SAFEGUARDING HUMAN LIFE

At a regular meeting of the Bronx Board of Business Agents of the New York Building Trades Council, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, the twelve lives that were lost in the Diamond factory fire, Brooklyn, N. Y., November 6, 1915, were sacrificed to the prevailing idea that safety from fire is assured more by exits than by recognized methods of controlling incipient fires; and

WHEREAS, investigation reveals that the unfortunate workmen and workwomen were victims of official negligence—the Diamond factory was known to be unsafe, the owner was not compelled to make it safe and such easily accomplished means of protection as fire alarm and automatic sprinkler systems were ignored; and that the state and city government is impotent to protect from wholesale slaughter the lives of people striving hard for their sustenance in the factories of this great state—a severe indictment of our laws and their administration; and

WHEREAS, the safety of working people from horrible and heart-rending murders in fire-trap factories and shops is not assured by laws that allow a conflict of authority and make troublesome the fixing of responsibility for fire disasters; laws admitted difficult to comply with and openly violated; laws that ignore the practical achievements in the science of fire control; laws that require firemen to risk their lives in fighting easily preventable fires; laws that relieve employers of the responsibility of protecting the lives of workers and impose it, not upon the state, but upon the working people by requiring them to seek safety outside of buildings instead of being under protection within; and

WHEREAS, the precious lives lost in the Diamond factory fire would have been saved if the fire had been controlled in its incipency either by automatic sprinklers or by the fire department quickly responding to an automatic fire alarm or if it had been confined to the place of origin by properly enclosed stairways which would have favored safe escape, means of safety which have been established in tens of thousands of factories in North America by employers who assume the responsibility for the safety of workers, especially automatic sprinkler protection which gives immunity from the perils of fire and the fearful consequences to more than 9,000,000 working people and their dependents for which requirements in the law would not impose hardships upon property owners but instead would yield financial benefits; therefore

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Bronx Board of Business Agents of the New York Building Trades Council ask for a more competent enforcement of existing laws; for an intelligent and thorough revision of the Industrial Commission's inspection system; and that the Industrial Commission give more consideration to the practical methods of controlling incipient fires, especially automatic sprinkler protection; and give attention to the Wisconsin Industrial Commission's plan of issuing orders; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, That the legislature of the state of New York in its next session clear up conflicting laws, modify them to include the practical essentials of fire control, such as have been established in the factories and shops of employers who assume the responsibility for the safety of workers, and to fix definitely upon employers the responsibility for fire disasters, thus relieving working people of the necessity of earning their bread at the peril of their lives; and

RESOLVED FURTHER, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the governor of the state of New York, the mayor of the city of New York, the presidents of the boroughs of the city of New York, the president of the board of aldermen of the city of New York, the coroner and district attorney of the borough of Brooklyn, the members of the Industrial Council of the Department of Labor of New York state, the Industrial Commission of the Department of Labor, and to representative newspapers.

KNEW HUMAN NATURE

"That man wants his photographs to look as natural as possible," said the assistant to the proprietor of the studio.

"Then make it as handsome as you can," came the quick reply.

"But—but he's awfully ugly, and insists he doesn't want the portrait to flatter him at all."

"He won't think it flatters him," said the proprietor knowingly. "He'll only feel sure that at last some one has managed to catch him looking just right."—Answers.

Greece is like the fellow who prefers being called a coward to having it said of him, "Doesn't he look natural?"—Albany Journal.

"VIA WIRELESS"

A GOLD ROOSTER PLAY—IN FIVE PARTS—FEATURING
GAIL KANE AND BRUCE MCRAE AND AN ALL STAR CAST

Marsh, a draughtsman in a gun factory of John Durant, is swindled by Edward Pinkney, Durant's general manager, out of the huge royalty due on a gun of Marsh's invention, should it prove a success. Pinkney loves Frances Durant, but is far outwitted by Lieut. Sommers, U. S. N. Sommers has also invented a gun which he gives to be cast to the Durant Iron Works and which, if successful, will do Pinkney out of his expected graft on the Marsh invention. Here follows a mass of dramatic complications as the plot gradually develops to its amazing end.
