The Tip and Its Uses

In the interest of reform Andrew Carnegie has abolished the custom of "tipping" among the servants of his household at Skibo castle. This is an especially nifty piece of business, because, in Europe, the giving of "tips" has become a social custom, and it is almost as old and as firmly entrenched as society itself.

In Georgia an Antitipping society has been organized, and it is proposed to secure 100,000 members, who will not give "tips" under any circumstances.

Until the feeling of liberality that comes with prosperity can be stifled in mankind, or until those who serve in the many walks of life where "tips" are now scattered, can be made to feel that a gift is degrading and immoral, the "tip" will stay.

The path of the man who travels, who holds up his chin arrogantly and refuses to recognize the usefulness of the "tip," is strewn with thorns. Very likely he gets all that he pays for. The barber shaves him well; the porter breaks no rule of the Pullman company; the waiter fills his order.

But humanity wants more than it pays for. It yearns for the little comforts, the extra dabs with the whisk-broom, the extreme deference that makes the chest swell, and forces the man to believe that he is rather an important personage, after all. It wants a soft pillow, without the trouble of asking for it, and expects the porter to see that the shade shuts out the glare of the sun at the right time. In other words, the average traveler wants to be taken care of just as if he was the only person on the train, or the sole guest in the hotel. He wants the help to be interested in him.

So, because he is gifted with horse sense, he drops an occasional quarter to a small-salaried man or woman; does it in a pleasant way, and gets big dividends out of the investment.

It may be wrong, and exercise a debasing effect on mankind, but it is mighty comfortable for both "tipper" and "tipped," and it will last long after the moss is growing on several thousand Carnegie libraries and the ruins of Skibo castle.

The French Waif

In France each school has a certain sum of money set aside for the benefit of the poor children. During the summer months every child who is entitled to the privileges of the outing is granted a three-week vacation in the country at the seaside. The French republic pays for this outing.

While in the country the boys are taught to work. They learn to dig, to hoe, to pull weeds and to chop wood. The little girls are not neglected, but are taught the simpler duties of the household. They wash the dishes, dust the furniture and perform other homely tasks.

This custom has existed since Napoleon's time. It was he who instituted the annual outing for poor children. Three weeks in the country for children who have never seen grass growing; children who know not a tree in the open. There are little ones who have never seen a cow, a pig, a live chicken.

Aside from the actual physical benefit to the little people there is an educational side to the custom which can but appeal to those who find it hard to find good in what Napoleon has done.

A large house greeted the initial appearance of the Pauline Dunstan Dramatic club at the Auditorium last evening. Those participating in the play acquitted themselves in a very creditable manner.

The curtain raiser, "For the First Time," was received favorably as an introduction to the more difficult drama, "Don Caesar de Bazan." There were five parts to the former piece and each character vied with the other in outdoing itself in a dramatic way. Miss Lucy Twoby as Mrs. De Soto Beans, a wealthy and eccentric widow, depicted the part with unusual grace and dignity. Her enunciation could not be improved upon and her conduct on the stage was quite professional.

Much scope for dramatic talent was given in the four-act drama, "Don Caesar de Bazan." J. J. O'Conner surprised his friends in the role of leading man, Don Caesar de Bazan. He was a typical Spaniard and interpreted the part with a bravo and dash that made a decided hit.

Miss Monnie Burns as Maritana developed from her vain desire as a girl to be a countess and reign in beauty and splendor to a very sensible, loving wife. She displayed considerable ability in dramatic art.

Mrs. Anderson-Nichell was a decided success as the Countess Rotondo. The other support was all that could be desired.

A number of Spanish maidens danced gracefully under the direction of Professor Bonley as a prelude to the first act.

Mrs. Wenona Riddle rendered a solo which was encored generously.

Miss Dornia Potter, teacher in the Pauline Dunstan academy, gave a violin selection which was conceded to be the best rendition ever heard in Spokane. In responding to an encore she played the "Mocking Bird."

World of Sport

Mike Fisher of the Tacomas and Jim Morley of Los Angeles have entered into an agreement whereby, if the Angels win the second half of the coast series and it becomes necessary to play off with the Tigers for the championship, both managers will stand on the coaching line and wear dress suits in which to coach. Morley might know how to behave in dress armor, but the nearest Fisher ever came to such was when he wore the dress uniform of a policeman traveling an Oakland beat. And the Oakland police wore "dickies" instead of shirts and never knew what a linen cuff was like.

