

BOXING TRUST IN SPOKANE

It looks as though the next two months will see at least two boxing contests in Spokane. "Kid" Parker, of Denver, has signed to meet "Dude" Lewis at the gymnasium of the Athletic club about Thanksgiving. There seems to be a desire on the part of all concerned in this match to keep the matter until the independent club that is handling the Long-Scaler match is "run out of town" so as to leave an open field for the S. A. A. C. This "dog in the manger" policy of Director Cook is poor sportsmanship. He has been treated very well since his arrival and has been given every assistance possible from lovers of sport in general; but such tactics as he is now adopting don't gain anything for him in the long run. People of Spokane have always shown a desire to let the other fellow live. When Eddie Quinn had the management of the S. A. A. C. he "kept off the grass" so far as "knocking" was concerned, and only desired that his club be allowed a date a month and that the independents hold their matches at dates which did not conflict with his own.

Prosecutor arnhart has been quoted as saying he will allow no "boxing contests" in this county. Barnhart is overstepping his authority, as there are no laws against boxing. If there were he would, in his great desire to maintain and uphold the laws, have stepped in at the S. A. A. C. last night and stopped those three round bouts. The independents do not plan pulling off a prize fight such as is barred by laws of the state, but will pull off a boxing contest for points at the Spokane theater December 6.

Kid Scaler is making plans to train at Medical Lake for his bout with Louie Long. "My right arm is stronger than ever," says Scaler, "and my left always was good." Scaler will do a lot of boxing at the lake, as he is determined this time to beat Long

PRINCETON WILL GIVE YALE THE FIGHT OF THE YEAR

CAPT. H. L. DILLON, A heady and steady player, who has won a reputation as a field general.

EX-CAPTAIN J. B. MCCORMICK, PRINCETON'S FULLBACK, IN GREAT FORM THIS YEAR. COONEY, OF PRINCETON, ABOUT TO KICK A GOAL. HE IS BACK IN THE GAME IN FINE FORM.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 10.—That Princeton will occupy a conspicuous spotlight center of the varsity gridiron in the warfare now at hand is pretty generally recognized by followers of the early games.

Considering the records of the eleven of Yale and Princeton these two teams are very evenly matched, and the game between them held on Nov. 17 should prove a battle royal.

The Tigers have been scrimmaging fiercely under the direction of Coach W. A. Roper, and the end of the training season finds a good score of husky players in excellent trim.

The new bunch of football rules suit the Tigers down to the ground, as they are quick to respond to the coach's calls for speed and yet more speed.

Princeton has a fast set of backs and a line which can throw more than half a ton of brawn and bone into action in a charge. In the line up are Ex-Captain Cooney, Herring, Stanard, Rheinstein and Dillon. All except Rheinstein have been varsity stars before. He has fought his way up after three years on the scrub. McCormick, last year's all American fullback, has already begun to plunge his way through to greater gridiron fame.

EDDIE STANARD, Princeton's tackle, known as "Jersey Buffalo," a sensational player on offensive work.

A FEW REMARKS ABOUT COUNT BONI.

Don't think I am going to pass over Count Boni de Castellane. You can't ignore Boni, the unspeakable French shrimp with the distended cranial crust and the tin foil title of a snide nobility who bruises his misguided little American wife every time he thinks of the money she has left. But it is bitterness and gall to think that he can't be handed what he ought to get—a good, old fashioned coat of tar and feathers.

If you can think of a strong, comprehensive word which expresses the depth of your contempt for the perverted, pestiferous and pusillanimous pill which masquerades under the guise of a human being and a gentleman in France, don't send it along. It will be unimpaired.

Little we thought when Jay Gould bled us for our dollars in the old family mutton abattoir, Wall street, that a large part of it would go the son-in-law route via the prize parasite of Paris. Poor, deluded woman, who with the world to choose from and the price in her hand, made the most miserable bargain that any combination of circumstances could afford.

POVERTY STRICKEN WORKMAN TAPS WELL THAT YIELDS HIM $2862 DAILY

FRANKLIN, Pa., Nov. 10.—Two weeks ago Andrew Rapp was one of the poorest of the men who work along the hillside oil fields in this vicinity.

He was obliged to work very hard, and his wife pinched and worked herself.

