VERO.

I. D. Jandreau & Co. will begin the shipment of oysters this week.

An impromptu dance Saturday night was well attended and enjoyed very much.

Mrs. Rufus Booth, of Fort Pierce, is visiting her friend Mrs. Roach this week coming up Tuesday.

Mrs. Jesse Jandreau visited friends at St. Lucie Thursday and Friday, returning home Saturday.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Jeffers, a son Monday morning. Tom is stepping high like the road was full of bogs.

Mrs. Prange has been seriously ill at her home on "Paradise Island," but we are glad to note that she is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Helseth and Mrs. Elias Helseth, of Oslo, were calling on friends in Vero Monday. Come again good people.

The boys are going to give the girls an oyster supper Thursday, Thanksgiving night. Probably the girls will let the boys dance some after supper.

The new fish firm of W. J. Bass, is in working order and they are gathering their share of trout etc. This makes four firms handling fish at this point.

Messrs. F. Chas. Gifford, J. S. Anderson and W. J. Bass were visitors to Fort Pierce Friday night to attend the lodge meeting, they talk like there was some thing doing while they were there.

N. O. Penny is looking for a buyer for his place near the railroad, containing six acres, all cleared, properly ditched, drained, and under cultivation; 65 orange trees growing; land suitable for either oranges, grapefruit or vegetables; nice three-room dwelling, finely located on main road near postoffice, school and depot. Mr. Penny will sell this place cheap for cash or on easy payments to good reliable people, as he wishes to build on other property nearby. Just the place for a winter home or for a man to take hold of and make a living on from the start. For full particulars write N. O. Penny.

NELSON'S FIGHTING MEN.

Had Few Pleasures and Faced Death With a Jest.

Of the "wooden walls of England," the great sailing ships in which Admiral Nelson won his victories, and of the men who worked them, a critic writes: "Though beautiful to behold and terrible to fight with, those old men of war were more often than not abodes of tyranny and wretchedness. The violence of the press gangs, which seized men of all ages and occupations, was but a prelude to the oppression that followed. Decent men were herded indiscriminately with ruffians, the rights of free born Englishmen were rudely snatched from them—for them thenceforward there was no law save the will of the captain and the dread articles of war. Shore going leave was nonexistent, the food was atrocious and scanty, punishments were barbarous, and the only thing served out with any liberality was rum, on which the men got drunk and then were flogged for that offense at the gratings next morning.

"In Nelson's time the seaman had few pleasures save the prospect of a hot fight and his daily pint of rum. But to these must be added the vainglorious satisfaction he took in his clothes. When rigged out in his best he frequently wore rings in his ears and silver buckles on his low shoes, his short blue jacket would be decorated with gold buttons and colored ribbons sewed down the seams to give an additional gayety, his waistcoat might be red or canary, and a black silk handkerchief would be knotted loosely round his throat. As the finishing touch his hair would be hanging in a cue down his back. The broad collars were first worn as a protection against the grease and pomatum used in dressing the pigtail.

"But all these fripperies were discarded when the guns were cast loose from their lashings and the linestocks were lighted. It was the custom of the men when going into action to strip to the waist. They took their black silk handkerchiefs and bound them very tightly round their heads over their ears, so that the roar of the guns might not deafen them for life. It was remarked that men going into action always wore a sullen frown, however merry they were in their talk.

"Methods followed in that day were curiously primitive and toilsome, but the results were undoubtedly satisfactory save to the nameless and numberless sailors who met grim death on the black and blood stained decks or in the dark horror of the cockpit. That those hardy and careless men often faced death or disablement with a jest or a cheer only renders their unconscious heroism the more impressive."—Chicago News.

WABASSO.

We need rain.

Our tourists are enjoying our beautiful weather.

Mrs. E. E. Smith and Mrs. J. B. Vreeland left town on the evening train Wednesday to spend Thanksgiving with friends at Fort Pierce.

Miss Nettie Coufant, of Oak Hill, Fla., and at one time a school teacher at Quay, is visiting her friend, Miss Ella Wigfield, our esteemed school teacher.

Mr. Crimmett left last Saturday for his home in New York. He is negotiating for a piece of property here and if he succeeds in purchasing will make Wabasso his home in the near future.

His neighbors and friends were greatly shocked last Saturday to hear of the sudden death of Mr. William Jones, especially as they had seen him only an hour or two before. It seems that he had gone to Sebastian in company with his son Thomas' brother-in-law, to get a boat and bring it down on the wagon. He had helped raise the boat in the wagon, but was obliged to stop several times to rest. When finally the boat was on the wagon both men got in and started for Wabasso. When about a mile south of Sebastian, Mr. Jones without a word or exclamation, suddenly leaned to one side. His companion noticed that something was wrong and ran home for Mr. Jones' son, who at once returned with his brother-in-law and found that his father was beyond all human aid, life had left the body, the cause probably being heart failure, due to over-exertion. Mr. Jones was an old and highly respected citizen, having lived probably all or nearly all his life in this section of the country. He was a veteran of the civil war. He was also a staunch member of the Baptist church on John's Island, where his body was taken and funeral services held on Sunday morning last, and where interment was made. His family have the deepest sympathies of all their neighbors and friends.

The Empire of Dollars.

Wall street is the capital of the empire of dollars. Like all other capitals, it has its intrigues, its favorites, its duels, its cabals and its camarillas, and, like all other capitals, it gives its color to those who spend their lives there. It has even a sort of patriotism—"wolf honor"—which brings its citizens together at times in defense of the dollar and of property rights. The empire of dollars is not altogether a noble spectacle. We are not thrilled at the mere thought of those Venice bankers who "financed" the crusaders. We do not like to think of those Wall street manipulators who tried to corner the gold supply during our civil war, when the nation needed gold.—Samuel Merwin in Success Magazine.

Where Vessels Have Eyes.

Painted on the prow of nearly all the junks, or Chinese sailing vessels, are to be seen huge eyes. It is believed by the superstitious inhabitants of China that if the eye, which is raised as in relief, was not there the vessel could not see where to go and would therefore come to destruction. Even if when at sea the eye got destroyed or damaged another would have to be painted in at once. No Chinaman will sail on a junk which is not adorned by an eye, and even an English passenger boat which plies between two Chinese towns has a huge eye painted on each side of her paddle boxes.

Whitman on Emerson.

I often say of Emerson that the personality of the man—the wonderful heart and soul of the man, present in all he writes, thinks, does, hopes—goes far toward justifying the whole literary business—the whole raft, good and bad; the entire system. You see I find nothing in literature that is valuable simply for its professional quality. Literature is only valuable in the measure of the passion—the blood and muscle—with which it is invested—which lies concealed and active in it.—From Horace Traubel's "With Walt Whitman in Camden" in Century.

Better Than References.

"Can you give me references from your last place?"
 "No, ma'am. The last woman I worked for was Mrs. Libby that used to live next door to you. She an' I couldn't get along at all. You don't know how mean she is. I could tell you ever so many!"
 "You may come."—Chicago Tribune.
