

CITY NEWS

The Betrayal

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM
Copyright, 1905, by Dodd, Mead & Co.

A meeting will be held in Hill-yard tonight to complete arrangements for Labor Day. It is proposed to hold the biggest celebration of the kind ever given there. Part of the plan is to have a labor parade in the morning, in which the unions of Spokane will be asked to participate.

Bishop Charles W. Smith will consecrate the ground to be occupied by the new St. Paul's M. E. church, Augusta avenue and Monroe, September 6. The event will call together the chief workers in the Methodist faith in and around Spokane.

The suit of Lewis Gray, an engineer, against the Northern Pacific for $5,000 damages for oil burns received while on duty, will be called in the superior court September 15. The criminal action against Gray for throwing acid at Ida and Hannah Nelson, in which the state claims his hands were burned, will be called for trial September 21.

Scotch songs and dances that vividly recalled to the minds of those present the good old days in the land of Bobby Burns, were the features of an entertainment given to the Scots of Spokane by Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton, 5318 Pine street.

By agreement, the case of Howard Craig, charged with a statutory offense, has been continued until the October term of court. Craig was once convicted after a trial lasting two weeks, but was given a new trial by the supreme court. An insanity defense will be made, the same as in the former trial.

Jack Wasson and Joe Benton, the young men arrested in the north end of Spokane county last week on a charge of stealing a team of horses from Jerry Cooney of Springdale, entered a plea of guilty before Judge Carey at Colville, and were sentenced to the reform school.

Japanese residents of Spokane are planning to give the party of Japanese commercial visitors a welcome in the manner followed in their native land on Sunday afternoon, September 11, at the new dining hall of the chamber of commerce.

The Spokane Traction Co. will begin the work of rebuilding the burned portion of the Boone avenue bridge as soon as timbers are received from the coast. The materials are expected by the last of the week.

The Milwaukee road has started proceedings to condemn lot 12, block 2 of Havermale's Second addition, lying just west of the Sacred Heart hospital. The ground is owned by Cyrus Happy and the Hol-and bank.

Headquarters for the third Washington district in the taking of the 1910 census will be located in Spokane. This district will contain 18 counties in Eastern Washington, the work in which will be directed from Spokane.

E. L. Geer, for 10 years one of Spokane's hustling "drummers," has been made manager of the wholesale department of John W. Graham & Co.

Rev. S. M. Ware, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, scored the Christian Science movement in a sermon last night. He pronounced most of the cures claimed by the Scientists to be pure fakes.

A new lodge of the Moose will be instituted here about September 6. A charter membership of 60 has already been secured. The lodge is a fraternal order paying lack and death benefits.

A number of additions have recently been made to the Great Northern shops at Hilliard, which do not indicate that the Hill people have any serious intention of abandoning their shop center there for the present, at least.

DR. COYNE, DENTIST
Has moved to suites 214 and 215 Empire State building. Phone, Main 1512. Waiting room with Dr. W. Hilscher, oculist.

20 ACRES
Choice Fruit Land
Located close to city, in one of the finest fruit districts of the Inland Empire, all under cultivation and five acres in young orchard. The soil is a rich black loam, with ample moisture and sloping just enough to give a fine air drainage, thereby making it absolutely free from frost. Winter apples do exceptionally well on adjoining tracts and for garden truck it is a great investment, being close to a good market. Owner leaving city and will sell very cheap, at easy terms, if taken immediately.

Martin P. Allen
13 Washington Street.
Phone Main 3549.

CHAPTER I.—Continued.
He looked at me, as well he might, in amazement.
"I would ask you," he said, "to excuse my unceremonious entrance, but that it seems to have been providential. You have met with an accident, I am afraid. Allow me."
He helped me to stagger to my feet, and pushed me gently into an easy chair. The match burned out, and he quietly struck another and looked around the room for a candle or lamp. I had neither.
"I am afraid," I said, "that I am out of candles—and oil. I got a little overfired walking here, and my foot slipped in the dark. Did I understand that you wished to see me?"
"I did," he answered gravely. "My name is Mostyn Ray—but I think we had better have some light. I am going to get one of the motor lamps."
"If you could call in the morning," I began desperately, but he had already opened and closed the door. I looked around my room, and I could have sobbed with mortification. The omnibus was lit inside as well as out, and I knew very well who was there. Already he was talking with the occupants. I saw a girl lean forward and listen to him.

