How to Make Over Last Year's Clothes

No. 5. This is the fifth article in the series on "How to Replenish Your Wardrobe for $25."

BY CYNTHIA GREY. The structural lines of clothes this season are so simple that the question of altering last year's need not cause you any anxiety. First of all in favor of the old clothes, the shabby ones, is the combination of different kinds of material in the construction of gowns and suits. Then the fact that color combinations are among the newest fashions also gives you a chance to make successful alterations. Yet another economical advantage is the fact that you can veil one material with another.

Let us first talk of coats. You can wear last year's with very few changes. Add a pretty vest if you have increased in bust measure. To shorten a coat is another way to change its style. Should you have laid by for a longer time than last year, say two years ago, an e-ton coat with a plaited skirt, you might make it over into a Russian blouse suit or dress. Recut the skirt of plainer pattern—the scanner styles of today permit it—and use material left over for the tail of the blouse or skirt section of the coat. Russian blouses are extremely good looking—and as a rule, becoming.

Get a pattern of the style you have decided on; rip your old garment apart; don't handle it more than necessary—as it is apt to draw it out of shape, and use a sharp scissors carefully. Then steam thoroughly where stitches have appeared and press out plaits on the wrong side. Recut garment and make as directed on envelope of your new pattern.

Change the high closing stiff regulation notch collar, correct it and replace by a rolling collar and lapels, or even the new large sailor collar (see illustration). You can fasten it directly over the collar and lapels if it happens to be a soft rolling kind.

If the coat sleeve is shabby, finish with a cuff. Do not place it directly on wrist line, but have it reach midway between wrist and elbow. You can make it separately, and slipstitch it over the top of sleeve. To make the skirt more attractive, if it is a plaited one, place a wide band of contrasting material around the skirt five inches from the ground. This makes the skirt slimmer in appearance, without detracting from its actual width.

If you have a lingerie dress, don't think of discarding it. Veil it with chiffon voile. It will give you another party frock. A pretty lingerie blouse which has been much worn may be freshened by adding an overblouse of some sheer material (see illustration). They are prettiest when the color of the chiffon matches the cloth of skirt. You can get a pattern at your agency to cut this blouse by. Size 36 requires two yards of 36 inch material.

An old suit may be freshened up by relining it. You will require 2 1/2 yards of 36 inch material to do this. Rip out one-half of the jacket lining for a pattern. Cut a complete lining by doubling your material. Guide yourself by the lining attached to the jacket. Sew the lining together, leaving the underarm seams open. Now have 5 in one-half, fitting it smoothly, along the front and the bottom of the jacket, then rip out the other half of the old lining, and baste in the same way. Hem the new lining all around the bottom, neck and fronts.

Any fulling will go into armhole and underarm seams which should be sewed last of all. Cut the sleeve from the old lining and attach at the top and bottom, finishing the armhole first. Be sure to have the lining larger than the sleeves, so as to give plenty of room at the elbow. If your dress is made of a plaid material, add a band in a plain color which harmonizes, and it will look like new. Sew the band to the lower part of the skirt. Add cuffs to the sleeves and finish fronts with a frill. You can also set a plain yoke of a new material in the waist. Cut this in one piece without a seam on the shoulder, extending it a little low down over the arms, to give it the long flat shoulder line which is seen in new clothes (see illustration). This serves a double purpose. It will freshen the waist it worn around the neck, and allow it to be lengthened if it has become short waisted. If you are growing girls, this is an excellent alteration for you.

The sixth and last article of this series, to be published tomorrow, will show you exactly how to make a fashionable winter hat, with three models to pick from.

What Women Are Saying

"MY FAVORITE BOOK IS MY BANKBOOK. It stands for economic independence. Without it I cannot retain my self-respect. I have earned the money my bankbook represents. It means that I am not a pauper, not a beggar, that I am independent, that I do not have to sell my conscience, my opinions, my integrity, to pay for bread, or cake, or warmth, or shelter. With it I can get all the other books I need. Then I shall find sermons in stones, books in the running brooks, good in everything."—MRS. ALICE HUBBARD, wife of "Fra Eibertus."

"THIS LOVE—IT IS A VERY TRANSIENT THING. It is not a sensible reason for marriage. It is much better for wise parents to pick out good men for their daughters. If you adopted that method here you would not have so many divorcees."—MME. YENKIO OZAKI of Japan.

"A SANE AND RATIONAL IDLENESS should be mixed with every person's life. Our one great idea is to make money and seek pleasure. We never have a moment's rest. Idleness is the one quality needed to repair the damage done to the human machine by the continuous wear of business and domestic life. Men and women lose sight of the beauty and poetry of life because they are always too busy to see it. Idleness is not laziness; it is relaxation, rest, inducing a pleasant dreaminess of mind, shutting out the hurry and the worry of the world."—DR. AMELIA M. FENDLER, New York, Physician.

