PORT TOBACCO: Friday Morning September 2nd 1881.

DEMOCRATIC-CONSERVATIVE TICKETS

FOR COMPTROLLER OF STATE TREASURY. THOMAS J. KEATING, Of Queen Anne's County.

The President's Condition.

Since our last report the country has been thrown into relative states of gloom and hope, by the condition of our chief executive, now lying so critically ill at the White House. The reports up to Friday were of a comparatively cheerful nature, the President's stomach having obtained sufficient strength to retain nourishment and the trouble that was anticipated from this cause was, for the time, removed.

General Wickham's Letter

The decision of General Wickham, the recognized head of the Republican party in Virginia, to act with the debt-paying Democrats of his State in the pending campaign, ought to have excited no surprise, for it was the course that an honest, sensible, practical man must have felt compelled to adopt under the circumstances in which General Wickham and his associates were placed when the Lynchburg convention went over to Mahone.

The Critics Criticized.

The physicians at the White House have been very harshly criticised—indeed, very recklessly censured; and yet they are themselves party to blame. As to their conduct of the case, newspaper criticism seems entirely out of place; but this cannot be said of their treatment of the public or their treatment of each other.

Notes.

General James F. Wilson probably be the next senator from Iowa. Colonel F. A. Conkling, the ex-Senator's brother, is suggested as a Democratic candidate for secretary of state in New York. It is said that Speaker Sharpe is talked of as the Republican candidate for governor of New York next year.

A surgeon in America that will undertake to say exactly where that ball is! The best efforts of all the eminent surgeons in charge have been addressed to this examination in vain. Not being able to determine the location exactly, they did not cut simply to explore. It would have been a culpable recklessness had they done so. In a consultation, decides that the danger of leaving the ball in the body is less than the danger of cutting it out, the public is bound to accept that decision as final. For a surgeon makes up his judgment upon a consideration of very many things. A treatment that would be proper with a patient of a certain state of health, a certain age, or certain physical tendencies, would be totally wrong under different conditions. A half dozen symptoms will be considered by them that cannot be set down in black and white. Now, this is what the surgeons every day and hour are called on to do. They may adopt measures which they know are doubtful, because not to adopt them would be even more hazardous. Having followed with absorbing interest every step in the conduct of this case so far as it has been revealed to the public, it seems but justice to say that it has been ably managed, and that the public would greatly prefer to leave the case in the hands of the present surgeons to transferring it to any of their critics.—American.

The Governor and the Registers.

The registers of voters of Baltimore city were on Monday entitled, under the law, to receive the books of registration of their several wards from the clerk's office of the Superior Court, preparatory to opening the registration offices next Monday. Nearly all the registers applied for and received the books. All of those recently on trial before Governor Hamilton had not having made any decision in their case, not having made any decision in their cases. The matter was very generally discussed in political circles during the day, and it was claimed that the possession of the books by the registers would insure them their positions, at least during the elections this fall, no matter what might be the decision of the Governor. It is contended that even if the removal of the registers should be decided upon, their successors, when commissioned, could only obtain the books by application to the courts for mandamus or other legal process. The trial of the matter would occupy considerable time, and in the event of an adverse decision the registers would take the cases to the Court of Appeals. It is not believed to be possible that the legal process could be gone through in time for the elections. The decision of the Governor is, however, looked for with interest, as, whether or not it can affect the possession of the office, it will finally settle the question as to the manner of making up the precinct book in respect to the necessity of placing residences of voters upon them as far as ascertained.—Sun.

Grant On Arthur.

Long Branch, N. J., August 31.—The attention of Gen Grant having been called to various publications, especially in newspapers, describing frequent visits on his part to Vice President Arthur and consultations with the Vice President and other public men in reference to political contingencies in Washington, he requests the announcement that there was no truth in any of the statements. He had been present at no consultation and knew of none. He had only seen Gen. Arthur since the attempt on the President's life at a brief morning call about three weeks since, and no one was present but the Vice President. He had met no one, the Generals continued, who showed a more profound and sincere sorrow for the President's condition than the Vice President. Gen Grant did not believe that there had been any consultations of the character described between Gen. Arthur and his political friends. Gen. Arthur could have no sane friend who would intrude such a subject upon him, and he is the last man who would submit to such an intrusion.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER

