NO DANCES ON SUNDAY

THE CHIEF OF POLICE SAYS THAT PROFANATION OF SABBATH TO WALTZ TIME MUST STOP.

"All Sunday dancing positively must cease in Spokane." The above is ukase issued to the police force this morning by Chief of Police Waller.

And he means it, as his following statement shows: "Nobody but a lot of hoodlums will commit sacrilege and defame the Lord's day by dancing. I wish to say now that I will not allow dancing on the Sabbath and will place under arrest anyone who allows it."

Last night there was dancing at Manito park and Natatorium park. John Connors, proprietor of the pavilion at Manito park was notified by Detective Tom Herndon that dancing must cease, and the Natatorium park people will be notified today.

SAYS HOGS HAD DIED

EMPLOYEE OF CITY MARKET MAKES CHARGES OF SELLING BAD MEAT, AND AN INVESTIGATION IS ON.

A packing house scandal is on in Spokane, according to the complaint of Louis Rensch, formerly in the employ of the City Market Packing company, who this morning went before City Prosecutor Edge and Food Commissioner Adams and charged the packing company with dressing six hogs that had died in their pens from some unknown ailment.

Food Commissioner Adams will immediately commence an investigation of the charges brought by Rensch and this afternoon said that if the charges could be proven true he would have the local packers punished to the full extent of the law.

SUSPECTS ARRESTED

The police are of the opinion that they now have in the toils the two professional yegg men and desperadoes who were responsible for the three safe blowings and one holdup of last week, in the persons of George O'Connor, alias Phillips, age 21, and James Riley, alias Mills, age 22, who were arrested last night by Detectives Alec Macdonald and Bill Weir at the Alhambra, E24 Main avenue.

Both are old offenders, particularly O'Connor, and their pictures adorn the local police gallery of rogues.

A STUDY OF HARRY THAW

By Marlen E. Pew. (Scripps News Association.) NEW YORK, July 2.—For the first time in his wild, passion-gratifying, willful life, Harry Thaw, the wrecked bon vivant of the Great White Way, cannot have his desires.

This is a strange sensation for him. He sits in his narrow Tombs cell, sobered by stone walls. Big Billy, the keeper, tells Thaw to "get up and put yer clothes on." He sends him to bed at night. The poor fool of a boy who, until this time, has never known what it is to obey, complies without a word. When Harry Thaw, as a child, wanted a plaything and his nurse and some member of his family objected, he would fight for it. He would cry and demand and his selfishness would not disappear until his demands were satisfied.

When he became a boy in knickerbockers he ruled his household and his family, and had with him easy reach anything that money could buy. At college he regarded no rules or regulations. Every wild adventure that suggested itself to his mind he immediately entered upon. He was passionate in his likes and dislikes. With an athletic body he forced his way whither his will directed. He would fight anyone who opposed him.

It was this deep seated characteristic of willfulness in him that caused his father to insert a clause in his will providing that Harry should have but $2500 a year income from the vast Thaw fortune until he had reached the age of 35. Young Thaw caused a towering scene of rage and resentment when this clause became known to him. Like the baby Harry, who had cried when his mother told him to go to bed at night, he raged until his dotting parent finally, as executrix of the will, gave him $50,000 a year. From that instant Thaw began his prodigal expenditures, and his income has been a mere speck of the amount of money he has scattered over Europe and America along with his many bushels of wild oats. He has drawn heavily upon his family.

The old passion of self-gratification caused him, against his mother's will, to continue his career with the beautiful Evelyn Nesbit. He said she was the prettiest girl in the world. His mother, a woman of keen religious scruples, but ever fond and indulgent parent, went down into her own purse and offered the actress $250,000 if she would desert her son. The girl refused, and Thaw declined to heed any of the entreaties of his mother. He had his own way in Paris

ICE COMBINE GIVES IN

AGITATION STARTED BY THE PRESS RESULTS IN COMPETITIVE MOVE THAT BRINGS PRICE DOWN 25 CENTS PER 100 POUNDS.

Without any effort on his own part Spokane seems to have been jarred out of the grip of the ice trust by competition the Diamond holdup, which was so successfully worked last year, can not now control.

This year one small company managed to pry itself loose from absolute dependence on the Diamond combine for wholesale ice by securing supplies from outside. Notwithstanding the additional cost of freight this concern was able to cut the rate to 75 cents per 100 pounds.

The Diamond combine had decreed a price of 1 cent per pound. As it had controlled the entire supply for the city last year, the same deal was arranged for this season. Independent dealers could conform or quite business. The customer could pay the price or do without ice.

And the languishing sick, whose lives in warm weather often depend on cooling drinks and applications—they were also included in the local ice combine's careful calculations.

STANFORD WHITE.

when he gave his famous $50,000 "beauty dinner" to stage women of the French city after his friends had warned that he would do himself an injury by such an escapade. He finally married the Nesbit girl against the advice of even the most conservative of his friends. Harry Thaw had his own sweet way again and finally when, amid the popping of champagne corks in fashionable Martini's, on Fifth avenue, he looked across to an adjoining table occupied by White and said, "That fat, healthy scoundrel, who is notorious as a seeker of young girls on the stage, ruined my wife. She will never recover from his brutal treatment of her. I will kill him." He followed White to the Madison Square roof garden in an hour and executed his desire.

WANT BIDS ON BONDS

WASHINGTON, July 2.—The secretary of the treasury has issued circulars calling for bids on $30,000,000 canal bonds. The bids will be received July 20 and bear date of August 7. They draw interest at 2 per cent and will be issued in denominations of $20,000 and $100,000 for both coupon and registered series.

This makes it a popular loan redeemable in gold at the pleasure of the government after 10 years from issue. The bonds are free from tax and available to national banks as security for circulation on the same terms as existing 2 per cent consols, and as security for deposits in national banks.

RAILROAD OFFERS BRIDGE EXPERT

COUNCIL STILL TAKING CHANCES. The Press intends to keep on hammering at the bridge question until every crossing used by the Spokane public is authoritatively pronounced safe. Common decency alone demands that the record of neglect and carelessness in the past, or of graft, if the situation is as bad as it looks, is obliterated by an intelligent and energetic effort on the part of the administration to discharge its whole duty.

The bridge investigation committee went into session this afternoon after adjourning without taking up any business Saturday afternoon. Henry M. Richards, president of the Washington Water Power company; D. L. Huntington, general manager, and Allan Gill, consulting engineer of the city, will be examined before the session is over.

The board of public works notified the committee that the Oregon Railroad & Navigation company had donated free for the use of the city the services of G. T. Forsyth, its head bridge engineer and expert, who arrived from Portland at 11:45 o'clock this morning. Mr. Forsyth refused to pass an opinion on the cause of the collapse of the Howard street bridge today, and said that as soon as the investigation committee had formally accepted the tender of his services he would at once commence an inspection of all Spokane bridges.
