A GOOD CARRIAGE OFFER.

You Can Really Save Two Profits by Buying From the Factory.

THE modern way of doing business is by selling direct from the factory to the consumer has evidently come to stay. Its economy is so great that no one who has once discovered how much can be saved by such direct dealing would be willing to go back to the old fashioned way of buying, in which profits must be paid to two or more middlemen. But the new business method more than ever requires confidence in the fairness and strict honesty of the business firm and a reputation above any suspicion of unfair dealing.

The success of a firm having this kind of a reputation is illustrated in the career of the Columbus Carriage and Harness Co., of Columbus, O., which has sold direct to buyers of high grade carriages and harness by a plan of shipment direct from the factory, insuring every buyer against loss or dissatisfaction. By their plan a carriage user in Maine or Texas can buy far cheaper than at the local store, and with equal opportunity to return any article that is not satisfactory. To aid buyers at a distance this firm has prepared a large catalogue which shows by accurate illustrations and careful description exactly how and of what material each vehicle is constructed. This catalogue is a valuable guide to buyers of carriages and harness and even those who may intend buying elsewhere should have a copy on hand to consult in order to be informed what the fair factory price is before the profits of jobbers and retailers are added on. Anyone can obtain this catalogue free by writing to The Columbus Carriage and Harness Co., Columbus, Ohio.

The decline of the trees on Boston Common is now attributed to the clearing of vegetation from their bases. This practice leads to rapid evaporation of needed moisture and lessens the fertility of the soil.