Once more the door was quickly opened and closed. A man servant set down the lamp upon my table. Behind, the girl and Mostyn Ray were talking.
"Get back as quickly as you can, Richards," she told the man, "and get the things I told you from Mrs. Brown. Jean must bring you back in the motor."
I heard the swish of her skirts as she came over towards me.
"Fool fellow," she murmured. "I'm afraid he is very ill."
I made an attempt to rise. She laid her hand upon my shoulder and smiled.
"Please don't move," she said, "and do forgive us for this intrusion. Col. Ray wanted to call and apologize about this evening, and I am so glad he did. We are going to take no end of liberties, but you must remember that we are neighbors, and therefore have privileges."
I heard them rummaging about in my back room, and soon I heard the chopping of sticks. Presently I heard the crackling of flames, and I knew that a fire had been lit. I felt my boots cut from my feet. I was gently lifted up. Some of my outer garments were removed. Every now and then I heard their voices. I heard her shocked exclamation as she examined my lard-er. I heard the words "starvation," "exhaustion," scarcely applying them to myself. Then I heard her call to him softly. She was standing by my bookcase. "?" she murmured. "Guy Ducaine, Magdalen, and the college coat of arms. They must belong to him, for this is his name."
I did not hear his answer, but directly afterwards a little exclamation escaped him.
"By jove, what luck! I have my flask with me, after all. Is there a spoon there, Lady Angela?"
She brought him directly. He stooped down, and I felt the metal strike my teeth. The brandy seemed to set all my blood flowing once more warmly in my veins. The heat of the fire, too, was delicious.

And then the strangest thing of all happened. I opened my eyes. My chair was drawn sideways to the fire and immediately facing the window. The first thing I saw was this. Pressed against it, peering into the room, was the white face of a man, an entire stranger to me.

CHAPTER II.
Good Samaritans.
They both hurried to my side. I was sitting up in my chair, pointing, my eyes fixed with surprise. I do not know even now why the incident should so much have alarmed me, but it is a fact that for the moment I was palsied with fear. There had been murder in the man's eyes, loathsome things in his white, unkempt face. My tongue gave to the roof of my mouth. They drove me more brandy, and then I spoke.

"There was a man—looking in. A man's face there, at the window." Ray took up the lamp and strode to the door. When he returned he exchanged a significant glance with Lady Angela.
"There is no one there now, at any rate," he said. "I dare say it was fancy."
"It was not," I answered. "It was a man's face—a horrible face."
"The omnibus is coming back," he said quietly. "The servants shall have a good look around."
"I would not worry about it," Lady Angela said, soothingly. "It is easy to fancy things when one is not well."
I said nothing, but it was a long time before my limbs ceased to shake. The tall servant reappeared with a huge luncheon basket—all manner of delicacies were emptied out upon my table. Lady Angela was making something in a cup. Ray was undoing a gold-foiled bottle. Soon I found myself eating and drinking, and the blood once more was rushing through my veins.

You are looking better, my young friend," Colonel Ray said presently.
"I feel—quite all right again, thank you," I answered. "I wish I could thank you and Lady Angela."
"You must not attempt anything of the sort," she declared. "My father, by-the-by, Mr. Ducaine, wished me to express his great regret that he should have interfered in any way with your arrangements for this evening. You know, there are so many stupid people around here who have never understood anything at all about the war, and he was very anxious to get Colonel Ray to talk to them. He had no idea, however, that it was the night fixed for your lecture, and he hopes that you will accept the loan of the village hall from him any night you like, and we should so much like all of us to come."

"His grace is very kind," I murmured.
"If I may be permitted to make a suggestion, Lady Angela," said Ray, "I think it would be well if you returned home now, and I will follow shortly on foot."
Lady Angela rose at once. She did not shake hands, but she nodded to me pleasantly. Colonel Ray went out to hand her into the wagonette. It was several minutes before the door handle suddenly turned, and he stepped in. His hair was tossed with the wind, his shoes were wet and covered with mud, and he was breathing rather fast, as though he had been running. I looked at him inquiringly. He offered me no explanation. But on his way to the chair, which he presently drew up to the fire, he paused for a full minute by the window and shading the carriage lamp, which he still carried, with his hand, he looked steadily out into the darkness.
"You have seen him," I exclaimed.
"I saw nothing, but it was a long time before my limbs ceased to shake. The tall servant reappeared with a huge luncheon basket—all manner of delicacies were emptied out upon my table. Lady Angela was making something in a cup. Ray was undoing a gold-foiled bottle. Soon I found myself eating and drinking, and the blood once more was rushing through my veins.

