The citizens living in west Maryville desire to call the attention of the Taxing District authorities to the condition of the spring in the rear of Mrs. Kidd's residence, known as the Kidd Spring. This spring affords water for the greater portion of the citizens living in the Taxing District, and, notwithstanding this fact, it is in a very filthy condition, and should have the immediate attention of the street force, thereby checking such diseases that so frequently arise from the use of impure water.

A city person writes as follows: A prominent citizen of Maryville went to Montvale a few days ago, and informed a young man, who is spending the summer at that point, that his "turtle dove" had taken ill suddenly with typhoid fever, and that she was liable to shake off this tenement of clay at any time. Of course the young man was seriously alarmed, and he immediately made tracks for Maryville. He arrived at his "dona's," before the sun made his appearance, and astonishment hardly expressed his feelings when she, whom he expected to find languishing on a bed of sickness met him at the door and smilingly bade him welcome. The gentleman who carried the news is now hiding somewhere between the rivers and the ends of the earth.

On Monday evening, the 13th inst., a strange man came into the postoffice and spoke to Capt. Kirk, but was not recognized by the Captain. Whereupon he made himself known as Alfred A. Wyatt, formerly of North Carolina, and during the late unpleasantness was a member of Capt. Kirk's company. He was wounded in the same engagement in which the Captain was shot, but had not seen each other since that day. The Captain was rather incredulous and insisted upon seeing the scar where he was wounded before he would be convinced; whereupon the scar was exhibited which fully satisfied the doubting Thomas, and very hearty greetings were exchanged, and Mr. Wyatt was cordially invited home by the Captain and spent a very pleasant night under his hospitable roof where their old war experiences were fully recounted and lived over again, and the visit proved to be a most enjoyable one all around. Mr. Wyatt's home at present is Knoxville, and he returned Tuesday morning much pleased with his visit.

In Memoriam.

Died on the 7th inst., at the residence of her brother-in-law, J. P. Raulston, Miss Amanda Hannah in the seventy-eighth year of her age. The deceased was the daughter of the late Mathew Hannah, and was born and lived on the farm, or in the vicinity of where she died, all her long sojourn here on earth. In early youth and womanhood she is said to have been a woman of remarkable intelligence, and of a kind and amiable disposition. Sometime prior to the year 1830 she professed faith in Christ and united with the New Providence Presbyterian Church and lived a very pious and devoted christian life, an evidence of which is given by her surviving sister who remembers well the times that she was taken by the deceased to a secluded spot in their father's woodland, where she was in the habit of spending a season in sweet communion with God, and endeavored to impress on her youthful mind the beauty of a life of Godliness. But in the midst of this promising life, a dark pall suddenly spreads over her path, and ere long with sadness her family realizes that the noble reason that made the daughter and sister so attractive, is completely dethroned, and for fifty years or more she was destined to live in a state of aberration of mind, leading her to fancy all manner of frightful disasters as occurring around her, and in which her friends were involved, and from which she apparently believed she was under obligations to relieve them. But strange as it was she never complained of her own troubles but always of that of others, whose fancied condition rendered her miserable. But, at least, her troubles are over, and she is doubtless reaping the reward of her faithfulness while competent to serve the Lord. The funeral exercises were conducted in the Liberty meeting house on the 8th inst., by Rev. Jas. V. Iddins, after which the body was interred in the graveyard adjoining.

Ramble the hills where in youth we did stray,
When I am gone, when I am gone.
Visit the place where we oft went to pray,
When I am gone, when I am gone.

Time To Stop It.

It's too bad, Sir or Madam, but don't get frightened. Your hair is falling off—that's certain. A glance in the mirror, or an investigating committee of fingers tell the story. We won't discuss the possible cause. It is enough that Parker's Hair Balm used now will prevent further destruction. Is your hair somewhat gray, too, and crisp? Alas, yes. The Balm will give back the original color, softness and gloss. Not a dye, not oily, elegantly perfumed, a perfect dressing.
