings in the Fairview Methodist chapel. Dr. Webb says that interest is running high and attendance is increasing every night.

Reports that the Fruitvale street car line is to be operated at once are incorrect. It will be two or three weeks, according to Engineer Kenly, before cars can be run regularly over the line.

A. C. Wall and family have returned to their Solah home from Seattle, where they spent the winter.

Arthur and Jos. Bellerean, two of Yakima's prominent young men, left for Los Angeles, Cal., yesterday morning. Arthur has been in poor health for some time and thought a change in climate would benefit him. Many of his friends were at the train when he left who regretted his departure and hope to see him back again soon and in good health.

Dr. S. M. Martin, pastor of the Christian church, announces that the regular evangelistic services will resume tonight and will continue throughout the week with the exception of Friday night, which will be given to the Y. M. C. A.

A. N. Currie and wife, of Naches City are visitors in the city today.

J. A. Collins, right-of-way man for the North Coast railroad is in North Yakima on matters of business pertaining to his company.

Dr. S. M. Martin, speaking at the Christian church Sunday night, declared "dancing to be iniquitous" and the ballroom "the recruiting station for brothels." "Cards are the foundation of gambling," he said. He endorsed the theaters if the plays are of a high moral type.

James C. Berry has sold his ranch at Blackrock to Henry A. Hall for $4000. It comprises the northeast quarter of section 22-12-22.

Z. Y. Coleman, of Toppensish, was a North Yakima visitor Monday. He has leased for two years lot 5, block 2, Toppensish Land company's first addition to Toppensish at a monthly rental of $50.

Mrs. C. E. Wheeler of Ellensburg is in North Yakima visiting her sister Mrs. A. C. Steinman.

Dr. Granville Lowther, who has been in the states of New York, Ohio, Illinois and Kansas on business in Seattle and expects to return to North Yakima in a day or two.

Bruce Wees of Parker was in North Yakima Monday and says everyone is busy at Parker. Mr. Wees has an orchard of dwarf pears to come into bearing this year.

Rev. A. W. Lanningham of North Yakima was in Kennewick Sunday and preached to the Baptist and Presbyterian congregations in the morning and to a union service at the Methodist church in the evening. At the latter service he showed stereopticon views. His services were in the interest of the Washington Children's Home and were very successful. On Sunday next Mr. Lanningham will be at Pasco.

Mrs. Blair, who is in Tacoma visiting her brother-in-law, is expected home soon.

Albert Gammons is sick with appendicitis and may have to undergo an operation.

Mr. Harlow of North Yakima was out on the White Birch yesterday.

Miss May Mullen was the guest of Mamie Stump Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. V. E. Newman and Mr. and Mrs. George Nelson entertained a few friends at the home of the former last Tuesday, February 22.

DIGNIFIED FINANCIER HELD IN JAIL AS CROOK

Col. Garland, Friend of Noted Men, Charged With Larceny in Coal Land Stock Deal in King County.

SEATTLE, Feb. 23.—Is Col. William H. Garland, a white-haired, dignified prisoner in the county jail, a crook, a fool or a financier?

With the grand manner of high finance, the suavity of a man of the world, and the culture of one born and bred to the purple, Col. Garland, 65 years old, languished genially in the county jail, charged with grand larceny. The colonel was arrested yesterday by Deputy Sheriffs Freeman and Hill, and instead of spending the night in his luxurious suite in the New Washington, occupied a cot in the county jail.

The grand larceny charge involves the selling of coal stock in a non-existing coal mine to Job L. Beardslee, a Chehalis county farmer, for $1000.

The colonel sold stock in the Apex Coal company, what the Apex Coal company amounts to is his destiny. The prosecuting witness claims that Apex company owns nothing; the colonel says it owns a lease on Chehalis county coal lands and has an interest in the Huntington mine at Castle Rock. In part of the colonel's story is true he was probably guilty of nothing more than foolish finance. If it is true, he is a financier of a high rank.

Has Wealthy Friends.

And the colonel speaks casually of his intimate friendship with President McKinley and shows personal letters from Senator Root of New York and F. A. Vanderbilt, president of the National City bank of New York, one of the foremost financiers of the world. To his former business associates he told of vast coal land holdings in West Virginia with Senator E. J. Watkins and Henry Gasaway Davis, of Equitable insurance fame; of coal lands next to the famous Dunsuir property in British Columbia; of Lewis county coal lands and valuable holdings in the Coos Bay country.

So far as can be learned, the colonel hasn't got a cent in the world. His actual tangible assets consist of a new ledger and a cash book, probably worth $3. Yet he has been living at the new Washington hotel and entertaining his guests royally.

Takes It Calmly.