Human Bake Oven Cures Injury
The Human Bake Ovens are located in the Washington Sanitarium, which is equipped with wonderful apparatus for the treatment of the sick.
They examine you free and tell you whether or not they are able to help you.

TOLEDO POLICE ASKED TO HUNT KIDNAPED FLEA
(By United Press)
TOLEDO, O., Aug. 30.—The most unusual request ever made to the Toledo police department was telephoned to Lieutenant Sonmy early this morning, when an excited German voice requested the police to find a flea. It was explained that Fritz, one of the trained fleas in Professor Ruhl's circus at the Wamba carnival, had been stolen during the night.
Professor Ruhl furnished the police this description of Fritz:
"Three years old; blue eyes; a gold wire attached to the neck."
Fritz is one of the prize jugglers in the flea circus.

RIDES HORSEBACK INTO BIG HOTEL
(By United Press)
LEAMINGTON, Spain, Aug. 30.—F. G. Mackey, an American millionaire, was fined $10 here Wednesday because he rode his horse into the Beauchamp hotel.
His sudden appearance startled the hotel guests, much to his enjoyment. An indignant porter then expelled the laughing American and his horse.
Mackey made the unusual ride as the result of a wager.

AH! SECRET IS OUT; MOTHER KNOWS FIRST
(By United Press)
BELLEFONTAINE, O., Aug. 30.—While Miss Lettie Johnson embraced her mother her valise sprang open and a suspicious looking roll of paper fell out. It was a marriage certificate and showed she was married to Ray O'Neill, of Dayton, at Windsor, Canada, two months ago. The girl intended telling her mother of the marriage, but the document appeared before the mother's eyes before the girl could tell the secret.

SOMEWHAT VERDANT.
Mrs. Haggie—But these apples are all so green.
Huckster—Well, ma'am, they're just from the country.

ORDAIN JESUIT PRIESTS
ST. LOUIS, Aug. 30.—Twenty-four candidates for the priesthood of the Jesuit order will be ordained during an elaborate ceremony commenced Wednesday at St. Francis Xavier's church and which will continue through three days. Archbishop Glennon is presiding at the ordination ceremonies. The candidates come from points as distant as Buffalo, Detroit, New Orleans, Denver and the City of Mexico.

SOAP LAKE SANITARIUM
WE ARE FULLY EQUIPPED TO ADMINISTER THE FAMOUS SOAP LAKE BATHS AND THE FAMOUS BERLIN MEDICATED BATHS. WE CURE RHEUMATISM, STAMICA, LUMBAGO, PARALYSIS, FEMALE DISEASES, STOMACH TROUBLES. FIRST CLASS LADY'S AND GENTLEMEN'S OPERATORS AND TRAINED NURSES IN ATTENDANCE. WE ALSO HAVE SOAP LAKE REMEDIES, SOAP LAKE SALT, SOAP LAKE OIL AND THE FAMOUS SOAP LAKE SALVE.
FREE CONSULTATION
15 WEST RIVERSIDE, NEAR DIVISION. PHONE, 1238.

POWELL'S STOMACH REMEDY
CURES PERMANENTLY
Mr. A. H. Powell, Manufacturing Chemist, Spokane, Wash.
Dear Sir—After suffering with stomach trouble for the past four years and doctoring with doctors and paying out over $300 for patent medicines, the first permanent relief I received was from Powell's Stomach Remedy. The first bottle gave me great relief and after using three bottles I have no more stomach trouble and feel that I am permanently cured.
"Do you see this?" he murmured. "Guy Ducaine, Magdalen, and the college coat of arms. They must belong to him, for this is his name."
I did not hear his answer, but directly afterwards a little exclamation escaped him.
"By jove, what luck! I have my flask with me, after all. Is there a spoon there, Lady Angela?"
She brought him directly. He stooped down, and I felt the metal strike my teeth. The brandy seemed to set all my blood flowing once more warmly in my veins. The heat of the fire, too, was delicious.

Human Bake Oven Cures Rheumatism
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures Eczema
Eczema is a parasitic condition destroying the healthy tissue which infects the surrounding tissues. We have yet to find a case that the Bake Oven can not cure. This is a disease which many people are afflicted with. They try every known medicine without results. Most cases of from 10 to 20 years' standing have given up all treatment or any idea that they ever will be cured. It is that class of people we especially invite to investigate the wonderful merits of the Human Bake Oven. When we say that the Bake Oven cures eczema we know just what we are talking about, as past experiences has taught us that not one single case has failed to perform a permanent cure. The Human Bake Ovens are located at the Washington Sanitarium, where many people are treated daily, and it would be a revelation to any one to visit for one hour and talk with the patients that are being treated and you certainly will be convinced as to the wonderful benefits that can be derived by this treatment. If you are suffering, investigate, as consultation and examination is as free as the air you breathe.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures Injury
The Human Bake Ovens are located in the Washington Sanitarium, which is equipped with wonderful apparatus for the treatment of the sick.
They examine you free and tell you whether or not they are able to help you.