Cynthia Grey's Letters

Dear Miss Grey—(1) Please tell me how to dress my hair without switches or puffs. I am 22 and married. (2) Are announcement cards sent to friends who already know of the wedding. (3) Should foods be conveyed to the mouth from the end or the side of the fork? A READER. A.—(1) The center part and the low pompadour are both fashionable. Use the one most becoming. Then coil the hair very loosely in the back on a line with the top of the head. (2) They are employed only when the wedding has been private, and sent on the day of the wedding to the friends and relatives of the bride and groom. (3) Preferably the end.

Dear Miss Grey—(1) My hair is very thick, but is short. How can I make it grow? (2) What will remove India ink stain from a white shirt? (3) Is Harry Baker Eddy living? (4) Should a black and white serge suit be trimmed with black or white? COLLEGE GIRL. A.—(1) Massage with finger tips dipped in cold water and brush frequently. Don't use patent tonics—let well enough alone. Few women have thick hair and you are fortunate. (2) Oxalic acid dissolved in water. Rinse well in clear water. Use precautions, as this acid is poisonous. (3) Yes. (4) Black.

ABOUT OTHER WOMEN

In Russia women engineering students are employed by the most important firms of the country. Women land surveyors are employed by the government, and a graduate engineer is supervisor of construction in St. Petersburg. It is claimed that women have no trouble in directing workmen, and that workmen notorious for their bad manners and language behave better when under the control of women. They became ashamed of working up drunk.

There are in Mexico City 10 well-known women physicians, all having lucrative practices. The national bureau of education is composed of 15 members, four of whom are women.

SOME FASHIONABLE COIFFURES FROM TROPICAL AFRICA

Hairstyling is a fine art among the belles of West Africa. Some of their elaborate and fashionable coiffures are shown in these pictures. Maybe they will suggest some new hair stunts for American maids. The samples on the extreme right and left are in the Accra mode. The one with horns is a Creppie fair, while Miss Fuzzyhair is a Gar belle.

THE DANGER TRAIL JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

(Continued.) He made an effort to rise, but no sooner had he gained his feet than his paralyzed limbs gave way under him and he dropped in a heap on the floor. Very slowly the blood began finding its way through his choked veins again, and with the change there came over him a feeling of infinite restfulness. He stretched himself out, with his face turned to the black wall above, realizing only that he was saved, that he had outwitted his mysterious enemies again, and that he was comfortable. He made no effort to think—to scheme out his further deliverance. He was with the powder and the dynamite, and the powder and the dynamite could not be exploded until human hands came to attach a new fuse. MacDonald would attend to that very soon, so he went off into a doze that was almost sleep. In his half-consciousness there came to him but one sound—that dreadful ticking of his watch. He seemed to have listened to it for hours when there arose another sound—the ticking of another watch. He sat up, startled, wondering, and then he laughed happily as he heard the sound more distinctly. It was the beating of picks on the rock outside. Already MacDonald's men were at work clearing the mouth of the coyote. In half an hour he would be out in the big, breathing world again. The thought brought him to his feet. The numbness was gone from his limbs and he could walk about. His first move was to strike a match and look at his watch. "Half-past ten!" He spoke the words aloud, thinking of Melesse. In an hour and a half he was to meet her on the trail. Would he be released in time to keep the trust? How should he explain his imprisonment in the coyote so that he could leave MacDonald without further loss of time? As the sound of the picks came nearer his brain began working faster. If he could only evade explanations until morning—and then reveal the whole dastardly business to MacDonald! There would be time then for those explanations, for the running down of his murderous assailants, and in the while he would be able to keep his appointment with Melesse. It was not long in finding a way in which this scheme could be worked, and gathering up the severed ropes an arrowwide he concealed them between two of the powder sacks so that those who entered the coyote would discover no signs of his terrible imprisonment. Close to the mouth of the tunnel there was a black rent in the wall of rock, made by a bursting charge of dynamite, in which he could conceal himself. When the men were busy examining the broken fuse he would step out and join them. It would look as though he had crawled through the tunnel after them. Half an hour later a mass of rock rolled down close to his feet, and a few moments after he saw a shadowy human form crawling through the hole it had left. A second followed, an dthen a third—and the first voice he heard was that of MacDonald. "Give us the lantern, Bucky," he called back, and a gleam of light shot into the black chamber. The men walked cautiously toward the fuse, and Howland saw the little superintendent fall on his knees. "What in hell!" he heard him
