Stories From the War Zone

BY WILBUR S. FORREST.
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
LONDON, Sept. 2.—(By Mail.)—The war, sapping the manhood of the nation, save the babies. This cry is invading England today and almost for the first time in history the government and municipal authorities are giving the subject earnest attention. The terrible toll of the battlefields, which the casualty lists printed in the newspapers emphasize each day, has begun to make England think about the future of the race. Medical authorities are giving "Hints to Mothers" through the press, and systematic investigations of infant life in the slums are bringing forth remarkable revelations.

England's slums are the worst in the world and England's new "baby campaign" has brought this fact home to the government and people.

The medical authorities have just discovered that in Finsbury, the great slum section of London, the birth rate is greater than the average for England and Wales. But why infants here die at the rate of 115 in 1000 has also been brought to light and corrective measures are being taken. Among the many obsessions prevailing in this section, as reported by Dr. E. A. Thomas, a municipal investigator, are:

That just before and after childbirth a mother should drink gin; that maternity nurses are not necessary in cases of childbirth; that a baby cannot make enough heat to sleep in a cot by itself; that a baby must not be subjected to fresh air because it will get sore eyes; that it is unlucky to finger a baby and dangerous to cut its fingernails; that boiled bread is proper food for infants, that milk bottles should be cleaned with kerosene because "kerosene will clean anything." These, according to the investigator, are some of the contributing causes of the excessive infant mortality in England's slums, and all of these half superstitions are kindred to appalling conditions of filth and ignorance. London's slums are dirtier than any others, it is stated, and if an infant lives through the first six months it can live through anything. The fathers of these slum families are laborers, hawkers, beggars, cripples, porters, odd-work men, old men, thieves and the usual raffle. The mothers are charwomen or engaged in like occupations.

But the fathers have largely disappeared from the slums.

They have gone to war. The wives have encouraged them to enlist, in many cases because the government's separation allowance comes to more than the husbands can normally earn. With the money, the majority of the women drink, raise babies to die, or neglect. Moreover they often pawn the scant few household things for drink.

The notification of births often comes to the authorities in the handwriting of children, apparently dictated by the mother and a committee of relatives. Here is a portion of one of these notifications:

"Present at birth mother and the lady what makes the tea we don't know her adres. Say father wasn't present so he don't know about it so please excuse him but mother knows. It was a still born and not in the according to the regulations please to say if it was not I don't think."

The war is going to make these conditions in the slums conditions of the past, the authorities say. The race even in the slums must be preserved.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(By mail.)—How the news of the big war penetrated to the Arctic circle and rooted out an Englishman who has just now returned to fight was told here today.

Henry James, a subaltern, was 200 miles north of Edmonton when one day an Indian passed his camp and volunteered the information that a big war was on.

"That's all right," James answered. "Mexico and the United States are at it."

The Indian, however, insisted that it was a bigger fight.

James later struck camp and journeyed to the nearest trading post where he learned that England had been at war for months. He immediately returned to Canada and sailed for England.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(By Mail.)—A soldier correspondent writing from the firing line in Northern France, tells how a Canadian officer escaped from the enemy in his "altogether."

"I was returning from a deserted village near —," he said, "when to my astonishment I saw, leisurely strolling along ahead, a man entirely naked."

"We exchanged greetings and he told me his story. He had been captured by the Germans, stripped of his clothing and placed under guard. Eluding his guards he had regained our lines. I loaned him my waterproof and gave him a cigar that he asked for and he coolly continued his journey. I have since had the waterproof returned with a letter of thanks. He was a high Canadian officer."

Fight With Mexicans.
BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Sept. 13.—A battle with Mexicans is reported near Luedwick. Three American soldiers have been wounded. No details have been received.

COLLEGE SLAIN GARY PASTOR WAS GERMAN AGENT.

GARY, Ind., Sept. 14.—Investigating officials here continue to assert that Rev. Edmund Kayser, shot dead in his home here, supposedly by Serbian sympathizers, was connected with the German secret service and was often in communication with Count Johann von Bernstorff, German ambassador to the United States. A telegraph operator is said to have given evidence that Rev. Kayser was an important cog in the German secret service in this country.

AMERICAN EMBASSY AT LONDON IS BUSY PLACE IN WAR TIME

AMBASSADOR PAGE IS THE HARDEST WORKED MAN IN LONDON TODAY.

Average American Who Thinks Foreign Representative Has Nothing to do but Attend Afternoon Teas, Has Another Think Coming—How the Work is Done.

BY WILBUR S. FORREST.
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
LONDON, Sept. 2.—(By Mail.)—The name of the busiest American in Europe today is Walter Hines Page. To average Americans who may think that an American ambassador in London is delegated in wartime to drink cups of afternoon tea with tittering countrymen; to hand out fatherly advice when they are in trouble; to hand them money when they are "broke" and perform myriad other duties of a social nature, they have got another think coming.

For the busiest American institution in Europe today is located at No. 4 Grosvenor Gardens—the American embassy.

Here the enemy alien peoples in Great Britain, of three warring nations look for money to buy their daily food; look for advice when they need it and will look for protection when protection is necessary.