Now that Albert Mead got the decision over George Turner in the first round and the referee gave Turner the count of 10 instead of the next go in Spokane has revived. It will be between Green and McCarthy under the auspices of the Spokane Amateur Athletic club, in which the grandmas have given the colts permission to go out and "git het up." Meantime the grandmas are playing basket ball and rolling ten pins, as ping pong is too strenuous these days of warmth.

Champion Jim Jeffries is drawing big houses with his "Davy Crockett" show. Jeff should have Jack Munroe come on as a greaser in one act—which would give much joy to the gallery, except, possibly, a Butte gallery.

When Louie Long threw down his manager, Billy Lavigne, and sidestepped the go with Charley Neary at Seattle after the latter had traveled all the way from Milwaukee, he did himself great harm.

It may have been all right to down Lavigne at last. In fact, Louie, I know, was getting the worst of every deal in which Lavigne handled him. But a retreat just before a match is a bad thing for any boxer. Sympathy has always been with Louie until that bad break and while he may have strong excuse and one not based on fear of his man, the public generally looks on a quitter as a bad proposition.

It is for this reason that Louie has been unable to make any matches and is now in Butte offering to meet and dispose of any three men of his weight in five rounds each.

The Lewiston high school team arrived in Spokane yesterday afternoon and went at once into practice for today's game with the Spokane high school. The game is to be played this afternoon at the Natatorium grounds and will be one of the best contests the high school team has entered this year. The Spokane team has been considerably strengthened and the boys expect to carry off the honors from the Idaho eleven.

Tommy Mowatt came close to taking Charley Neary's measure in Milwaukee last night. Both boys were staggered by blows on the jaw and the decision was for a draw.

Benny Yanger defeated Willie McNamara in three rounds at Peoria last night. McNamara was all but out when the police stopped the fight.

"Both horse and driver, upon their return to the stand, received the plaudits of those present," says a dispatch from Memphis. Of course Lou appreciated those plaudits because she had just done a mile in 2:01 and came back with her hat on straight. WILLIE B. GOODE.

A POLICEMAN'S TESTIMONY
J. N. Patterson, night policeman of Nashua, Ia., writes, "Last winter I had a bad cold on my lungs and tried at least half a dozen advertised cough medicines and had treatment from two physicians without getting any benefit. A friend recommended Foley's Honey and Tar and two thirds of a bottle cured me. I consider it the greatest cough and lung medicine in the world." Sold by Chas. McNab, 402 Riverside.

AN ENGLISH AUTHOR WROTE:

"No shade, no shine, no fruit, no flowers, no leaves—November!" Many Americans would add no freedom from catarrh, which is so aggravated during this month that it becomes constantly troublesome. There is abundant proof that catarrh is a constitutional disease. It is related to scrofula and consumption, being one of the wasting diseases. Hood's Sarsaparilla has shown that what is capable of eradicating scrofula, completely cures catarrh, and taken in time prevents consumption. We can not see how any sufferer can put off taking this medicine, in view of the widely published record of its radical and permanent cures. It is undoubtedly America's Greatest Disease—Catarrh.

STANLEY'S MEMORIAL A HEAVY ONE.

In the church yard at Pibright, England, an imposing memorial has been erected over the grave of Sir Henry Morton Stanley, the famous African explorer. It was Lady Stanley's wish that the monument should consist of some great monolith unheven by man. The work of finding and erecting the stone was entrusted to the Art Memorial company of West Norwood. After many days had been spent in a fruitless search on Dartmoor, a large granite monolith was discovered on Frénehbeer farm. This stone was found to contain all that was essential, the extreme length being 12 feet, width four feet, varying from two feet to two feet six inches in thickness. It was in a recumbent position, forming part of a fence on the roadside; three faces had been fully exposed for many years.

The removal of the stone from Dartmoor to Pibright was not an easy matter. "The Devonshire roads being steep and difficult, it was found necessary to employ a traction engine and wagon to convey it to the railway at Moreton Hampstead. After much labor the great stone, weighing upwards of six tons, now stands in Pibright church yard. The words of the inscription were chosen by Lady Stanley, who wrote: "I desire simply his name, Henry Morton Stanley, beneath it his great African name, Hula Matarí—the Rock Breaker. For epitaph, the single word 'Africa' and above all, the emblem and assurance of life everlasting—the Cross of Christ."

Aldermen must be alike, the country over. The Buffalo men arrested, laughed just as hard as the St. Louis aldermen did.

PHYSICIANS PRESCRIBE IT.
Many broad minded physicians prescribe Foley's Honey and Tar, as they have never found so safe and reliable a remedy for throat and lung troubles as this great medicine. Sold by Chas. McNab, 402 Riverside.
