SEA BORN.

I know not, I care not, that leagues of budding green,
 Of roadside and hillside stretch barriers between.
 The gray gulls skirt the interval;
 The sea mists mount the upland trail;
 And lo, beside my darkened pane,
 The minstrel sea wind, strolling bold,
 Plucks at his harp, of sunset gold,
 Till, sweeter, cleaner, echo-plain,
 The lilt of star-lit waves' refrain
 Beats on my naked heart again.

I know not, I care not, that leagues of inland green,
 Of roadside and hillside stretch barriers between!
 —Martha Haskell Clark, in Ainslee's Magazine.

A new building for the corner of Main and Alta streets is the latest announcement for Pendleton. The Fruit All the Time building on Alta between Main and Garden is just being completed. A garage is being constructed out of the new brick on Cottonwood street between Court and Alta. Plans are being worked out for the enlargement of the Elks building. The enlargement of the Hotel Pendleton is to commence as soon as possible in the spring.

The above shows the improvement and enlargement of Pendleton's business section. There is nothing like a building boom in progress or in sight. But there is substantial progress that is more than justified by the conditions.

In the resident sections the same story holds true. On the north side of the river at least a half dozen fine homes will be built this spring. New homes are also proposed in other sections of town and more or less building work is underway already. Yet there is still a dearth of houses and particularly of houses to rent. It is next to impossible for a new family to secure a suitable house to live in. This regardless of the fact home building has been underway continuously during the past two years.

The situation shows Pendleton's prosperous and thriving condition. The town is going ahead in population and in accomplishments in every direction. There is every reason to expect a continued growth in the future. There may be periods of dullness at times, but the tendency always will be in the direction of a larger and better Pendleton. This is inevitable because our basket of resources has scarcely been opened.

While the decision by the board of higher curricula may not be all that could be desired, that their scope action at least has had defined the effect of settling a long standing contention as to the status of the Agricultural College and the State University. A dividing line is set up between the two schools, the technical field being awarded exclusively to O. A. C. and the field of culture to the University.

Portland papers that were urging the curricula board to take decisive action and were upholding O. A. C.'s right to the engineering courses seem well satisfied. Commenting on the order made by the board the Journal said: "The action establishes the university in undisputed control of liberal arts and all the educational and graduate activities incident to a great institution of cultural education. It establishes the college exclusively in the field of technical education, which is the field set apart for it by act of congress by which the agricultural colleges of the United States were founded."

The action of the curricula board anticipates the initiative bill proposed by the Linn county grangers. The division of courses is on the lines advised by the state grange at Roseburg two years ago, when, after a year of investigation by a committee that body declared in favor of dividing the courses between the two institutions on the same basis that has just been ordered by the curricula board. At Albany last year, the state grange, by resolution, reiterated the declaration of the year before at Roseburg. "Under the circumstances, it is likely that the Linn county grangers will accept the board's action, and that everywhere the new order will be approved as a permanent solution of the vexed problem of higher education in Oregon."

A very similar view is taken by the Portland Oregonian as may be seen by the following:

"The Board of Higher Curricula ought to have credit for making a genuine effort to avert the embarrassment that would have followed a too tender handling of the issue between the State University and the Agricultural College as to the engineering courses. The board was impressed, undoubtedly, by the earnestness of the demand that definite action be taken. It was taken, though the method was unexpected. It solves the question of civil engineering by deciding to have no civil engineering at all.

We shall assume that this will be satisfactory to the Grange, which was against such a course at the university and threatened a referendum, and to the Society of Oregon Engineers, which was against the course at the Agricultural College and threatened a referendum. The board, unlike Solomon, did not offer to cut the engineering baby in two; but it gave, nevertheless, a finding of Solomon-like quality. There is to be no civil engineering baby.

"Now, at last, we have a conclusive official decision that the Agricultural College is to be devoted to agriculture, the mechanical arts and the applied sciences and the State University to liberal arts and pure sciences and kindred subjects."

Under this definition of the scope of work for the respective schools a civil engineering course when it is established in Oregon will go to O. A. C. for civil engineering comes under the head of applied science.

A feature of the board's ruling that will be gratifying is the fact by the action taken the state will be saved from the necessity of a referendum fight over the subject. Having just concluded one struggle for existence it is time for the University of Oregon to enjoy a little peace.

IN A MIRTHFUL VEIN

Sure Thing.
 "Yes," said the boss plumber, as he cranked up, "a buzz wagon is sure expensive, but think how many more times a day I can go back for my tools."

DANIEL COME TO JUDGMENT.
 But, judge," protested Dingley, "I don't see how you can fine me $50 on the testimony. This constable says I was exceeding the speed limit, and I say I wasn't. He hasn't brought any witnesses to substantiate his claim."

"They's suthin' in that," said the judge, "and I reckon we'll hev to compromise. You pay the $50 now."

If you want a mild cigar—don't depend upon a light wrapper. Ask for a General Arthur, which is both mild and satisfying. A light wrapper often covers the strongest and rankest tobacco. The General Arthur is mild thru and thru.

and some time, when you're passin' this way again, jest let your old car out for all she's worth and we'll call it square."—Judge.

Her Hands.
 You ask my hand in marriage. Aren't you rather ambitious?
 "Yes, but I always strive for big things."
 From that moment his case was hopeless.

DON'T GROW BALD

USE PARISIAN SAGE.
 If your hair is getting thin, losing its natural color, or has that matted, lifeless and scraggy appearance, the reason is evident—dandruff and failure to keep the hair roots properly nourished.

Parisian Sage applied daily for a week and then occasionally is all that is needed. It removes dandruff with one application; almost immediately stops falling hair and itching head; invigorates the scalp and makes dull, stringy hair soft, abundant and radiant with life. Equally good for men, women or children—every one needs it.

A large bottle of this delightful hair tonic can be had from Tallman & Co. or any drug counter for 50 cents. You will surely like Parisian Sage. There is no other "Just-as-good"—Try it now.

Two Can Push Harder Than One

That is literally true when both are pushing in the same direction.

It clearly states the case regarding the new idea of co-operative work between dealer and manufacturer for the pushing of goods advertised in the newspapers.

In this case both are pushing in the same direction towards increased sales and better service to the consumer.

It is the most practical merchandising idea that has been suggested in half a century and is another evidence of the great power peculiar to the newspapers of this country as a sales producing agency.

Advertisers long ago realized that the newspapers were the surest and most efficient advertising medium.

But they did not begin to reach the great depths of productiveness which the newspapers afforded, until the possibilities of co-operative campaigning became apparent.

This year more articles of national reputation will be advertised in the newspapers than ever before, and in nearly every instance this will be backed up by earnest exploitation on the part of the local merchants.

Announcement of change in business house

HAVING sold my hardware and sporting goods store located at 643 Main street, to the firm of Geo. C. Baer & Co., who will conduct the business at the same location in the future, I take this means of thanking most cordially my many friends whose patronage has made possible this store's splendid success.

I also wish to heartily recommend my successors, Geo. C. Baer & Co. as being a conscientious, reliable and progressive firm worthy of this same continued patronage and who in return assure your receiving courteous attention, prompt service and the best goods in their line at moderate prices.
