

PITTSBURG BUTTERFLY ON WALL STREET LANDS IN THE TOMBS PRISON

Special Correspondence to The Press NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—The latest Pittsburgh butterfly to get his wings singed in the flames of "gay" New York is Donald L. Persch, son of Colonel L. Persch, a rich financier.

He landed in the Tombs prison, charged with grand larceny. Persch was a note broker in the "street." He associated with some of the most polite high finance gentlemen of that ancient and dishonorable thoroughfare. He's a good looking fellow, and clever, too.

loan of $50,000 on his stock at the respectable Windsor Trust Co. Joyce supposed, he said, that the trust company was making the loan and that the stock would be held as collateral. He wanted to keep it off the market. One day, to his amazement, he discovered that his stock was being traded in on the curb market. The trust company denied that it had made the loan; only negotiated it for other parties who took the stock away. Persch was one of the "other parties." It is known that he ordered the stock sold, and District Attorney Jerome says that through the sale of it Persch cleared up $34,000 after he had paid a 10 per cent commission to an innocent friend who found the money for the $50,000 loan to Joyce.

GIRL FACING DEATH

"I know you didn't mean it, Vince," she said, softly, "and I don't want you to take on so. They're going to look for the bullet again. Anyhow, I ain't going to die, Vince—the doctors said so. And did they keep you locked up all night?" Vincent, 15 years old, nodded.

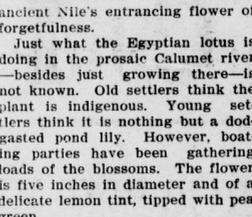

"It wasn't nothin'," he replied, "only I was awful scared all night long that maybe I killed you. I ain't slept a wink, and gee, you don't know how glad I am, Gertie, that you ain't dead." Then the head surgeon motioned, and the stretcher was wheeled to the operating room, while Vincent sadly tiptoed out and sat on the hospital steps. They let him remain there, and every once in a while a white capped nurse came out and told him that Gertie was doing well. They couldn't find the bullet, but they were sure she wouldn't die.

It was late yesterday when Gertie, a pretty 15 year old girl, went to the roof of her home, 200 Hull street, Brooklyn, to make doll dresses for the younger children on the block. The Rileys lived next door at 202, and Vincent, who had been shooting at a target in the lot near by, joined the children on the roof with his companions. The lads rigged up a target on the chimney, and while shooting at it with a .22 calibre rifle Gertie was shot in the breast.

Vincent spent last night in the children's society rooms in Schermerhorn street, and in the children's court today he was released on $300 bail. Then he borrowed a nickel and hurried to the hospital to see Gertie.

INDIANA'S LOTUS-LAND

Special Correspondence to The Press HAMMOND, Ind., Aug. 17.—The flashy shallows of the calmly flowing Calumet three miles east of here are ablaze with the lovely blood of the Egyptian lotus, the ancient Nile's entrancing flower of forgetfulness. Just what the Egyptian lotus is doing in the prosaic Calumet river—besides just growing there—is not known. Old settlers think the plant is indigenous. Young settlers think it is nothing but a dodgasted pond lily. However, boating parties have been gathering loads of the blossoms. The flower is five inches in diameter and of a delicate lemon tint, tipped with pea green.

The lotus of fable conferred forgetfulness upon the lotophagi or lotus eaters. Here it has not yet displaced corn on the cob as a dinner vegetable.

AT THE ART EXHIBIT

"A WASH DRAWING"

DOCTORS OF AUTHORITY SPEAK HIGHLY OF THE HUMAN BAKE OVEN

Dr. Gustavus M. Blech, A. B., M. D., Professor of Casualty Surgery, Jenner Medical College; Member American Medical Association; Mississippi Valley Medical Association; Northern Tri-State Medical Association, etc., Secretary West Chicago Medical Society, Chicago, Ill., says: Internal treatment of rheumatism is practically useless. Salicylates, potassium, iodid, arsenic, iron and a host of other remedies have been tried, but with what success everybody knows. The effects of this drug caused are more than a robust fellow could stand. External applications are quite popular, and rheumatic liniment manufacturers reap a rich harvest. Occasionally, when there is much pain and tenderness, I prescribe an alcoholic solution of menthol, but expect a temporary effect only. Dr. Blech says the value of dry hot air on chronic rheumatism cannot be equaled. The Human Bake Oven is spoken of very highly in the textbooks on materia medica. The Human Bake Oven is the treatment for ankylositis, rheumatoid arthritis, similar affections and Bright's disease.

Synovitis treated by dry hot air, recommended highly by F. H. Little, M. D., Muscatine, Iowa: Each case of synovitis I have treated by this method has given me more confidence in it, not only as a cure all, but as a very valuable adjunct in the treatment of chronic and deep seated inflammatory sections of the joints and soft parts.

The Human Bake Oven treatment for chronic diseases by A. W. Meyers, M. D., Bloomington, Ill.

Skin diseases of parasitic or infective origin are all amenable to the Hot Air Treatment, since the thermal death point of the various organisms is from 105 to 212 degrees. It has been suggested in tubercular processes, Watson says, "that used conjointly with intra-articular injections of iodine form in tubercular synovitis the heat and the dissemination of free iodine relieve the trouble after all other methods fail."

