At Long Range. A gossip is never willing to repeat unkind remarks to your face. We recently heard one when accused of this try to justify herself by saying: "Gossip, madam, is a social attack conducted on the approved principles of modern warfare—you are not supposed to see the person at whom you are shooting."—Boston Transcript.

U. S. WILL TEACH ADVANCED FARMING

POST-GRADUATE SCHOOL TO BE ORGANIZED

Dr. Ball, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, in Washington, Originator of New Idea—Lectures to Be Given After Work—Course of Study to Be Established About October 10.

Scientific students at the Department of Agriculture, graduates of agricultural colleges and schools throughout the country, have banded together for post-graduate work in Washington. On October 10, or thereabout, a course will be established at the department embracing studies not pursued at any agricultural school in this section of the United States.

Dr. E. D. Ball, assistant secretary of agriculture, is the originator of the idea and will in all probability have charge of the work once under way. He has done much of the organization work, it is said, and is now negotiating with prominent teachers of scientific agriculture in this part of America in the hope that they will join forces with the Department of Agriculture in this course.

Dr. Ball states that the proposed course would be established as an unofficial graduate school; that it would not give degrees; that it would be run outside of the regular hours of the Department of Agriculture, and that those who pursue the schedules, as approved by the instructors, would defray the expenses of the institution. No name, as yet, has been decided upon for the school.

There are said to be from 2,500 to 3,000 scientific men and women employed at the Department of Agriculture.

It is understood that a committee will be in actual charge of the graduate work; that this committee will be composed of members of the student body and members of the faculty, until such time as the school is placed on a sound, substantial basis. The officials of the Department of Agriculture point out that what may become a university is not a government institution; that the money for its support will all come from the students.

Review work will be one of the most important branches of the institution, and the doors will be thrown open to men and women in other departments of the government who aspire to perfection in things agricultural.

Classes will be held two or three times a week, as necessity demands. All the lectures will not be given at night, it is understood. Some classes will start a few minutes after the routine work of the Department of Agriculture ends. The complete course in the work proposed will require a year's study.

THE SUNSHINE FAIRY.

"GOOD morning," said Father as little Henry came into the dining room. "Isn't this a nice, bright morning, son?"

Henry did not answer. He jerked his chair from the table and slid into it with a sullen air, for Henry was cross because his mother had not let him put on his new shoes that morning.

"Heavy black clouds seem to be bothering you," said Henry's father. "Better drive them away or you will have an unhappy day."

But Henry did not answer. He kept his eyes on his plate, and a frown on his face, but when he pushed his dish away from him and spilled the cream his father told him to go to his room and stay there until the cloud cleared from his face.

Henry did not quite understand about the "heavy, black cloud," but he did know, of course, that he had behaved badly, so he went to his room feeling that everyone was treating him unkindly.

"Have not got a heavy cloud on my face," he said, looking in the mirror. Then he drew the shade because someone had once told him that little fairies danced in the sunlight when it streamed into the room.

"Get out of my room," said Henry. "I won't have any fairies in here. I don't like girls, and all fairies are girls. Anyway, I don't believe in fairies, only those in picture books."

Henry was very cross as you see, and he did not want to see the sunshine, so he threw himself on his bed on his back to think over how cross everything was that morning.

All at once he heard some one crying. It seemed to come from outside his window. So Henry jumped up and peeked out.

The tiniest creature dressed in silver sat on the sill of the window crying.

"What are you crying about?" asked Henry, who really was a very kind little boy.

"I can't get in to do my work," said the little creature. "It is all dark inside and they shut me out. I am the sunshine fairy and I have to dance when the sun shines and make people happy. But how can I when they will not let me in?"

Henry raised the shade and up jumped the little fairy and danced into the room on the sunshine as it streamed in.

"Oh, haven't you any face?" asked the little creature, "or is it behind old black cloud? Sometimes he does hide faces, but I most always can drive him away."

Henry went to the mirror, and sure enough this time he found that in place of his face there was a heavy black cloud, through which he could see but dimly.

He looked at the sunshine and the little fairy had been joined by hundreds of others who were dancing about in the jolliest manner.

Henry forgot all about the cloud as he watched them, and presently a stream of sunshine cleared away the cloud and Henry jumped up, for you see he was dreaming all the time he had fallen asleep.

The wind had blown the shade and into the room came the bright sun, but Henry could not find the fairies though he looked everywhere.

"They did drive away heavy black cloud," thought Henry, "and I do feel happier. Perhaps there are some fairies in the sunshine after all." (Copyright.)

MISSIONARY SOCIETY HAS ENJOYABLE MEETING

The Women's Missionary Society of the First Methodist church had a very enjoyable meeting Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. O. McBride, with Mesdames Ed Lowenhaupt, H. B. Boyd and C. O. McBride acting as hostesses. This being the day for a silver contribution, each lady brought a silver coin, and quite a nice sum was realized.

A guessing contest was the entertainment feature. Photographs of three generations of relatives of the society were displayed and each lady was given a list numbered up to 25, with instructions to write the name for each of the photographs. As soon as all had completed their lists they were passed and the proper names read, each lady grading another's paper. Mrs. Billy Hamilton guessed 24 of the 25 and very graciously received a box of candy as a prize.

Another feature of the afternoon which was very much enjoyed was a reading by Mrs. J. R. Gill—"Marinda and the Rational Christmas."

The pastor, Rev. L. D. Hamilton, who is a frequent guest at the meetings of the society, was present on this occasion.

Ice tea and sandwiches were served to the 40 ladies present.

Music. We cannot imagine a complete education of man without music.—Jean Paul Richter.

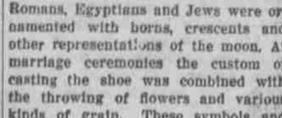

House 1,550 Years Old. The English castle, Saltwood, near Hythe, which is at present "to let," has an interesting history. It was built by Olaf, son of Hengist, in 448, and rebuilt by Henry de Essex, the king's standard-bearer, about 1100. Thomas a Becket's murderers met there in 1162 and laid their plans. In King John's reign it was the residence of the archbishop of Canterbury.

Symbols Had Meaning. The shoes and sandals of the Greeks, Romans, Egyptians and Jews were ornamented with horns, crescents and other representations of the moon. At marriage ceremonies the custom of casting the shoe was combined with the throwing of flowers and various kinds of grain. These symbols and offerings seem to indicate the propitiation of a god, probably the deity who presided over productiveness.

Horse's Action Instinctive. The reason that a horse lays back his ears when angered harks back to the days of the wild horse, when fights between wild stallions were everyday affairs. When engaged in a fight the horse's natural instinct was to protect his most sensitive organ, his ears, from the cruel teeth of his opponent. With this end in view he would lay them well back along his neck, out of harm's way.
