One of the most delightful features will be the musicale, in which a number of the best known musicians will take part. They will wear Wagnerian costumes and a number of the guests will come in fancy dresses, the styles of which are being kept a secret.

Among those who will take part on the musical program are Mrs. Pearl Hutton Shrader, Miss Schelling, Miss Wheeler and F. W. King.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS ENTERTAINED.

The Royal Neighbors of Spokane camp 1762 will meet tomorrow afternoon with Mrs. Thompson, 1292 South Arthur street.

CONCERT WAS SUCCESS.

A large and appreciative audience greeted the musicians who took part in the splendid concert given last night at the Auditorium theater under the auspices of Our Lady of Lourdes cathedral. In fact, the audience was so demonstrative in its applause that most every number was encored twice.

The quartet, composed of J. Hill, C. Eaton, W. Clark and George W. M. Chant, was especially well received, and although they were announced on the program in two numbers, "The Sweetest Flower" and "Until the Dawn," the audience brought them back three times in each case. The quartet is well balanced and their repertoire of songs was so varied as to make them extremely entertaining.

Mrs. Arthur Brush, soloist of the Congregational church and a late arrival in this city, is a charming addition to musical circles here.

Mrs. Brush sang "With Verdure Clad" from "Creation," and responded to a hearty encore by singing the "Lark Song" from Brownings' "Pippa Passes."

Miss Play Le Page sang "For All Eternity," by Mascheroni, with much expression and feeling. Her voice, though rather light, possesses a rare quality and sweetness, and her artistic temperament is decidedly marked.

Miss Le Page was accompanied by M. C. Weir, who played the violin obligato. Carl Grisson, a well known violinist, played the "Witches' Dance," by Paganini, and responded to an encore, and W. Orton, the other instrumentalist on the program, played a selected cornet solo.

Professor MacFall was announced to sing "The Two Grenadiers," but was obliged to give it up on account of a terrible cold.

The choir quartet, composed of Miss C. Purcell, Miss D. Mead, Mr. J. H. Gorman and Mr. H. E. Winder, was well received. The duet by Miss Purcell and Mr. Winder was substituted by a solo from Mr. Winder.

Miss Flossie Dillon gave a reading, "A Fragment of Lives," by Gilbert Parker, and responded by giving "My Rosary." Miss Dillon has a fascinating manner and a voice that is delightfully pleasing.

ADAM BEDE WILL LECTURE.

Former Congressman J. Adam Bede, famous humorist from Minnesota, will be in Spokane this week, and under the auspices of the Walton School of Expression will speak next Friday evening at the Central Christian church, on the corner of Third avenue and Stevens street.

His subject will be "Our Nation: Its Problems and Its Progression." Although the subject is a serious one, there is no doubt but that Mr. Bede will make it humorous and entertaining.

Salt thrown into the oven immediately after anything has been buried in it will make the objectionable odor less disagreeable.

CREPE DE CHINE WAIST

This waist is made of sage green crepe de chine, and has a scroll design in velvet lines. The sleeves at the top are slightly draped. The lower cuffs and narrow, round gumples are of ecru chiffon embroidered in colors. Green enamel buttons trim the upper cuff.

PLEASE TELL ME
WOMEN'S QUESTIONS ANSWERED BY Cynthia Grey

Dear Miss Grey—Can you give me a remedy for a constant cold and catarrh in a child?

A READER.
A.—The child may have an obstruction of the nose. Consult a physician.

Dear Miss Grey—I am a boy of 16, and am very small. How can I grow?

INQUISITIVE.
A.—Get as much outdoor life as possible. Eat nourishing food. Get eight or 10 hours sleep every night. Take Y. M. C. A. physical exercise. Consult a physician, who can tell by a careful general examination whether there is any organic cause or whether you are suffering only delayed or poor development.

Dear Miss Grey—What can you suggest to cure one of an hallucination?

CONSTANT READER.
A.—A person entertaining an hallucination may or may not be aware of his false idea. He may complain of some touch, taste, odor or sound which does not exist. He should be treated by a nerve specialist of reputation. The mental treatment under direction of an expert promises good results.

If he realizes his condition he may fight the hallucination with his own reason and will. Relief of the mind from worries and business details, ample rest and sleep, with outdoor life, help build up strength of the brain and nervous system.

