LONDON'S DIALECT.
A Perfectly Recognizable Child of the Old Kentish Tongue.

In a little book entitled "London's Dialect" Mr. Mackenzie Macbride challenges the view expressed by the education department of the London county council that "there is no London dialect of reputable antecedents and origin," and that "the cockney mode of speech is a modern corruption."

He points out that the London dialect, especially on the south side of the Thames, is a perfectly recognizable child of the old Kentish tongue, to which we owe our earliest written literature, "Thet" for "that," "benk" for "bank," "keb" for "cab," are remnants of the old Kentish mode of pronunciation.

In the Kentish dialect "that" was spelled "thet" as early as A. D. 825. The use of "t" for "a," as in "tidy," was common from the Trent to the Thames in Elizabeth's time, and John Stow, writing in 1580, gives us "twyft" for "halfwit." The use of "an" for "an" in such cockneyisms as "telegraph" is of very old origin, and "abakt" and "ahtside" are both warranted by ancient use. As for "kep" and "slep" without the final "t," they are really uncorrupted words, the "t" being an intruder of late date.

TORTURE BY WATER.
The Third Degree in Sorcery Cases in Louis XIV's Time.

One of the methods adopted by Louis XIV. to purge his kingdom of sorcery was the "question ordinaire." This, according to G. Duval in "Shadows of Old Paris," consisted in having ten pints of water poured into the body.

"The executioner placed the prisoner in a recumbent position, firmly tied upon a table. A block was slipped under the loins, so that the chest and stomach were thrown outward and upward, while the contents of a measure of two pints were forced by means of a hose down the victim's mouth. If he resisted his nose was held until he opened his teeth to breathe. After every two pint measure he was given a few seconds' rest and the opportunity to confess. If he continued his denial the question was reapplied until the whole ten pints had been consumed."

"In the 'question extraordinary' the quantity administered was augmented to twenty pints. The swelling caused by this unnatural amount of liquid in the body produced the most acute agony."

Knew the Risks.
Chloe, a huge black codd of middle age, came to her mistress one day with the announcement that she was about to be married. Regretting the loss of an excellent cook and having real interest in Chloe's welfare, her mistress said:

"I hope, Chloe, you appreciate the fact that marriage is a serious thing and you have considered carefully in regard to the step you are about to take. Marriage brings great responsibility."

"Deed it does, ma'am!" said Chloe, with emphasis. "I reckon I know, for I's been mah'led fo' times. I know just what reeks yo' takes when yo' done git mah'led. My last divo'ce cost me twenty-five dollars, but I made him pay half of it. Yo' nevah know what yo' is gittin' into when yo' gits mah'led."-Washington Star.

Ruins of Yucatan.
The explorations of Arthur Diosy in Yucatan brought to light many new facts about the stupendous ruins which stretch through the country in a chain 300 miles long. The most amazing thing about these ruins, according to Mr. Diosy, is that the people who possessed such high architectural skill and the knowledge of rich and graceful decorative arts, belonged to the stone age and had no knowledge of metals. These wonders in stone were carved with flint implements and a civilization which has been
