New Livery Barn.

Chas. Calhoun, formerly with Reece Alexander, has opened a new livery barn in the old West Tennessee Wholesale Grocery Co. stand on First street near the N., C. & St. L. Ry. tracks, a very large and well arranged place for hitching, feeding and boarding horses. He solicits a share of the business and offers the best treatment.

Why Call it Central School?

In his report to the school board on several occasions lately the Superintendent has referred to the Public School as "Central School." Now, as a matter of fact, there are ten or eleven blocks south and five north of the Public School. On the west there are seven or eight and on the east about five blocks including a large section from Main north to Cheatham and from Home to the east corporation line given over exclusively to the colored population, to all white school intents and purposes not in the corporation. The Public School on College street is not centrally located, so let us not call it "Central School."