Human Bake Oven Cures Rheumatism
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures Eczema
Eczema is a parasitic condition destroying the healthy tissue which infects the surrounding tissues. We have yet to find a case that the Bake Oven can not cure. This is a disease which many people are afflicted with. They try every known medicine without results. Most cases of from 10 to 20 years' standing have given up all treatment or any idea that they ever will be cured. It is that class of people we especially invite to investigate the wonderful merits of the Human Bake Oven. When we say that the Bake Oven cures eczema we know just what we are talking about, as past experiences has taught us that not one single case has failed to perform a permanent cure. The Human Bake Ovens are located at the Washington Sanitarium, where many people are treated daily, and it would be a revelation to any one to visit for one hour and talk with the patients that are being treated and you certainly will be convinced as to the wonderful benefits that can be derived by this treatment. If you are suffering, investigate, as consultation and examination is as free as the air you breathe.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures Injury
The Human Bake Ovens are located in the Washington Sanitarium, which is equipped with wonderful apparatus for the treatment of the sick.
They examine you free and tell you whether or not they are able to help you.

Human Bake Oven Cures Rheumatism
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures Eczema
Eczema is a parasitic condition destroying the healthy tissue which infects the surrounding tissues. We have yet to find a case that the Bake Oven can not cure. This is a disease which many people are afflicted with. They try every known medicine without results. Most cases of from 10 to 20 years' standing have given up all treatment or any idea that they ever will be cured. It is that class of people we especially invite to investigate the wonderful merits of the Human Bake Oven. When we say that the Bake Oven cures eczema we know just what we are talking about, as past experiences has taught us that not one single case has failed to perform a permanent cure. The Human Bake Ovens are located at the Washington Sanitarium, where many people are treated daily, and it would be a revelation to any one to visit for one hour and talk with the patients that are being treated and you certainly will be convinced as to the wonderful benefits that can be derived by this treatment. If you are suffering, investigate, as consultation and examination is as free as the air you breathe.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures Injury
The Human Bake Ovens are located in the Washington Sanitarium, which is equipped with wonderful apparatus for the treatment of the sick.
They examine you free and tell you whether or not they are able to help you.

Human Bake Oven Cures Rheumatism
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures Eczema
Eczema is a parasitic condition destroying the healthy tissue which infects the surrounding tissues. We have yet to find a case that the Bake Oven can not cure. This is a disease which many people are afflicted with. They try every known medicine without results. Most cases of from 10 to 20 years' standing have given up all treatment or any idea that they ever will be cured. It is that class of people we especially invite to investigate the wonderful merits of the Human Bake Oven. When we say that the Bake Oven cures eczema we know just what we are talking about, as past experiences has taught us that not one single case has failed to perform a permanent cure. The Human Bake Ovens are located at the Washington Sanitarium, where many people are treated daily, and it would be a revelation to any one to visit for one hour and talk with the patients that are being treated and you certainly will be convinced as to the wonderful benefits that can be derived by this treatment. If you are suffering, investigate, as consultation and examination is as free as the air you breathe.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences of this disease that tends to recur then, when a patient afflicted with this disease has the ability to go to an institution where such treatment can be carried out, he should be advised to do so.

Human Bake Oven Cures
Rheumatism
SPECIFIC TREATMENT
Article published in American Medical Journal.—The contributors advise very strongly the body hot-air treatment to the exclusion of everything else, as furnishing the greatest benefit in the shortest time in acute articular rheumatism. They would give such baking treatment to the patient once every day for seven days, and then much less frequently. When we consider that local warmth is very acceptable and very soothing to the joints of these suffering patients; when we also consider that there is a tendency to cardiac complication, and nothing more relieves cardiac disturbance than perfect surface circulation, and when it seems a fact that in this disease recovery ensues by profuse sweating and by greatly increased elimination through the skin, and when we know that body hot-air treatment does all these things, it would seem as though this treatment were a perfect one for acute inflammatory rheumatism. Hence, it is a fact, as it seems to be, that body hot-air treatment can shorten this disease that tends to be protracted, and prevent recurrences