The use of the Bake Oven in the treatment of rheumatism and rheumatic pains, by Eustorgio Calderon, M. D. (University of Salvador, C. A.), San Francisco, Cal.

Although Tallerman's application of dry hot air in the treatment of rheumatism, gout, synovitis and tubercular arthritis has been in use in England for the last eight years, it has been known on this coast a very short time, or at least the profession at large is not well acquainted with it. The object of this paper is to show the real merits of the Human Bake Oven and the astonishing results therewith obtained. How is it possible that such high temperatures can be endured without causing any burns. Nature's regulating powers do produce this wonderful fact. The constant current of hot air produces copious perspiration of the skin, which evaporates immediately and is carried out of the apparatus, so that on the skin sufficient coolness results to protect it against the heat of the layers of dry air around the evaporating zone.

The topical treatment of rheumatic and traumatic arthritis and myositis with the Human Bake Oven, by Dr. M. A. Johnson, Oaktown, Ind.

He recommends the Human Bake Oven for Synovitis, Rheumatism, Traumatic Arthritis and injured joints.

By Dr. Victor F. Mueller, B. S., Milwaukee, Wis.

Although the Human Bake Oven is a new treatment for painful and inflamed joints, it is now recognized as the best known method. What can we promise the rheumatic? If we consider the results we had with the old methods—little, if anything. If we, on the other hand, treat the joints with dry, hot air, you are sure of good results.

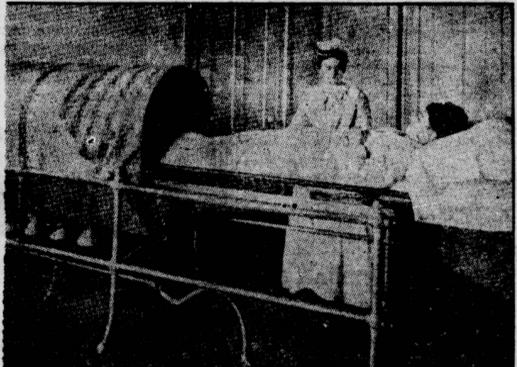

Dr. Hudson D. Bishop, Cleveland, Ohio.

The use of heat as a remedial agent dates, no doubt, from the beginning of the healing art, but it is only of recent times that it has been possible to apply high temperatures to diseased tissues of the body. The primary effect of heat is to dilate the arterial vessels, whereby more blood is brought to the part. The blood current is quickened and the flow of the lymphatics is accelerated.

Treatment of Septicemia by intense heat, by R. Wm. Carter, M. D., Chicago.

Heat, as a means of relieving localized pain, has been used for centuries by both the profession and laity. Considering the seriousness of this affection, the length of time usually required to produce a cure and the surprising results obtained from the dry hot air treatment, but the Bake Oven, I believe, would be of interest not only to the general practitioner, but to the surgeon and pathologist.

H. W. Hunsaker, San Francisco, Cal., professor of orthopedic and clinical surgery, California Medical College, recommends the Human Bake Oven highly.

This illustration shows how the patient is prepared for the Human Bake Oven. Over 400 degrees of heat is applied. There is absolutely nothing mysterious about this, it is simply the application of dry, hot air by scientific methods. It has always been known that heat would cure disease, but science was never able to apply it in the extreme measure. It creates a general hyperemia or surface circulation, forcing the blood through all contractile tissue and stimulating every fiber in the body. The patient's head is not enclosed, thereby giving fresh and pure air. The sensation is one of extreme pleasure and very exhilarating. When you have a free and easy circulation, whereby every tissue and cell is nourished properly by the healthy blood, could disease exist? Many of Spokane's most prominent diseases and conditions, were cured by this method and their names can be had at the Washington Sanitarium. If you are suffering with the following Rheumatism, Gout, Hysteria (nervous disorders), Obesity, Asthma, Heart Disease, Puffy Degeneration of Heart, Sciatica, Bronchial Catarrh, Neuralgia, Stomach and Intestinal Catarrh, Affections of the Liver, Affections of the Joints, Nephritis, Lumbago, Catarrh of the Ear, Nasal Catarrh, Anemia, Diabetes, Headache, Chronic Constipation, Erysipelas, Influenza, Contracted Scars, Skin Diseases, Tubercles, All Conditions Due to the Lack of Circulation—the extreme heat kills the germs of disease.

Following are a few of the patients who were cured by the Human Bake Oven: T. L. Graham, E2418 Mission avenue, recommends the Bake Oven for rheumatism. Rev. G. R. Bisbee of Valleyford, Wash., recommends the Bake Oven for rheumatism. M. L. Childs of Spokane police force recommends the Bake Oven for rheumatism. J. S. Nightser of 5513 Ralph street recommends the Bake Oven for synovitis. L. E. Martin of 1113 Indiana avenue recommends the Bake Oven for stiff joints. A. Vandusen of Kennewick, Wash., recommends the Bake Oven for rheumatism. Mr. Boxer, care sanitarium, recommends the bake oven for blood poison.

The Washington Sanitarium, located at 401 Fifth avenue, corner Washington, is treating many people daily with this new and well known appliance called the Human Bake Oven. Doctors in every state in the union recommend this treatment. If you are suffering, investigate, as consultation is free. Nurses to care for ladies.
