The Bitter Root Reserve

The limits of the Bitter Root forest reserve will be changed to exclude lands near Buffalo Hump, if Judge W. B. Heyburn can accomplish it. Judge Heyburn has returned from Victoria, where he was engaged in the Le Roi suit. He will start for Washington this week to renew his petition before the land department.

The question of throwing open the southwest part of the Bitter Root timber reservation in central Idaho has not yet been settled by the commissioner of public lands at Washington. Judge W. B. Heyburn, who is the prime mover in the agitation, returned yesterday from Victoria, B. C., where he has been for some time on legal business, and will start early next week for the east, ending up at Washington. He will appear before the department of lands and renew the argument on the question.

The application for the opening of a section of the Bitter Root timber reservation was made last July by Judge Heyburn on behalf of the Big Buffalo Mining company. He went to Washington at that time to argue the point in full before the commissioner. Under the present timber reservation law no timber can be cut on reserved land, even for mining purposes, without permission from the local land representative. "As a result," said Judge Heyburn, "mining development in the district is rendered almost impossible. The mineral resources of the part of the reserve in which the Elk City, Dixie, Big Buffalo and Newsome camps far exceed in value the timber. I question the right of the department to set aside any area of which this holds good. If they will not consent to granting us the concession we ask we shall fight the question in the courts of the right to make the reserve. If the restriction were removed mining operations would go on rapidly. I have no idea when the application will be considered."—Spokesman-Review.

In case of contagious diseases he is to be allowed $2.00 for each visit and where any visit is more than five miles from the city he will receive an additional fee of 75 cents per mile.

He is to receive $9.50 for each burial.

The Poultry Show.

The poultry show opened at 10 a. m. today. Though the first annual meeting of the Snake River Valley Poultry and Pet Stock show it takes high rank with the standard successes in this line in the northwest. A large number of birds are yet to arrive and when they are in there will be no empty coops in the big room in the Grostein building where the exhibit is being held.

The exhibit includes a great number of fine show birds. The famous "white flock" from the Hazelwood Dairy Co., arrived last night. They have proven themselves magnificent prize winners. Exhibits from Genesee and Lapwai all reached here last night and are in place. The leading varieties are Barred Plymouth Rocks, White Plymouth Rocks, White Wyandottes, Black Langshans, Black Minorcas, Hondans, Brown Leghorns, Buff Leghorns, Buff Cochins and Light Brahams.

One of the best displays in the building is the window display made by the Vineland Kennels. They have entered a Fox Terrier, a pair of English Setters, a pair of Irish Setters and a trio of English Retrievers. All these are registered dogs and represent a value of several hundred dollars. Above their quarters is the tame prairie chicken used in training them for field trails.

The exhibit will be open for visitors from 10 a. m. till 10 p. m. The Bainbridge orchestra will furnish a program each day during the show.

Send Me Their Names.

Thousands of Eastern people will take advantage of the cheap rates to the Northwest in effect every Tuesday from February 12 to April 30.

They are the lowest in years. If you have any friends who are talking of coming West, send me their names and I will have our representatives look them up—furnish them advertising matter—reserve berths—see that they have a quick and comfortable trip.