Dear Miss Grey—What can I do for constant headaches? What will make the eyes strong?

A. L. T.
A.—Constant headaches may be due to eye defects. If yours are weak (as you suggest) you should consult the best eye expert available, and if necessary, get proper glasses. These will relieve the strain and thus the headaches. Other causes of headaches are nasal catarrh and congestion, and intestinal indigestion and constipation. These possibilities must be remembered in treating and persistent headaches.

WHEN VALENTINE WAS YOUNG.

BY FRANCES GILBREATH INGERSOLL.

When Valentine was very young; In grandma's time, you know; He wrote a letter to his love, Tied with a ribbon bow.

He told her that the "rose was red"; The "violets were blue"; The "pink was sweet, and so was she"; And vowed that he'd be true.

He swore that "if she loved as he," "No knife" he ever knew, Was sharp enough, nor strong enough, To "cut their love in two."

His heart with hers "would beat as one," Till "brown hair turned to gray"— Then they were wed; and "happy lived" Forever and a day.

Love's Dictionary

Evening Story for the Family Circle

BY FRANK H. WILLIAMS

"Now that spelling has been revised," laughed Arthur Bates, "there's only one way for us to achieve fame, Flora, and that's by revising the dictionary."

"All right; let's do it," pretty Flora Price smiled back at him.

"Where is the ponderous tome?" questioned Arthur, and anywhere we want to." He flopped the book open. "Let's see," he continued, "what have we here? Ah, a shooting star—that's easy, and it certainly needs revision."

Arthur wrote rapidly on a sheet of paper and then passed the sheet of paper over to the girl.

"Shooting star," the girl read, "a good excuse. A good excuse for what?" she queried. But her rosy cheeks belied her pretended ignorance.

"I've got a great idea!" cried Arthur suddenly, after gazing at her admiringly for a few minutes. "Well make this 'Love's Dictionary.' We'll revise the volume to suit 'lovers'."

For a moment the girl appeared to be on the verge of saying something, but she thought better of the matter and remained silent.

"Now what have we got next?" murmured Arthur, turning the leaves of the dictionary rapidly.

Presently he laughed gleefully and wrote manfully for a few moments. Again he passed the sheet over to the girl. "Read it out loud," Arthur requested.

"Waist," she complied, "that which an arm should be put around. Waste, a dark night, a pretty girl and a young fellow, during which the former is not done."

The girl passed the sheet back to Arthur.

"Extremely silly," she declared. "Here's another," Arthur cried. "Listen to this one. 'Bravery'—what a girl shows when she tells a bashful man who is in love with her that she is in love with him."

"Really, your definitions are not at all good," Flora declared when Arthur had finished. "I'm sure your revised dictionary will be merely a work of love—its certain you'll not be paid in fame or money for such attempts. But here you've been doing all the revising. Let me do a little."

Arthur showed the book across the table to her. His heart beat furiously as he watched her rapidly turn the leaves of the big book. She was so extremely pretty and he was so greatly in love with her and so afraid to tell her. Presently she found the word she wished. Then she wrote on the sheet of paper and handed the latter to Arthur.

"Cowardice," Arthur read, "what a young man shows when he makes his sweetheart show what you have just defined as 'bravery'."

Arthur glanced up quickly at the girl. The light that he saw in her eyes made him forget the revision of the dictionary and all questions of cowardice and bravery. In a moment he had raced around the table and clasped the girl in his arms.

Out of the wisdom of CYNTHIA GREY

Cocoa butter is the most satisfactory emollient for "plumping" the flesh. It should be slightly warmed before being used, and the skin should be soft and clean before applying it or it will not be absorbed. Thin shoulders may be treated with advantage to gentle massage with cocoa butter.

Very attractive plaques for the table are made of crystal and silver, with a lace or embroidery dolly between the two parts of the glass. They are round or oval, and are to be seen in a large variety of sizes and designs. The two sections of glass are held in the filigree silver frame with screws together, and the dillies are placed between the glass plaques. They are used for centerpiece, finger bowl stands and for hot dishes.

Cooked fats of meats are more difficult to digest than the fats of milk, cream, oils and nuts.

