CLOTHES FOR AFTER SIX PROMISE WIDE SCOPE FOR INDIVIDUALITY

NEW YORK, August 20.—Evening gowns of fall and winter season seem to promise more scope for individuality than the street and afternoon dresses which so dogmatically declare that slinkiness is absolutely the only silhouette.

It is true that the swathed effect takes little role even in evening gowns but there are a few exceptions. The very top-notch evening gown—the sort that would be torn at a blue bird ball if such a social event should happen all over again, is merely a very few yards of shiny material bound round and round the figure.

Such a model of jet over a fitted underlay of black satin is the piece de resistance of a Fifth Avenue house which specializes in "clothes for after six." Complying with the vogue for some covering over the epidermis, the sleeves of this model are of sheer chiffon and even envelop the wrist. There is no back but a long train staves for any seeming deficit. A novel note is given by a slash of tulle which floats over the hips and is caught by a wired bow as wide as the entire frock. The streamers of this slash float to the floor. A corsage of despoiled artificial roses is the only touch of color on the gown.

A similar figure-revealing gown is shown of electric blue spangles over the same shade of velvet. A fringe of orientally-hued beads falls from the bodice, shoulder straps, and over the hips. A huge bow of tulle floats from the left shoulder.

The more bouffant evening gowns are shown for the debutantes who have not sufficient maturity of bearing and face to wear the Theda-Bara gown. A charming model is shown on The Avenue of dove chiffon over coral satin. Soft bands of deepened marabou finish the top of the bodice and are used for shoulder straps. The Turkish harem effect is retained by the shirred-in skirt hem.

Combinations of net or lace with taffetas and softer silks are much in the vogue for these panned and puffed soubrette emerald, and turquoise and peacock blue abound in the debutante gowns, while black laces, nets, jet, and satin are the more mature woman's favorites.

BOARDMAN VISITOR IS DROWNED IN COLUMBIA

(East Oregonian Special.)

BOARDMAN, Aug. 20.—Claude Brown, section hand at Irrigon, was drowned last Sunday. His body was recovered by grappling Tuesday evening.

An investigation by Justice of the Peace Q. H. Warner of Boardman, representing the coroner, disclosed the facts that Brown and a companion attempted to cross the river while in bathing. Brown could not swim very well, and they started out with the help of a small log. When part way across it was suggested that they make their way without the log. When Brown's companion reached shore Brown was nowhere to be seen. He is a relative of the Chaney's of Irrigon and his parents live at Patterson, Iowa, where the body will be sent for interment.
