KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The word is now, and is known that

SCROFULA

can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earliest symptoms are eruptions on the face, Boils, Carbuncles, Eczema, Pimples, and other eruptions. It is also the cause of Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh,

AT PEACE.

BY JAMES HENRY HENDEL.

And I said, "She is dead; I could not brook

Again on the marble face to look."

But they took my hand and they led me in,

And left alone with my heart in pain.

Once again alone in that silent place,

My beautiful dead and I face to face.

And I could not speak, and I could not stir,

With love, and with love and strange surprise.

I looked on the lips and the closed shut eyes;

On the perfect rest and the calm content,

And the happiness there in her features a hint;

And the thin white hands that had wrought so much.

Now nervous to kisses or fevered touch,

My beautiful dead who had known the strife,

The pain and the sorrow, that we call life,

Who had never labored beneath her cross,

Nor murmured when she followed a wifely loss;

And the smile that seemed her lips away

Long lighted, and showed her mind that smoothed from her hair a silver thread,

And I wept, but I could not think her dead.

I felt with a wonder too deep for speech,

How she could smile and be so full of cheer,

And over her mouth I leaped my ear,

Least there might be something I should not hear.

Then out from the silence between us stole,

A message that reached to my inner soul:

"Behold, all my life have I longed for rest—

Yes, even when I held you in my breast,

And now that I lie in a peaceful sleep,

Instead of weeping you sigh and weep.

My dearest, I know that you would not break,

If you could, my slumber, and have me wake;

For you would not have been my life's bliss,

I have never till now known happiness."

Then I dried my tears, and with lifted head

I left my mother, the beautiful dead.

tone, sounded behind him.

"Ah, Mr. Hammond, I am keeping you very late. You will forgive me.

It was a workman's fault."

Bonnet, smiling, graceful, no contemptuous curl on the handsome lip, no trace of a frown upon the penciled brow.

The carriage was at the door; he handed her into it; but the white, lean, staid face of the poor seamstress haunted him all the evening, even while he walked with the beautiful

Bertha, or sat by her side at the flower-decked table, envied by many of the men for being the favored escort of the most beautiful woman present.

Long before a little girl, a child in a white slip, used to look at him with just such eyes when childish troubles made them overflow. "Rosetta," he said to himself, over and over again,

"Why should that poor girl remind me of little Rosetta?"

At an early hour they drove home.

Bertha valued that drive more than she did the ball. It gave Herbert the most favorable opportunity for a proposition. However, he did not make it. He certainly paid the conventional compliments, but there was not