To serve two starchy vegetables, such as sweet and white potatoes, at one meal, is one form of waste.

Rice and macaroni must be boiled rapidly in a large quantity of water; slow cooking makes them soggy.

Steaming vegetables is more economical than boiling them, because there is no loss by absorption in water.

LETTERS ON LOVE AND MATRIMONY

Editor, The Press—I am a subscriber of The Press and got real interested in letters on love and matrimony. I agree with the gentleman that signed himself "Despised Farmer," that the girls—and women also—nowadays only think of a nice home and nice things in it and beautiful clothes to wear. Boys and men, be wise; think before you leap. Now, I am a widow, my age I won't give you right now, for I am always taken to be much younger than I am; but I am five feet six inches, weigh about 128 pounds, have brown eyes, dark brown hair, very jolly disposition, am healthy, work downtown every day. I am not on the list to get married—all I want is to get acquainted with some nice man as a friend. Of course, they say friendship turns to love, but I will risk that. Now, if some nice man, not over 35 or 36, tall, light complexion, blue eyes, cares to write to me would be glad to be acquainted with me, I am a blacksmith or a railroad man.

Address all letters care The Press.

Jolly Browneyed Widow.

Editor, The Press—As I have been reading your letters on love and matrimony I have become a little interested. At least enough so that I would like to say to Despised Farmer I wonder what he thinks a woman wants to get married for unless she wants to have a home? A woman that is not looking out for a home, in my mind, is no more than a tramp. One that really wants a home doesn't always expect a mansion on Cannon hill, nor does she expect to roost on the limb of a tree like an owl. I may be on the market soon for a wife myself, and believe me, I will take the one that wants a home every time, for the one that does not want one would not take care of one if she had it.

One Who Knows.

BIG BUNCH OF DEER

(By United Press Leased Wire) TACOMA, Feb. 7.—Settlers on McNeill's island are surprised at the large number of deer in the forests during the past 30 days. The migration brings to light the strange fact, vouched for by old settlers on McNeill's, Vashon, Fox and Anderson islands, that the deer of Puget Sound region go to the islands in numbers about this season of the year to bear their young. Hunters say the journey is made by the deer through an instinct that they will be safer than on the mainland.

WOMAN'S PARTY FOR NEW HAMPSHIRE

(By United Press Leased Wire) DOVER, N. H., Feb. 7.—Women will enter the approaching gubernatorial campaign in this state, and preparations are being made today for the launching of a woman's party. According to word from Boston, Mrs. Marilla M. Ricker, an attorney, has written from California, where she is sojourning, that she will accept a nomination for governor.

Mrs. Ricker, who is said to be the first woman in the United States who attempted to cast a vote, will be supported strongly by the suffragettes and the prohibition element.

THE WONDER

with shorter coats---very deep lapels---seven-eighths fitted---skirts gored and pleated---very little trimming---materials are smoother.

AND there you have it in a nutshell. There has been a great deal of talk about the Russian invasion, about very loose, bloused jackets that fit nowhere; about a belt on every suit that's worn; about skirts that have a greater yardage at the waist than at the hem, but pleated into the skirtband at the waist.

Perhaps this Russian influence will make itself felt in dresses a little later; perhaps children's dresses will follow a general Russian scheme. But American women appreciate trimness too much to adopt, for street wear, garments so loose.

Street suits for spring and summer 1910 will follow the ideas we have outlined above. Materials are not so rough, although there are some very pretty diagonals. Fine French serges and worsteds, stripes, broken plaids, mannish materials, and shepherd's checks will have the call.

Coat lengths are from 30 to 36 inches; a little fuller over the hips, and flare slightly. The great, deep lapels, many of them closing at the waist line or below it, is their strongest feature. You will find very little trimming except on lapels, which are generally plain, but sometimes of satin or moire, in the shade of the garment.

Suit skirts are of round length—their gores developing into pleats, generally knife pleats—just below the hip line. Sometimes the pleats are interrupted by folds or straps just above the knee, but they always extend from just below the waist to the skirts' hems.

Coats are not quite tight fitting; more nearly seven-eighths; very trim and dashing in these shorter lengths. Sleeves are a trifle larger, but long and close at the hand. Everything is very plain and tailored.