New York, August 30th, 1881. We hear sometimes of the good old British rule (which is alleged never to have been repealed) by which a husband tired of his spouse may try her out in the market place, with a halter round her neck, and sell her on private contract, perhaps even giving boot to get rid of her. This is a cruel and barbarous custom, and we have an illustration of this method of divorce made easy, in wealthy, if not refined, circles in the upper part of our city. A boxman married his wife, and she, in a fit of jealousy, her husband left her amid an amount of luxury while he hurried off early and came home late, delivering for dollars diligently, found an affinity in a carnal center, who had been called in to effect some trifling repairs. After several months of bliss under the rose, the husband finally paid attention to a deluge of anonymous letters that had threatened to overwhelm him, and calling the erring pair together, asked for her name, which she gave, and then philosophically proposed to sell his wife for $1. The offer was accepted, and the woman left her brownstone front with its entrance for the site of the plane shaver. She regrets lost luxury, but complains of the groutiness of her ex-husband as a consolation.

Severe winter weather is being experienced at the Cape of Good Hope. Snow has fallen in many districts of the colony. The face of Table Mountain was lately for some hours covered with snow.

Three Michigan girls with Mormon instincts recently made up a party and eloped with a favored youth. By going to three different ministers he married all of his companions, and then went on a tripartite bridal tour.

In an effort to enforce in St. Louis a law against carrying concealed weapons, fines as high as $100 for a pistol and $200 for a slingshot are being imposed. This movement is being made because out of twenty-five homicides now in jail, all but three became criminals through the habit of going armed.

Taking an Oath to Lynch Guiteau.

The New York Tribune of Tuesday says: In the woods near the village of Holton, N. J., about four miles from Newark, a party of men have been holding meetings for some evenings for some heretofore unknown purpose. On their way from the woods on Sunday night their conversation aroused the suspicions of the daughter of a farmer living near the woods. Last night they were watched. They numbered about forty and were nearly all masked. Each one swore a terrible oath, to which a heavy penalty was attached, to proceed to Washington as soon as President Garfield should die, and not leave there until they have lynched Guiteau. Ex-Sheriff Eckwold and other persons living in the neighborhood when asked last night about the affair, stated that they had been approached by men who had asked them to join their meetings but did not know any particulars.

(Readers, (Pa.) Times and Dispatch.) ART AND OIL.

The Norfolk Virginia of January 16, 1881, refers to the remarkable cure effected by St. Jacobs Oil in the case of Prof. Cromwell, known the country over for his magnificent Art Illustrations—who had suffered excruciating torments from rheumatism, until he tried the Oil whose effects he says were magical.

A Terrible Accident.

The Explosion of a Torpedo at Newport News Two Officers in Pieces. NEWPORT, R. I., August 29.—Lieut. Commander Edes and Lieut. Spaulding were instantly killed on Monday in this harbor while experimenting with torpedoes. Both officers were in the inner harbor in a torpedo launch, and were putting a torpedo into position in order to exhibit the experiment to Admiral Porter, who has been here for several days. The torpedo was to be exploded by the breaking of the electric circuit. Edes had the deadly missile in his lap while Spaulding was rowing the launch. The tide was low, and the torpedo was planted in about three fathoms of water. Near by was a steam launch with the remainder of the class under instruction on board. Admiral Porter, Capt. Selfridge and the officers of the torpedo station were on Goat Island, where the torpedo station is located, for the purpose of witnessing the experiment. Edes leaned forward to arrange the apparatus in the water, when a loud noise and explosion was heard and the two bodies of the unfortunate men were seen in the air. The bodies went into the air some thirty-five feet and with them descended the debris of the boat. The workmen employed on the station walked into the water as soon as possible and recovered all that was possible of the bodies. The class immediately returned to the island and an officer was detailed to go into Narragansett Pier and break the news to Edes, who had gone there this morning for a few days' visit. She belongs in Washington. Lieut. Spaulding was not married.

(Rural New Yorker.)

The best people will vote for the best man every time. And we judge by the number of the St. Johns Oil constituency, that it is the best remedy for the rheumatism known. Prof. Tice, of St. Louis, among other, says so.