Now Mr. and Mrs. Rapp are handling great rolls of bank notes—their own—which come in at the rate of $2,862 a day.

Rapp struck an oil gusher the other day, and it made him rich at 57, after more than 40 years of hard, incessant, often painful, toil.

That is why they call the Rapp well "The Poor Man's Gusher."

Now rich and poor alike are looking for more gushers. Rapp has the best chance, as the land which he is working on a lease is all around the big well. He may get several wells more like it.

Sharing his fortune is another poor man, Witherup, who owns the farm. He and his wife had to eke out their existence in their declining years by boarding oil men. As the lessor of the land he is entitled to one eighth of the oil it produces. The Rapp well will net him $15 an hour.

Rapp is an industrious man who has been an oil operator in a small way for years in a supposedly played-out Venango county field. The wells have been half barrel to two barrel ones.

It was like gleaning a Kansas wheat field after a self-binder had passed over it. Rapp had a partner in the Witherup lease near Kennerdell, but the latter became disgusted with the poverty and sold out his share to Rapp about five years ago.

Rapp had to borrow the money. In fact he has been almost always in debt for machinery and supplies, so hard was the struggle.

He had a great deal of faith in the field, however, as the indications, feeble though they were, made him believe that some day there would be a worth while flow of oil.

The gusher is in a thick hemlock forest on the bank of a creek. When the drill had gone two feet into the sand there was an immediate flow of oil and a gas pressure so strong that the men were compelled to shut the well down and move the boiler back from the danger zone.

Then the drill was started again, and when it got three feet further down there was a recoil of the rope and the fluid began to spurt out. Then it gushed, and before the men could realize what was taking place the oil was shooting as high as the derrick. The spray covered the derrick and all the trees around.

Before Rapp and his astonished helpers could curb the flow more than 100 barrels had been lost.

The record of the well for the first few days indicates that it is good for 75 barrels an hour, or 1,800 barrels a day. At the present price of Pennsylvania crude this would net $2,862 a day.

A reporter found Rapp hard at work at his well. When the suggestion was made that he would probably take himself and family to Franklin or some other town, he answered:

"No sir; these old hills shall see me in my wealth just as they have seen me in my poverty. My lot so far has been a hard one, and I believe that I am entitled to ease and comfort the rest of my days, and I intend to spend them right here."

Mrs. Rapp, the wife, said that the well hills of Clinton township were enough for her, too. She was willing to live in the small home that has sheltered her and hers for so many years, "though," she added, "I don't want to work as hard in the future as I have in the past. I am nearly worn out."

AFTER DEADBEATS GIRL RAFFLES OF 9 YEARS LAUGHS AT POLICE

TACOMA, Nov. 10.—A meeting of the legislative committee of the State Retail Grocers' association will be held in this city shortly for the purpose of formulating an "anti-deadbeat" law to be presented to the legislature this winter. Lieutenant Governor Coon will be one of the committee. Rigorous provision for the collection of bad accounts are advocated by the association.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Nov. 10.—The more the police investigate the operations of 9-year-old Margaret Maloney, the little Raffles, whom they caught robbing a candy store, the more evidences of her thefts they find. She secured about $80 in this one place.

Since her first confession that she had thrice robbed the candy store, each time dressed in overalls, little Miss Maloney simply laughs at the evidences of other operations the police submit to her and refuses to talk. In practically every case it has been shown that the girl avoided detection by wearing boys clothing and quickly changing into skirts after a successful raid.

Little Margarets hair, close cropped, is black and straight as an Indian's. When her mother visited her in the county jail, the child refused to talk.

"I have nine children living and six dead," said Mrs. Maloney. "She is just breaking her father's heart. He is as honest as can be."

"Yes, I knew that she was taking things, but the children she is running with are to blame. She gives them the money she steals. One day she stole $10 from me, and I could not afford to lose it, either, with my big family."

On one occasion Margaret went to a peanut stand to buy some peanuts. The boy was called inside for a moment, and she grabbed the money from the cash drawer and started down the street. The boy saw her running and pursued her. When he finally caught her, she pulled a roll of bills from her overalls pocket and gave him a dollar to let her go. She had taken 50 cents from the drawer.
