Spirit Rousers
By CHARLES PERRY TAYLOR
Secy. Washington State Federation of Labor.

Friends, countrymen and unionists! Your attention, please. What ails you males? Upon the petitions to refer to voters The anti-picketing bill Three-fourths of signers are women. For the love of Mike, Must we let the women fight our battles? Shame on us! Now give heed to this also: Last year the Stop-Look-Listeners Fought us. By a scratch only we got through. Next year the same gang of union haters, Under some name, Will fight us tooth and nail. Shall we be licked? Are we going to shoulder our burden On the ladies? Most unions are composed of males— "Such as they are, And what there is of them." We must have a labor movement next year To kill the anti-picket bill And kill it right. We need such a labor movement now. Not all the political uplifters Are for us; Not by a jugful! Some of them have secret fish to fry. Get busy getting members. Get busy getting affiliations. State Federation, Central Council, Label Leagues— All need you. We ought to beat that law Two to one. We will never do it if we shirk. Women help because they fear nothing— Neither God, man, nor devil. I'm married, so I know. Next year will be no political picnic; It will be no industrial paradise; It will be no pink tea. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty— Social, industrial, religious, political. Liberty we must not lose. Wake up, boys! Shall we be licked? Somebody once said "God hates a coward." Somebody, for once, told truth. But what is cowardice? Think you the blatant war howlers Are courageous? They wouldn't risk their own skins To save a universe. Have you ever noticed In the labor movement The man who fears to "get in bad"? Ever seen the chameleon Who makes a wondrous noise When he knows his subject is popular? But who is silence itself When his views are unpopular? He isn't a man at all; He is a photograph of a male. "Don't get in bad." Rarely do I lose my temper, But when some insignificant Shrimp of mentality Makes that crack to me, I wish I were Everett True So I could break an umbrella On his back. It takes more courage to oppose war In these days Than to scream for a big army. It takes more courage to tell men They must fight for themselves Than it does to roast their employers. It is popular to cuss the rich. You can get lots of applause, even cheers, When you damn Rockefeller. But when you ask the workers To build up a strong labor movement, To create a defense fund Through a system of high dues, To really do something for themselves Through collective action, Collective bargaining and unionism, There is a silence in some labor halls Like a cemetery. Let us be men, Let us have organizations of labor Invincible. Let us be courageous enough To be for peace in a warlike age. Let us make our unions strong, So we will not have to die first To glimpse Paradise. We want the right because it is right. "God hates a coward." To hell with popularity!

The drill team of the W. O. W. have the grounds at Silver Lake for a picnic Sunday. They will have boating, bathing and dancing with prizes for sports on the water. adv.

A NATION'S WORST ENEMY

Referring to the agitation prevailing in the early '90's for military "preparedness," Henry George said in his "Protection or Free Trade":

"The dangers to the republic come not from without, but from within. What menaces her safety is no armada launched from European shores, but the gathering cloud of tramps in her own highways. That Krupp is casting monstrous cannon, and that in Cherbourg and Woolwich projectiles of unheard of destructiveness are being stored, need not alarm her, but there is black omen in the fact that Pennsylvania miners are working for 65 cents a day. No triumphant invader can tread our soil till the blight of 'great estates' has brought 'failure of the crop men.'"

Fortunately we have kept out of any war serious enough to prove the truth of George's statement. But the conditions which bring "failure of the crop of men" exist in Great Britain to an even greater extent than here, and now that Great Britain is at war the consequences are evident. And England had warning of this fully 265 years ago. Samuel Milliken, a writer in the Philadelphia Record, tells the following:

Under date of March 26, 1650, Gerard Winstanley, leader of the "digger" movement in the day of the Commonwealth, demanding that the poor of England should have the right and freedom to dig and plant unused land, prophesied happy effects to follow from a recognition of this right. He said: "This Commonwealth's freedom will unite the hearts of Englishmen together in love; so that if a foreign enemy endeavor to come in, we shall all with joint consent rise up together to defend our inheritance, and shall be true one to another. Whereas now the poor see if they fight and should conquer the enemy, yet either they or their children are likely to be slaves still, for the gentry will have all. And this is the cause why many run away and fail our armies in the time of need. And so through the gentry's hardness of heart against the poor the land may be left to a foreign enemy for want of the poor's love sticking to them. For, say they, we can as well live under a foreign enemy, working for day wages, as under our own brethren, with whom we ought to have equal freedom by the law of righteousness."

Winstanley's advice was ignored. England allowed her worst enemy, the institution of landlordism, to flourish unmolested within her borders. She is now at war with a foreign enemy, a far less dangerous foe than landlordism. She has undertaken the foreign war without trying to first put an end to the domestic enemy, and the consequences are not encouraging. Will the United States profit by the lessons of the present conflict? Answer, NO!