From an authoritative source, the United Press learned today that hundreds of thousands of American dollars have been needed and will in future be expended to care for the alien charges of Ambassador Page. He is the sole representative in Great Britain not only of America, but Germany, Austria and Turkey. Nearly twenty buildings in London, property of these countries, are in direct charge of the ambassador and he not only has voluminous diplomatic correspondence of his own nation to handle but the veritable "bales" of mail and telegraphic exchanges carried on with other warring powers by the kaiser, the emperor of Austria and the sultan of Turkey. To make this work possible the American embassy has increased its normal business ten fold. It has employed a round dozen of extra secretaries to do the work that fell to three before the war. It has engaged a corps of expert accountants and clerks who respectively keep tab on the manifold disbursements and file away hundreds of documents a day.

The money thus spent for England's enemies during the war will be repaid to Uncle Sam when hostilities cease, but in the meantime Uncle Sam's pocket must be the source of a never ending supply.

In addition to being in constant closest touch with the state department at Washington, the American embassy in London is also in daily communication with the embassies at Berlin, Vienna, Constantinople, Rome and Petrograd which causes the costly interchange of telegraphic correspondence at least ten times the volume of peace times. Occasionally telegrams cost the government $1.00 each.

An amusing episode was the outcome of a series of such telegraphic interchanges with the American embassy in Constantinople. It has just been learned. Ambassador Morgan, who reported to London that the Turks had imprisoned many British citizens whom they were holding for ransom, the sum of $2,000 being required in each case. The American embassy, in London, immediately communicated its information to the British government and word was sent back to Morgan that to that effect. The next message from Morgan was that he had convinced the Turks that $200 was a far more reasonable figure than $2,000 and the Turks had agreed. In turn, this fact was immediately communicated to the British government and the ransom was paid, though indirectly, for ransom is a word of which the British government takes no cognizance.

However, hard work is but a part of the troubles of No. 4 Grosvenor Square. The greatest are passports. The document, bearing the great seal of the state department, which guarantees safe conduct for American travelers in Europe, is now the most rigidly drawn of any nation, but before war was the loosest. Efficient clerks delegated to handle the passport department at the embassy have become nervous wrecks and new "hands" are constantly necessary. The passport clerk begins by interrogating the applicant as to his antecedents and must almost require proof that the applicant at some time or other had been born. After the first round of questions the liberty loving American begins to get mad. Before he has been warned out of his entire life's history, he or she as the case may be, is thoroughly mad and he or she leaves the embassy heaving coils of fire on the head of the man who are delegated to administer the affairs of America in a foreign clime.

Time tools anger, however, and invariably the applicant is back within a day or two to ask some favor of the ambassador. Nine time out of ten these favors cannot be granted because of strict rules that regulate American embassies. A favorite request is that valuables be put in the "embassy safe." One woman brought a string of pearls which she insisted should be "put away" for her until she returned. Some want mail sent to America in the embassy postbag while others would hold prolonged chats with the ambassador relating to family or business affairs. All these matters are impossible trifles. Irrespective of the smaller trifles, it has been learned that the administration of affairs by Ambassador Page for the governments of Germany, Austria and Turkey have evoked highest praise from these govern-

The Freda Seegrus Kel, an organization of young ladies belonging to the Presbyterian church which began its activities last year, held its first meeting of the fall last evening at the home of Miss Iva Black on Lewis street, and a very pleasant evening was spent by the twenty or more young ladies in attendance. Plans for the winter work and festivities were made. The club decided to join with the Christian Endeavor society of the Presbyterian church in giving a reception to all of the young people of the church on the evening of the first Friday in October. Other plans were discussed but not definitely perfected. Light refreshments were served by the hostess.

An unusually large crowd was in attendance last evening at the dancing party given last evening in the Moose Hall for the benefit of the Round-up band, and the dancing was enjoyed until a late hour. This dance really began the evening festivities of the Round-up time for, during the next two weeks, there will be dances without number to entertain the many people coming in for the annual playtime of Pendleton.

THE HUMAN BODY

USES UP MANY TIMES MORE ENERGY THAN TISSUE.

To be exact a normal person uses up five and one half times as much energy each day as he does tissue. That waste must be supplied in the same ratio, if perfect health is to be maintained.

This can be done in but one way—by eating the right food. How many people do you see going around without energy or ambition—the result of improper eating.

In order to preserve health, and stimulate energy, your food must contain protein, fat and carbohydrates. Protein builds brain, bone and flesh. Fat and carbohydrates supply heat and energy.

Oatmeal, when properly prepared, leads all foods in its combined richness of protein, fat and carbohydrates consequently it is a perfectly "balanced" food.

But all Oatmeal is not alike. H-O is the one PERFECT OATMEAL—the only Oatmeal that is cooked before it leaves the mill—the only steam-cooked Oatmeal on the market.

YOU cook H-O Oatmeal only 20 minutes in the morning—serve it piping hot, with sugar and cream. Comes nearest to supplying the "five and one-half to one" ratio referred to above. For sale by good grocers everywhere.
