Good Art In the Homes.

The Browning settlement of London has adopted a scheme for putting works of real art into the homes of people unable to buy them.

Reproductions of Watts, Burne-Jones, Millais, Rossetti and other great artists have been collected, put into simple frames and are being loaned to members of the Workingmen's Picture Gallery at the rate of a penny a month for each two pictures borrowed. At the end of the month these can be exchanged.

Art, one of the best gifts of heaven to man, never was intended to be exclusively a luxury of the rich.

Like literature, it is the common heritage of all. It is a universal language which all can understand, and the message it conveys goes to the heart as well as the mind.

The part which art has played in the education and advancement of mankind toward a common understanding of itself cannot be measured.

It enlarges the view of life and enables us to understand aspirations, struggles and passions that are tremendous forces in the world and in our own individual lives.

One's real nature may be known better from the kind of art he loves than from the books he likes, because art love is less of the mind and more of the soul.

So powerful is the influence of good pictures in their constant force of suggestion that criminologists are learning to hang them in prison cells as a most valuable element in discipline and reform.

Anything which gives genuine and wholesome happiness among the classes whose pleasures are few and makes the bare homes more cheerful and attractive is a mighty influence for good.

The 67 year old man who walked from New York to Philadelphia knows just how a passless legislator feels.

Reed Smoot would have to do something mighty desperate to get noticed now.

As Weber and Fields would say, the packers never sausage a disposition on the part of everybody to give them the worst.

VISITING GOWN.

A handsome visiting gown for a young matron is of crepe laine, in a soft champagne tone. The muck desired short waisted effect is obtained by means of a high girde which extends along the sides and at the back, while an empire effect is shown at the front. A square shaped yoke is made of Venice lace, upon a foundation of white mousseline and outlined with Val. insertion.

The skirt is trimmed with the Val. insertion, which crosses the tucks of the skirt yoke and vanishes beneath the box pleat, which forms the empire front. The skirt is a long trailing one and is fully gathered to the hip yoke.

Yellow is the tone of the Neapolitan hat which is worn with this costume. The high crown is surrounded with big white daisies, with yellow centers. The pale yellow plumes sweep across the back.

FACES MURDER CHARGE

Albert J. Jungelaus, who recently purchased the Lucerne photograph studio, was taken to Lewis and Clark last night, where he will be arraigned on the charge of murdering his foster father, Louis Faller, last November. Louis Faller, a wealthy old German, was killed in his cabin and it was supposed at the time that he was accidentally shot while cleaning a gun.

A will left all of his property to Albert Faller. Relatives of the old man started an investigation which resulted in his arrest Saturday night. He was adopted four years ago by Louis Faller. To get possession of the property that he might marry is supposed to be the motive for the alleged murder.

SERVANT INHALES GAS

John Swedberg, a servant formerly in the employ of Bert Allen, 918 Spofford avenue, was found yesterday morning asphyxiated by gas. Some time ago the servant received news of the death of his brother and either became despondent or too drunk to turn off the gas when he went to bed, Mr. Allen, who was out of town, returned yesterday and found the residence locked. Not seeing his servant, he called, but did not locate him until he went to his room and found him cold in death. He called Dr. Witter, the coroner, and the body was taken to the morgue.

Swedberg had been in the employ of the Allens for eight months and was exceptionally neat about his work and the confidence of the family in him was shown when they left the care of the residence in his hands.

BANK CASHIER WOULD BE THE DOG CATCHER

OMAHA, Neb., June 2.—Alfred Millard, clubman, nephew of Senator J. H. Millard of Nebraska, and cashier of the Riggs Street bank in Omaha, wants to be city dog catcher. He would be willing to dispense with the $1500 salary just to get the office.

For years Mr. Millard has been connected with the Humane society, usually as treasurer or secretary, but he has never overlooked an opportunity actually to prevent cruelty to animals. Omaha has one of the most modern institutions in the country for handling stray dogs, but Mr. Millard believes that a man interested in the position of dog catcher from strictly humane motives should be in charge. Should he be appointed by the mayor every detail of the work will have his personal supervision.

CASSATT AT HIS BEST AFTER BEING SELF-OSLERIZED 17 YEARS

PHILADELPHIA, June 5.—To face a crisis in the affairs of the Pennsylvania railroad brought on by the disclosure of unblushing graft among trusted employes, A. J. Cassatt, president of the road, has cut short his European vacation and is hurrying home on a Steamship. This situation is said to be a complete surprise to the man regarded as the premier railroad president of the United States and one who has well earned his position at the head of the biggest financial proposition among railroads.

Cassatt's son, Robt. Kelso Cassatt, is with Cassatt's son-in-law, Wm. P. Stewart, and Cassatt's brother, J. Gardner Cassatt, and J. Leo John Lloyd, close friend of Cassatt, in control of the Keystone Coal & Coke Co., which has absorbed most of the small companies which have been furnishing the Pennsylvania with fuel and supplies. Young Cassatt was among those who admitted that he accepted stock without cost to him. This and other things that came out before the state railroad commissioners have caused such a scandal in the road's affairs that there is already talk of the stockholders displacing Cassatt as president.

Cassatt's career often has been pointed to as a model one. Born of a prominent family he had the advantage of college training at home and abroad. He entered the railroad business away at the bottom and rose gradually but quickly until in 1882, at a younger age than Dr. Osler could find fault with, he relinquished active railroad management and spent 17 years in semi-retirement, devoting himself to the pleasures of country gentleman and active sportsman.

BETTER THAN EVER.

The glittering feature of his life is that at the age of 60 he reissued from this comparative privacy at the call of the Pennsylvania when it elected him president and proved to be stronger, brainier and more energetic than ever before, and set the road the task of making improvements that staggered the railroad world and the public as well. It is only necessary to mention that the pushing of the Pennsylvania into the heart of New York city, a project involving $50,000,000 worth of tunnels and terminals, is his.

IN DAYS OF OLD.

In Cassatt's younger days his greatest achievement probably was the securing of the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore railroad after the rival Baltimore & Ohio had believed itself in control of it. Cassatt advanced in the Pennsylvania under the partial eye of Thos. A. Scott, vice-president, which amounted to this—Cassatt's ability was allowed to count. It was at Col. Scott's death that Cassatt quit the vice-presidency.

Among traction railroad men he stands out as a medalist. He does not talk much. He is a man of fine physique and his hair is inclined to be red. He has dark blue eyes and ruddy skin.

QUEEN OF THE HOBOES IS THIS GENTLE ROSE

"For I'm to be queen of the May, mugged" and released by the Kansas City police, is Rose Boyer, who calls herself "Queen of the Hoboes."

A girl, anywhere between 14 and 20, she wore dirty, ragged men's clothing under a skirt when arrested. A round felt cap was jammed over her closely cropped hair, and her mouth was full of tobacco and profanity.

"Naw ye don't," she shouted when being placed before the camera. "No slabsided copper can mug me. I see queen of the hoboos, and you can't put anything on me. The toughest part of the Chicago levee was too tame for me. I'm a card shark and a bootlegger. I run this country wherever I please. I ain't scared of your workhouses. Been in too many of them. I'm part Cherokee Indian. I am. Hear me yell Whoop-ee-ee-ee."

The police threatened to chloroform her before they managed to get the photo. Rose was given hours to leave town. She struck out for the railroad yards, wearing overalls.
