Rebate Practice Found.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—The Interstate Commerce Commission held to be unreasonable rates on anthracite, prepared, pea and small sizes in carloads, applicable from the Wyoming, Lehigh and Schuylkill districts in Pennsylvania to tidewater and interior points.

The anthracite decision follows the general investigation of rates, practices and regulations between the Pennsylvania districts and points on the line of the initial anthracite carriers. The decision says that the railroads, by means of truckage arrangements and free transportation to puncture in the moving regions of coal exchange by their allied coal companies, have extended the advantages of interline transportation to their coal companies to the prejudice of other coal shippers to whom interline transportation and joint rates have been denied.

The Commission fixed rates regarded as reasonable for the future and required the roads to establish through routes and publish joint through rates applicable to them. The decision also says that concessions and offsets granted by the railroads to their allied coal companies in the form of interest charges, royalty earnings, the use of this property and inadequate rentals, the free use of the carriers' funds and credit or by other means are as pernicious as direct cash rebates and are unlawful.

The idea that it is quality rather than quantity of work done by a college student that counts toward effective education has already received tangible recognition in a few institutions through the granting of extra credit for quality, says Dr. Capen.

Several prominent institutions have been reorganized and other new departments have been formed; and several others are experimenting with new types of vocational courses related to local industrial activities.

Dr. Capen mentions Montana, Kansas and Idaho as "three more states where the administration of state institutions of higher education has been further centralized through recent legislative action."

The test of true love is not absence, but propinquity.