Col. Garland takes his arrest with the calmness of a man unaccustomed to petty annoyances. His snow-white hair is neatly parted, his well-fitting, light-colored suit and tie are adjusted himself to the routine of the jail like a philosopher above noticing such little inconveniences. He professes ignorance of why he should be arrested, and surmises that it is all a part of the colonel's scheme to keep him from shipping coal into the local market.

His personal possessions are varied and of small value, even to several thousand dollars in Confederate money which the deputy sheriffs found in his room. The colonel declares that this was his "dash roll," but the colonel professes to be ignorant of the meaning of the term.

Garland's local company was known as the Apex Coal company, which he incorporated with A. J. Dillon of Portland and H. P. J. Dickson of Seattle. The company has had a rather stormy career to date, starting in the American Bank building, from which it was forced to move. Next it went to the century building, until used by a local newspaper for advertising. The suit rendered the company homeless.

It was at this stage that Chet Belding and Capt. C. B. Wood met the colonel offstage. They gave him desk room in the Washington building, and a short time he began to tell glowing tales of his success, and that they quit their secret service business and get rich with him. He talked of hundreds of thousands of dollars as glibly as the ordinary man does of pennies.

He Moved Again.

So they he and Wood left. Leary building, Belding and Wood office, office furniture and the colonel still talking in large amounts. Occasionally the colonel found it necessary to borrow money, but was always prompt in his payment. Then he had a little personal trouble, his wife left him and secured a divorce in Portland. He bore up bravely under this and continued his great plans.

Puzzling Financial Deals.

Just what the colonel was driving at financially is hard to determine, as his business affairs are highly complicated. So far as can be learned his only coal land possession was an unassigned option on certain coal lands in Lewis county, which option would become valid on the payment of $5000. It is probable that the colonel was careless about his methods of raising the money, but Beardslee, the complaining victim, declares that the Lewis coal lands are valuable.

Beardslee saw the ad for a yard man to handle coal. He answered it and met the colonel. The colonel assured him that his Vancouver coal mines were on the verge of shipping three barges a day to Seattle. Beardslee was to receive $100 a month. He invested $1000 and now holds a nicely engraved stock certificate which holds a promise of 15 per cent dividends. Garland signed the certificate as president and Conrad Clive of Portland as secretary. Garland also told Beardslee of Coos Bay coal lands and a line of steamers to Portland.

W. L. STEINWEG BACK FROM LOS ANGELES

Says People of San Francisco Are Showing Great Resourcefulness in Up-Building City.

W. L. Steinweg has returned to North Yakima from California, where, however, he was unfortunate in being in ill health during the greater part of his visit. He was, therefore, unable to do many of the things he had planned on to do with some of those he had expected to meet. Mr. Steinweg says that he was told in California that winter tourists leave about $17,000,000 in that state annually and that Los Angeles and vicinity get about $14,000,000 of this amount. It is fairly earned however as every effort is made to cater to the winter travellers and there is nothing in the shape of a holdup to be found anywhere.

San Francisco a Surprise.

San Francisco was a surprise to Mr. Steinweg. He was there a year ago and was then astonished at the strides it had made. Since his previous visit, which was immediately after the fire, he was more astonished this time at the change one year had wrought in the city. The people there are building beautiful, modern and substantial city.

Mr. Steinweg met Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Colburn at Los Angeles. At Monrovia he visited along with those named above the home of Dan Libby, formerly of North Yakima and saw his orange trees. He met other people from this section.

Returning to this city from Seattle, where Mrs. Steinweg remained for a brief visit, Mr. Steinweg was a passenger on a train which ran into a man this side of Easton. The man was heavily bundled up and had his cap down over his ears. He was carrying snowshoes and declared that he had not heard the train. He was left in hospital at Cle Elum. The extent of his injuries was unknown.

WENATCHEE, Feb. 23.—Five attorneys representing the Strahorn interest and an unknown number representing the Columbia Development company and various land owners along the Columbia river in the vicinity of Priest Rapids, met in a night session at Judge Steiner's court, Ephrata, recently to settle the question about whether the Strahorn interests or the Columbia Development company should have the right of way to construct water power at Priest Rapids and the privilege of conducting the condemnation suits. There appeared to be no difference between the Strahorn and Hanford interests. The Strahorn crowd took the part of intervenors while the Columbia Development company were the original claimants. During the meeting a sum of money was paid by the representatives of the "Great Silence" that effectually satisfied the Columbia Development company.

Maneuvering between these great interests has been going on for some time and it was thought that there would be a great fight in the courts. However, the Strahorn characteristics was again in evidence and the forces came together in the stillness of the night. They met and made a compromise in the court house at Ephrata.

