A Good Word for Lewiston.

P. M. Davis, a prominent business man of Lewiston, is in the city for a short visit. He speaks with great confidence of the future of the northern part of the state, and states that the present is one of prosperity with all. Lewiston is going ahead as rapidly as desired by those most interested, there being a steady and continuous building in the right direction, with matters in view of even greater moment. "The first contract for street improvements is now completed," said he, "and the other is progressing satisfactorily." This is to macadamize the main street of the city for about seven blocks beginning at the bridge across the river. This street improvement adds greatly to the appearance of the city as the grade has been improved, raised where necessary, and generally made what our principal business street should be.

"The Northern Pacific railway has put in a dock and slip at Wild Goose rapids and the steamer Hannaford is now making regular trips to that place, bringing a quantity of wheat from intermediate points. This service is very acceptable to our people, as heretofore there has been no adequate transportation service. There are good mining interests in that section, too, and this service has livened this industry considerably.

"The Wenatchee Coal company was recently organized in Lewiston, composed of local and Portland capital. This company is organized for the purpose of developing coal fields in the Grand Ronde and its development will certainly attract other capital so that in a short time there will be a railroad into that section, thus giving an immense impetus to the general mining interests. There are a large number of other good properties, and all that is needed is a railroad. If the coal interests do bring transportation, and it is the opinion that they must, you will see things to do you good in that part of Idaho. The Hump property is developing properly, and indeed all the mines tributary to Lewiston are getting along nicely. "Our fruit interests are looking better than ever. One firm is forwarding large orders to eastern markets of apples and other fruits, and this industry is coming forward with great strides. Indeed I can see nothing but good in the future for northern Idaho, and with all our interest improving."—Boise Statesman.
