Child Eloper Asks to See Her Dolls

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 10.—Blanche Trader, the 13 year old girl who eloped to Kansas City a week ago with 18 year old Karl Jacks, spent Monday in the matron's detention room, sobbing because of her separation from Karl, and pining for the companionship of her dolls.

were taken in the Bertillon room Monday and the lovers embraced the opportunity to exchanged loving protestations of undying fealty. Jacks' father is in favor of allowing the couple to marry, but the boys' mother opposes it. The parents of the girl will not listen to such a thing. Monday they were prevented from applying for a warrant against Jacks, because the prosecuting attorney's office was closed. This gave friends of the youngsters a chance to try to influence the girl's parents to allow the marriage to proceed. Detective Callahan, who brought them back, has promised to use his influence in this respect.

Painted Hat for Outdoor Girl

Here it is, the new painted hat that is all the rage in London. The scene painter is displacing the stage carpenter, so to speak. The milliner is now doing with the brush what she formerly accomplished with "properties"—ribbons, flowers, birds and the like.

The hats are of felt, which cleans well and defies the weather. The decorations are waterproof, and will not run on the first rain. English women are wearing these hats on the golf links and in other outdoor sports, like tramping and camping.

The flowers and other decorations are painted from life by clever artists. The purchaser may choose any design she likes, and the artist in the millinery shop executes it for her.

ARABIAN NIGHTS Tales of Magic and Mystery Retold for BOYS AND GIRLS

THE STORY OF ALI BABA AND THE FORTY THIEVES

There once lived in a town of Persia two brothers, named Cassim and Ali Baba. The former was very wealthy and the latter was miserably poor. Ali Baba, who was a woodcutter by trade, was out gathering fagots one day, when he noticed a cloud of dust approaching. Suspecting that it was a band of robbers, he hastily climbed a tree and waited for their coming. They were forty in number, and each dismounted and tied his horse to a tree. Then the leader of the band made his way through some shrubs, and said, "Open sesame," and straightway a door appeared in the rock. Each passed in, and when the last man had entered the door shut tightly. Some hours later they all appeared again, and when all the men were out the captain said, "Shut, sesame," and the door closed and was only a part of the solid rock. Then all the company went away.

HE TRIED TO THINK, BUT ALL IN VAIN.

All Baba waited a while and then he came down from his tree, uttered the magic words, and entered the mysterious cave. In side the whole thing was brilliantly lighted and everywhere lay bales of rich stuffs, bags of gold and heaps of precious gems. Evidently he had found the den of very wealthy robbers. All Baba collected as much gold as he could carry in a large bag, hid it carefully among the fagots, and went his way homeward, after saying the magic "Shut, sesame." When he got home he and his wife rejoiced greatly at their good fortune, and were still gloating over it when in ran the wife of Cassim, his rich brother. When she saw the wealth spread out before them she grew fairly green with envy, but, pretending a great interest, she begged them to tell her where they got it. They, being a simple-minded pair, told her straightway. Then she flew home and told the news to her husband, and they decided that on the morrow he was to go to the cave and bring away what he could of the treasure.

Long ere sunrise Cassim arose the next morning and made his way to the robber's cave, with ten mules bearing great chests. He reached the cave, spoke the magic words, and entered. He looked greedily around the cave, and then hastened to place bags of gold at the entrance, until he had it heaped high. Then he turned to go. But, alas, the magic words of escape had gone from him, in his greed for the gold. He sat down on a bag of gold and tried to think, but all in vain. And then as he sat despairingly

Well, Here It Is Girls! The New Dance for this Winter!

It's up to the dancers of Spokane, to prepare themselves for the coming season by learning a new waltz. The tetrachorean novelty is called the Marsovian, and it is really an adaptation of the popular waltz that was so heartily applauded in the first act of "The Merry Widow." The music to which the Marsovian waltz will be danced is the same as that used in the comic opera, but it is danced differently. The dance is a combination of the polka and the minuet. The time of the music two-four. The waltz, which, of course, is not a waltz at all, consists of six movements or positions. The first position brings the lady and her partner facing each other. The next two positions result in each couple making a complete circle. Completing the third position, couples join hands for the only time during the dance and take six steps to one side or the other polka time. The fifth and sixth positions, which conclude each measure, are waltz steps and courtesies, respectively.

CHAMPION DISHWASHER GIVES SPOKANE WOMEN THE CHAMPIONSHIP RECIPE

Mary Ann Meese, aged 75 years, has been at the Tuscarawas county (Ohio) infirmary 51 years, and has been chief of the dishwashers. It is estimated that she has washed 14,000,000 dishes in her life, and no one disputes her claim to the dishwashing championship belt of the earth. "I've washed and wiped more dishes than anyone else, and I'm going to keep right on till I die; it's all I have ever done; it's all I can do." So says Miss Meese herself, and her autobiography is accordingly expressed in those three lines. And here, in her own words, is Miss Meese's recipe: "Have plenty of hot water, enough soap to make a rich suds, a clean heavy washrag and clean, dry towels. Separate the things to be washed and wash them in this order: Glassware, cutlery, cups and saucers and small dishes, greasy plates and platters, tin plates, iron kettles and pots. Scald everything. Scour cutlery and other things that need scouring after every meal. Don't have a general scouring day once a week."

SILK STOCKING; SOME STYLE ABOUT THIS SUICIDE CASE

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Mrs. Anna Schroeder, 50, formerly a domestic in the home of G. H. Pempel, 806 Fairmount place, the Bronx, committed suicide there by hanging herself with a silk stocking to a steam pipe. She was discovered by Mr. Pempel's six year old son, Ferdinand. The woman's papers show that her husband is John W. Schroeder of Mamaroneck, N. Y.

ANNOUNCEMENT Fall Millinery Opening TONIGHT and MONDAY KEMP & HEBERT take pleasure in announcing that the New Fall Millinery is now in readiness to exhibit. Your presence on the opening days, Saturday and Monday, will do us honor. French and American Models in Profusion Delightfully artistic conceptions in every new shape and shade. The large drooping styles, the close-fitting turban effects and the moderately wide hats with plumes all are here to show you. The chief charm, apart from the beautiful varieties of hats we show, is in the fact that lower prices prevail here than at the exclusive stores and on the "dearer" avenue. Our customers get finer millinery than they could get at the price anywhere else. Come and see. Kemp & Hebert The People's Store Corner Main and Washington
