

The Port Tobacco Times

AND CHARLES COUNTY ADVERTISER.

PUBLISHED AT PORT TOBACCO, MARYLAND, EVERY FRIDAY MORNING, BY COX & DAILEY, EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS, AT ONE DOLLAR PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

Established in 1844.

PORT TOBACCO, MARYLAND, MAY 21, 1886.

Volume XLIII--No. 49.

ROBINSON, PARKER & CO.

FINE & MEDIUM CLOTHING FOR MEN AND BOYS.

STRICTLY ONE PRICE--NO DEVIATION.

319 S. E. Corner 7th & D. Sts., WASHINGTON, D. C.

J. Benj. Mattingly,

GENERAL AGENT FOR SOUTHERN MARYLAND Passaic Agricultural Chemical Works

LISTER BROTHERS, Proprietors.

Fresh Bone Super-Phosphate of Lime.

AMMONIATED DISSOLVED BONE. U. S. PHOSPHATE and CELEBRATED GROUND BONE.

THE BEST FERTILIZERS NOW IN USE

OFFICE AND WAREHOUSES Nos. 54 and 58 Bachanan's Wharf Baltimore, Md. FACTORY--NEWARK, N. Y.

I have an Established Warehouse at La Plata, on the S. & P. R. R., and have always on hand there a full line of all grades of the above Fertilizers ready for immediate delivery. References: J. H. Langley, W. M. James, Capt. Alex. Franklin, Thos. B. Deitzler, Alex. Haislip, John B. Carpenter, H. H. Owen and all who have used them.

We have a most excellent article for POTATOES and all kinds of Garden Vegetables.

SPRING

Finds me with the largest and most complete stock I have ever had of

Coach Findings, Blacksmiths Supplies and

Heavy Hardware, Comprising an immense assortment of Wheels, Wheel Stocks, Axles and Springs, Carriage Seats, Lamps, &c., Horse Shoe Nails, and Shoes, for Iron and Steel, &c., &c.

AGENT FOR "CASTORINE"

THE GREAT AXLE OIL, Sells rapidly wherever introduced. Universally pronounced the best.

RETAIL PRICES: Pones, 10 cts. Pints, 50 cts., Quarts, 50 cts. Liberal discount to the trade.

"GAUTIER" Barb Fence Wire

BEST AND CHEAPEST STEEL HARROW TEETH, ALL SIZES.

Carriage and Wagon Builders will find it to their interests to correspond with me before placing orders elsewhere.

J. B. KENDALL, 618 Penna. Ave., 619 B St., WASHINGTON, D. C.

WANTED. TO CORRESPOND WITH MILL OWNERS having facilities for furnishing Oak, Sawed Lumber, Part Shingles, Sills, etc., in car lots for CASH.

J. B. KENDALL, 618 Penna. Ave., 619 B St., WASHINGTON, D. C.

John M. Lloyd.

GEN'L AGENT FOR

G. OBER & SON COMPANY,

MANUFACTURERS OF STANDARD FERTILIZERS, AND DEALERS IN FERTILIZING MATERIALS.

OFFICE, 25 S. Gay Street, CORNER MARINE BANK BUILDING.

Factory, Locust Point, BALTIMORE.

Regular Brands:--SPECIAL NO. 1 PERUVIAN RAW BONE & POTASH. AMMONIATED SUPER PHOSPHATE OF LIME. PURE DIS. RAW BONES. PURE DIS. RAW BONES & POTASH. PURE DIS. BONE. PURE RAW GENUINE DIS. BONE PHOSPHATE. DIS. BONE PHOSPHATE & POTASH. WHITE HALL PHOSPHATE. LOCUST POINT COMPOUND. FARMERS' STANDARD MURATE POTASH. SULPHATE POTASH. GROUND TANKING AND ALL FERTILIZING MATERIALS.

Before purchasing your Fertilizers for Wheat the coming season, it will be your interest to give us a call. All the above brands are strictly reliable, because we keep in stock all kinds of the best grade material from which we can make you any grade Fertilizer you may need. This house is an old established one, and every thing they sell you as represented. As an evidence of the superiority of our goods, my sales have increased from 21 tons per annum, the first year to one thousand and eighty-five tons, this being my sales in Charles and St. Mary's counties the past year. I shall not be satisfied until I sell every responsible farmer in Southern Maryland, as it is not only for my own interest I wish to do so. My greatest desire is to induce the planters of Southern Maryland to use strictly first class goods and can only do so by dealing with a first class house. If you will buy your goods from the G. Ober & Son Company you will not regret it. Mr. W. L. Burch, at Bryanswood, or Mr. C. B. Loyd, our Collector and Salesman, will be glad to receive your orders, and I will devote as much time as I can in the two counties the coming season in order to induce the farmers of Southern Maryland to buy the best Fertilizers offered to the people of any State in Union. All responsible orders sent direct to the Company will receive prompt attention.

Yours very truly, JOHN M. LLOYD.

N. B.--What Mr. James F. Mattingly, a large and practical farmer of Choptico District, St. Mary's county, says of our Tobacco Compound: He says that he can grow as large Tobacco from other fertilizers as he can from Ours, but while Ours is just as good as to quality, it weighs from 1 to 1 1/2 more than any other Fertilizers that he has used. I will here add that Mr. Mattingly is not only a very good and prosperous farmer but strictly reliable. Mr. Mattingly has used our goods for several years and says he will use no others both for Wheat and Tobacco.

JOHN M. LLOYD.

Select Poetry.

POPPING THE QUESTION.

By J. M. H.

We sat in the light of the flames that leapt From the logs in the old fireplace, She was popping corn, and the fire's bright glow Lighted up her beautiful face. And I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

Though only a former daughter, to me She seemed like a rosy queen.

She laughed as the grains in the popper danced, Their yellow coats turning to white, And between her moist lips her teeth, And her cheeks glowing brightly, And her cheeks glowing brightly, And her cheeks glowing brightly.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

Select Poetry.

POPPING THE QUESTION.

By J. M. H.

We sat in the light of the flames that leapt From the logs in the old fireplace, She was popping corn, and the fire's bright glow Lighted up her beautiful face. And I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

Though only a former daughter, to me She seemed like a rosy queen.

She laughed as the grains in the popper danced, Their yellow coats turning to white, And between her moist lips her teeth, And her cheeks glowing brightly, And her cheeks glowing brightly, And her cheeks glowing brightly.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

Select Poetry.

POPPING THE QUESTION.

By J. M. H.

We sat in the light of the flames that leapt From the logs in the old fireplace, She was popping corn, and the fire's bright glow Lighted up her beautiful face. And I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

Though only a former daughter, to me She seemed like a rosy queen.

She laughed as the grains in the popper danced, Their yellow coats turning to white, And between her moist lips her teeth, And her cheeks glowing brightly, And her cheeks glowing brightly, And her cheeks glowing brightly.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.

And I wondered whether or not she knew How dear to me she had grown; Though perhaps she could never love me, I thought, as I gazed, that a face more fair By mortal was never seen.

That drinks the dew of the morn, While over the oak she had drawn on the earth, Pop, pop, went the burning corn.