The engineer for the Strahorn people stated that the canal which they will take out from the river will carry the water eight miles, where a 72-foot fall will be had, and a plant installed that will develop 60,000 horsepower of electricity. By this power water will be pumped up onto the bench lands above, where a vast acreage will be irrigated. The engineer will continue after making his 72-foot plunge through the turbines, for nine miles on down the river to Pasco and will enclose within its embrace 150,000 acres along the Columbia river. It was stated by the engineer that the canal would have a minimum depth of 20 feet and that eventually locks would be put in at the lower end of the first eight miles and boats would be diverted through it and back into the river at the upper end of the rapids. This will solve the problem of navigation near Priest Rapids.

Fifty-nine condemnation suits were started in the courts at Ephrata also, but about half of them were compromised, too, so that from all appearances the Strahorn interests will soon have the undisputed right of way up the river. These facts make it impossible to doubt that the North Coast railroad company means business.

Enormous Plant Contemplated.

The plant contemplated by the Strahorn interests is an enormous one above Priest Rapids. It is a natural site for an intake, and from the head of the falls the Columbia Valley Reclamation company, or the Strahorn interests, ask for a right of way 1000 feet wide and eight miles in length. This right of way the engineers have the plan for a canal with a bottom 100 feet in width. In many places the cut will be 60 feet in depth and at the minimum stage the canal will carry 20 feet of water, making it practically a good sized river. At the end of the eight miles it will have a fall of 72 feet. This will generate 60,000 horsepower of electrical energy. The water will then be diverted into another canal which will run eight miles before being returned to the river and water to be transported of boats by a system of locks. Priest Rapids is the greatest obstacle to the navigation of the lower Columbia river, and the officers of the Columbia Valley Reclamation company have in view the elimination of this obstacle by means of the big canal. The purchase of the right of the Columbia Development company by Strahorn and the outlay of $100,000 in settlement of the rights of this company means that the company desires to save a litigation that would last at least a year and enable the company to proceed with the work immediately. The company is sparing no money in the settlement of the rights of the settlers damaged by the canal. One day this week in the court at Ephrata Attorney Danson, representing the Strahorn interests, made a settlement with a young man who had homesteaded land along the rapids for $5000. This was considered quite a sum for the man's rights, but this shows the desire on the part of the company to settle its property settlements as quickly as possible.

The world famous rifle shot who holds the championship record of 100 pigeons in 100 consecutive shots is living at Lincoln, Ill. Recently interviewed, he said: "I have suffered a long time with kidney and bladder trouble and have used several well known kidney medicines, but of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley's Kidney Pills. Before I used Foley's Kidney Pills I was subjected to severe aches and pains in my kidneys with suppression and oftentimes a cloudy voiding. With the use of the pills in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley's Kidney Pills and felt 100 per cent better. I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and once more feel like my own self. All this I owe solely to Foley's Kidney Pills and always recommend them to my fellow sufferers." PEACHES MADE HIM RICH.

Have you any of the Hale's Early peaches in your orchard. If you have you will be interested in the story of the man who developed and named the peach. J. H. Hale got his start in life as a boy by carrying fruit and garden truck in baskets to Hartford, Conn., the nearest large town to his home. He sold his produce from house to house. By and by he had enough money to plant a little orchard of his own in the suburbs of Hartford, on land which everybody said wasn't good for anything. Hale thought differently and when his peach orchard grew from one acre to a hundred acres and his income from the peaches to thousands of dollars a year, people realized that they had made a mistake and that young Hale was right.

How often do you eat this food?

A short time ago there appeared in the columns of one of the prominent magazines an article on building brain and muscle by the proper selection of the foods you eat.

A large number of people were surprised to find oatmeal placed at the top of the list of foods recommended; but if the article had appeared in an English or Scotch paper every reader would have expected to see first place given to good oatmeal.

As a matter of fact Great Britain and Europe come to us for tremendous quantities of Quaker Oats because it represents to them perfect food, being the richest in flavor and best in cleanliness and purity, of all oatmeal.

Americans should eat more Quaker Oats; the result will soon show themselves in improved conditions of health and strength.

DUMMETT AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Three Score Business Men Greet Belated Traveler at Luncheon in Banquet Hall—Makes Strong Plea for Financial Support.

J. A. Dummett, belated but cheerful, arrived in the city Sunday night, and Monday took up that part of the program which was scheduled for that day. The list of names of business men who attended the luncheon yesterday at the Y. M. C. A. banquet rooms contains nearly all the most prominent business men of this city. Between fifty and seventy-five people took part in the reception, which was later conceded to have accomplished more good in concrete form than any similar meeting that has ever been held in this city, as it will result in what has been striven for by the well wishers of the institution for some time past, that is, a contributing membership.

