The Week in Spokane Society

What Your Friends Are Doing in the Social World

Miss Howell's Home Is Scene of Afternoon Tea

The young society people and school students have indeed taken advantage of the short spring vacation. Every day this week has been marked with a dancing party and several informal afternoon teas and luncheons.

An extremely pretty appointed affair was added to the social calendar Thursday afternoon when Miss Marion Howell entertained a number of the Brunot Hall girls and her young friends at an afternoon tea at her home on Mission avenue.

The rooms were attractively decorated in a color note of red. In the dining room, red candles burned on the table and added a touch of warmth and coziness to the atmosphere where the young maids spent several hours chatting and sipping tea.

The hostess was assisted in receiving and serving by Mrs. Howell, Mrs. A. D. McDonald of Cranbrook, B. C., and Miss Eliza Howell. The guest list included Miss Francis Read, Miss Kathleen Dempsey, Miss Irene Slawson, Miss Evaro Avery, Miss Jessie Bradley, Miss Eva Alford, Miss Dorothea Wefener, Miss Dorothy Dutton, Miss Harris, Miss Ingram, Miss Gladys De Riemer, Mable Christian, Miss Gladys Dunham, Miss Julia Goldstein, Miss Gladys Greenough, Miss Lucille Robertson, Miss Eliza Howell.

Cupid's Victims Will Be Many Coming Season

There are weddings and rumors of weddings for the coming summer and fall and the society maids and young men who have been victims of Cupid this year are promising a number of smart social affairs to their large circle of friends.

There are always the prenuptial bridge luncheon, afternoon teas, musicales and receptions for the young brides to be, and stag dinners and smokers for the young men who will soon become beneficiaries.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Walsh of Chicago and Rudolph Maximilian Crommelin was somewhat of a surprise to their friends in this city.

Miss Walsh is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Walsh of 155 East Chicago avenue, Chicago. She has spent several months recently in this city with her father, who is here in the interests of the Milwaukee railroad.

The "American Rhapsodie" is written in two movements, one fundamental theme, and it occurs in different movements, in different time and keys. Two years have been spent on this work and its composition is perfectly tuneful and inspiring. This is the first time in the history of music that this style of composition has been

Knee Breeches, Powdered Wigs and Frills for Men Find Advocates Here

But Other Local Society Women Would Not Like Them— "Fascinating," Says One Girl; "Men Pretty Enough Now," Remarks Another.

BY PARA DALTON.

Merely! What a sensation Robert Guggenheim, eldest son of the great copper king has caused among the society set throughout the east by trying to revive the colonial costumes of our Revolutionary forefathers.

Young Robert recently appeared at a fashionable function at New York in the old style costume of satin knee breeches, a white shirt with a frill of cambrie and lace at the neck, a swallow tail coat of satin, silk hose and low shoes. And, above all, he wore the powdered wig. On several other occasions, in his capering attempts to bring into vogue his favored style of dress, he has appeared at dinner at the St. Regis hotel at the metropolis in the same garb, much to the amusement of the other guests of the fashionable hostelry.

The first supposition was that he was a disguised character representing some new advertising scheme, but his identity soon became known when he declared his appearance was due to the hope of his again renewing the picturesque old time costumes.

Most people say they don't like to see women use cosmetics, but young Robert evidently does. He would have the fair maids wear the powdered wigs, the beauty patches and all the powder and rouge necessary to beautify their complexion.

Maybe you are wondering if Spokane society maids would favor the suggestion. Read what some of them say:

LEAVE RUFFLES TO GIRLS. Miss Louise Clement: I can't say that I would favor the renewal of the old colonial styles for the men. They say the hair is the crowning glory of a woman's beauty, so the powdered wigs might be an addition to beauty in some respects. The men have so many other attractions to contend with, such as the check and the ruffles, they had better leave the fluffy ruffles and powdered wigs to the girls. The men look so much nicer in plain clothes.

YES, BUT NOT FOR MEN. Miss Ida Spear—Oh, I think the old colonial costumes are beautiful. I wouldn't care to see the men adopt the style of powdered wigs, knee breeches and all the other finery, and as a rule I don't believe the men favor them either, but for the women I do think they are beautiful. I think the powder and patches and powdered wigs make the homeliest persons look handsome.

WOULD REVIVE THEM. Mrs. Seth Richards—I would like the colonial style much better than the present day costumes. The Revolutionary time costumes are undoubtedly the prettiest style of dress. A hundred years from now our costumes will never be pictured. They are not picturesque enough. Powder, patch and rouge, they are certainly additions to beauty. People don't wear them much now because it isn't a custom, but there is nothing like a brilliant complexion. I think it would be quite an improvement to the appearance of the people.

