LOCATED in its new home, with equipment and facilities unsurpassed for convenience and completeness, The Old National Bank is prepared to offer the business community of Spokane and surrounding country, the highest type of banking service. Those contemplating a change in their banking relations during the new year, or desiring to open new accounts are cordially invited to confer with the officers of the bank, whose executive offices are in direct touch with the patrons, and no formalities necessary to obtain access. The consideration and treatment accorded to one are extended to all.

For the convenience of those who are unable to attend the formal opening this evening, or such as may wish to make a closer study of the bank's furnishings, vaults, etc., than was possible on this occasion, the banking rooms will be thrown open for public inspection every evening of next week from seven to ten o'clock. All are invited. The history of The Old National Bank has been a history of growth, as is seen by the following comparative figures:

Year	Capital	Deposits
1902	$200,000	$960,000
1904	200,000	2,965,000
1906	500,000	5,270,000
1908	500,000	7,344,000
1910	1,000,000	8,269,000

Numbering among its shareholders men whose names have been closely identified in the advancement of the city of Spokane and the Inland Empire, it may truly be called a Spokane institution.

Its policy has been one of strictest conservatism, confining its operations to the legitimate branches of modern banking. While it has been quick to adopt any measures for its advancement and usefulness, and perhaps set more precedents in the conduct of its business than any other like institution in the West, ABSOLUTE SAFETY has been, and always will be the first consideration in its management.