The chief speaker of the luncheon, Mr. Dummett, entertained his auditors with an account of his experiences as an association worker covering a period of thirty years, ten of which were spent as traveling secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in the north-west. Many anecdotes were related in their character and the relation of one in particular brought tears to the eyes of some. Mr. Dummett told of an experience he had in an eastern town which had a wooden building entirely inadequate to house the growing youth of the town. He was, nevertheless, was a home to the boys where they could indulge in pastimes so dear to the heart of healthy children. In this town was a wealthy man whose interest in the association could not be moved out of a spirit of indifference, it being evident that he tolerated rather than believed in the good it was accomplishing. This man had two young sons who spent the greater part of their recreation hours in the building. Shortly after Mr. Dummett had departed from the town on one of his regular visits he received a telegram that the Y. M. C. A. had burned to the ground. He returned to the place and among the first to greet him on his return was the father of the two boys who assured him that he would help build a new home for the institution. Greatly surprised and curious at such a sudden change of heart Mr. Dummett soon discovered the reason. The ruins of the old building were still smoking when this man scattered around to note the damage. He found his two boys there picking up beloved pieces of paraphernalia that had long known the touch of their little hands in the "old gym." Big tears were running down their faces and the father watching them became touched with their childish grief. The result was a big, fine building.

Another instance the speaker cited was that of W. M. Ladd, a banker of Portland, Ore., who, wishing to do something for the youth of his city, built a fine club house. There were few restrictions placed on the conduct of the place, nearly every form of diversion common to a regular club being permitted except that of drinking. With no guiding hand, however, youthful impulses rule after rule was laid on the shelf until the club resolved itself into a place for bicycle meets and card games, even drinks were surreptitiously brought into the building from the rear. Mr. Ladd, learning how his cherished hope for the betterment of the young man was being abused, turned his attention to the then building Y. M. C. A. After several visits to the rooms of the association during the evening he decided that he had found a place where his money would return the interest he had sought. As a result his support and influence soon gave the Y. M. C. A. of that city a fine home, which has outgrown itself three times since it was organized.

The speaker made a strong plea for what is known as a contributing membership—business men who pledge themselves for certain amounts annually. He said it is a well known fact no Y. M. C. A. is self-supporting because the moment it becomes so it loses its influence in its own peculiar field of moral labor.

When Mr. Dummett had finished his address he was given a hearty vote of thanks by the business men present.

Following the principal speaker, Rev. E. A. King gave a short address on his interest in the work of the institution and said that when he was deciding between two calls that were offered him, before he came here, he was largely influenced in making North Yakima his choice because of the fact that he learned that the Y. M. C. A. of this city was a flourishing association, this in spite of the fact that the other call was perhaps in other ways more desirable.

shifts in an effort to save those who may possibly be alive beneath the crush of snow and timbers.

At Burke, where the second slide occurred, five are known to be dead and badly injured. Such is the chaotic condition there, however, that the list is not believed to be complete. At Carbonate hill where the third slide occurred, two are dead and half a dozen or more are injured. It is not known how many more are beneath the surface. The fourth slide at North Franklin mine near Burke is the place of a peculiar feat. It passed out over 100 yards from a group of men containing many miners and their families. At Dorsey, the fifth slide is reported to have caused the death of two unidentified men, and at Adair a third unidentified man is reported to have been killed by the sixth slide.

How often do you eat this food?

A short time ago there appeared in the columns of one of the prominent magazines an article on building brain and muscle by the proper selection of the foods you eat.

A large number of people were surprised to find oatmeal placed at the top of the list of foods recommended; but if the article had appeared in an English or Scotch paper every reader would have expected to see first place given to good oatmeal.

As a matter of fact Great Britain and Europe come to us for tremendous quantities of Quaker Oats because it represents to them perfect food, being the richest in flavor and best in cleanliness and purity, of all oatmeal.

Americans should eat more Quaker Oats; the result will soon show themselves in improved conditions of health and strength.

Habitual Constipation

May be permanently overcome by proper personal efforts with the assistance of the one truly beneficial laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs. Elixir of Senna, which enables one to form regular habits daily so that assistance to nature may be gradually dispensed with when no longer needed, as the best of remedies when required are to assist nature and not to supplant the natural functions, which must depend ultimately upon proper nourishment, proper efforts, and right living generally. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine.

PEACHES MADE HIM RICH.

Have you any of the Hale's Early peaches in your orchard. If you have you will be interested in the story of the man who developed and named the peach. J. H. Hale got his start in life as a boy by carrying fruit and garden truck in baskets to Hartford, Conn., the nearest large town to his home. He sold his produce from house to house. By and by he had enough money to plant a little orchard of his own in the suburbs of Hartford, on land which everybody said wasn't good for anything. Hale thought differently and when his peach orchard grew from one acre to a hundred acres and his income from the peaches to thousands of dollars a year, people realized that they had made a mistake and that young Hale was right.

Coughs That Hang On.

Coughs that start in the fall and hang on until spring are sure trouble breeders unless checked and cured. Bronchitis, pneumonia and consumption are the direct result. Foley's Honey and Tar cures the cough, stops the hard breathing and heals and soothes the inflamed air passages. Refuse substitutes. North Yakima Drug Store.