FOR FANCY PARTIES ONLY. Miss Mayme Jordan—I have a mental picture of a few of the men in those costumes now. I would rather cling to the present styles, for I think they are the prettiest we have ever had. I admire the colonial costumes for fancy dress parties once in a while, but I hardly think I would want to adopt them entirely. As for the men, they are pretty enough now. I don't believe they could look better. (I am sure there was not a note of sarcasm in Miss Jordan's last statement.)

FASCINATING, SAYS MISS OWEN. Miss Marion Owen—Think the colonial costumes are a decided improvement over the costumes of today. The fancy dress of the Revolutionary days is the most becoming garb we could wear, and there is something so fascinating about the satin breeches and fancy waists, and I certainly do envy the people who wore the powdered wigs. The men have worn plain clothes so long that I feel a change would be welcomed. I would rather see the men adopt a feminine style of dress than to see the women wear mannish costumes. Powder and patches I approve of them; they bring out the features and are a great improvement to beauty.

"I've Had Not One Baby too Many," Says Mrs. George Gould in Answer to Society's Pity

Mrs. Geo. J. Gould, who before her marriage was the beautiful actress, Edith Kingdon, is one of those remarkably rare New York society women who combine charming social graces with the most devoted domesticity. In many ways she is a marvel to her friends. The mother of seven children, she is beautiful and graceful of figure and the envy of women whose years are far fewer than her own.

Her social duties, she has made her children the objects of a devoted personal care, and they themselves with their achievements and healthy beauty are the best proof of her success as a mother.

"My acquaintances have sometimes pitied me," said Mrs. Gould, "because I have had so many babies, but I have not one child too many. I have never had a child that I did not want, nor that has not found a warm welcome waiting for it. I think that is one reason why my children have all been so strong and have had such serene dispositions."

I have tried to give my children as good a start in the world as possible by giving them sound bodies. I have nursed my babies myself, except twice when illness rendered it impossible. I do not believe in sterilized milk or patent baby foods, for nothing takes the place of the food that nature intended for the child.

"In raising my children my plan has been to bring them up to be simple and hardy. They live on the simplest and plainest foods—no pies and pastry and no nibbling at candy all day for them. They have their breakfasts and lunches with Mr. Gould and myself.

"They have never caused me a moment's uneasiness, except when ill, and not a single heart-panic," because I have had so many babies, but I have not one child too many. I have never had a child that I did not want, nor that has not found a warm welcome waiting for it. I think that is one reason why my children have all been so strong and have had such serene dispositions."

Will Continue Bridge Club Another Year

The new bridge club which was organized by a number of society maids to break the quietude of the Lenten season, has proved such an enjoyable source of amusement that the young people will continue the series, at least for a time.

They will be guests Wednesday evening of Miss Edith Brownlee at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Brownlee on Eighth avenue. A number of young men will be invited by the hostess. Tables will be arranged for 16 guests.

Give Charming Affair for Brunot Hall Girls

A charming informal affair was added to last week's social calendar Thursday afternoon when Miss Francis Read, who is spending this week's vacation with her sister, Mrs. Anna Murgitroyd, entertained a number of her girl friends of Brunot Hall at an informal tea at the Murgitroyd home, 1208 Ninth avenue.

The rooms of the residence were simply but charmingly decorated for the occasion. In the dining room, where tea was poured, the appointments were carried out with a color note of red. A bouquet of red carnations formed an attractive centerpiece.

The afternoon was spent with a social chat. Among those present were Miss Kathleen Dempsey, Miss Marion Howell, Miss Eliza Howell, Miss Annabelle Vorhes, Miss Evaro Avery, Miss Gene Philbrick, Miss Dorothea Wagener, Miss Jessie Bradley, Miss Margaret Beecher, Miss Lillian Ulin, Miss Myra Scott, Miss Julia Goldstein, Miss Gladys De Reimer, Miss Rhoda Richardson, Miss Aileen Slawson, Miss Doris Taylor and Miss Beatrice Kirkendall.

Miss Helen Sengfelder was hostess at a dancing party given Tuesday evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sengfelder on Ninth avenue. The reception hall, living room and dining room were transformed into a ball room, where the young guests spent the evening with dancing. The decorations were carried out with roses, carnations, jonquils and lilies. Sixty guests were invited on the invitation list.

Mrs. Fred Dudley received the members of the whist club Tuesday afternoon, informally, at her home on South Lincoln street. A court luncheon was served at 1 o'clock and immediately following the guests spent the hours at cards.

The Hall of the Doges was the scene of a brilliant affair Tuesday evening, when the University club entertained at the first of their after-Lenten parties. About 200 guests enjoyed an evening's diversion at dancing.

Miss Emma Davenport was hostess for a pretty appointed affair which occurred Tuesday afternoon when Mrs. V. B. MacDowell entertained at a "spring shower."

The decorations were carried out in a color note of yellow and white, jonquils and daffodils being used to produce the desired effect. Thirty guests were present.

Friday afternoon Mrs. C. H. Larkin entertained in honor of Miss Davenport. The appointments were simple and attractive. A dainty luncheon was served. Covers were laid for 12 guests.

Miss Elizabeth Dillingham in celebration of her birthday anniversary entertained a number of her friends Tuesday afternoon at a box party at the Orpheum theater. At the close of the performance the party journeyed to the Palm, where luncheon was served. Covers were placed for 12 guests.

Society was well represented at the fashionable function which occurred Wednesday afternoon when Mrs. B. L. Gordon was hostess at a reception and tea at her home on Eighth avenue.

The decorations were charming in their simplicity and the affair was a decided success. Riedelsberger's quartet furnished the music. About 200 beautifully gowned women graced the occasion.

Miss Ramona was hostess on Thursday evening at a dancing party given at her home on Seventh avenue. The rooms of the residence were beautifully decorated for the occasion with spring blossoms. Sixty young friends of Miss Ramon were present to enjoy the evening.

The members of the Spokane Floral association celebrated "Daffodil day" Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Frances Burchett on Sharp street. Monday daffodils were everywhere in the decorations and in the luncheon appointments.

A musical and literary program was a feature of the entertainment. An exceptionally pretty affair of the week was the bridge luncheon given Thursday afternoon by Mrs. Preston Smith at her apartments in the Monrovia. A color note of yellow was predominant throughout the decorations. Twenty were present.

The silver tea given the same afternoon by Mrs. M. A. Phelps as a benefit for the removal of the old Cowley school house to Manito park, was a charming affair of the week's calendar.

The members of the D. A. R. were the guests of the afternoon. The young society folks and school student friends of Orion Wentworth and Frederick Child enjoyed the dancing party given Friday evening at the home of the latter on Coeur d'Alene street.

The scene of the event was a brilliant one, and about 60 guests attended and enjoyed the evening's festivities.

Miss Eulalie White to Marry R. Leslie

Invitations have been out for some time announcing the wedding of Miss Eulalie White and Mr. Ray E. Leslie, which will be celebrated Tuesday evening, April 5, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. White, at 1504 Dean avenue.

WEEK'S SOCIAL SUMMARY

Dancing! My, what a gay whirl Spokane society has had this week. Did you say we had been having a quiet, dull season? Well, you could hardly believe it possible when you glance at the past week's calendar and see every day and evening marked with a reception and dancing party. In some cases two and three dancing parties have occurred on the same evening.

The butterfly maids, past season debutantes and young society buds have certainly made up for lost time this week, in their indulgence of the gay social festivities of the after Lenten season.

One of the first and most delightful of the parties of the week was the one which occurred Monday evening when Mrs. Donald Rylie and Mrs. Frank Rose entertained at a dancing party at the fashionable Hotel Westminster. The affair was given complimentary to Mrs. Grace M. Booker, who is a guest of her sister, Mrs. Rylie.

The rooms were beautifully decorated in the spring blossoms. Card tables were arranged for the guests who did not dance. The invitation list included about 250 names of the smart set of the city.

The same night the Hall of the Doges was the scene of a brilliant affair when the Knights of Columbus entertained at their sixth annual banquet and dancing party.

American flags waved everywhere and a touch of spring was added to the decorations by a profusion of yellow jonquils and green foliage. Over 200 people enjoyed the occasion.

The younger society set were guests at the Bean residence on Seventh avenue Monday evening, when Miss Katherine Bean and Miss Ethel Holmes entertained at a dancing party. The floors were cleared for dancing and the rooms were transformed into a veritable bower of floral beauty.

Buttercups and daffodils intermingled with pussy-willows and all kinds of greenery formed an attractive setting for the young people who thronged the home. Punch and refreshments were served. One hundred guests were present.

In spite of the fact that so many dances were given the same evening the Alamo club drew its usual large crowd. About 200 guests enjoyed the hospitality of this popular club. The decorations were

Piano Recital at Methodist Church

The tenth annual piano recital of the Jefferson Street Methodist church will be given tomorrow at the church, on the corner of Sharp avenue and Jefferson street, at 7:30 p. m. The public is cordially invited.

NORTH SIDE CHAPTER MEETING

Musical Entertainment Given by the Young Ladies of Hillyard

A splendid musical entertainment was given by the young ladies of Hillyard Friday evening at Jones' hall. The program was in charge of Miss A. Newton and a number of musicians and elocutionists of the various schools in the city assisted in making the evening's entertainment a very delightful one.
