PORT TOBACCO:

Friday Morning, August 13, 1886. The Congressional Campaign.

At the meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee held in Baltimore city last week, the times and places for holding the conventions in the several districts of the State to nominate candidates for the next House of Representatives were fixed.

The prospect in the State is a very satisfactory one from the Democratic standpoint. There is little doubt, if the apparent party divisions in some of the districts be judiciously dealt with, that the Democrats will hold their five districts intact, while there seems to be fair probability, if a strong nomination be made in the sixth district by the Democrats, that that district will also be reclaimed.

Col. L. Victor Baughman, editor of the Frederick Citizen and now President of the C. and O. canal, is spoken of as the man who can reform the district and we hope to see brother Baughman make the race.

In this district there is no doubt of the renomination and re-election of our present able representative, Hon. Barnes Compton. The ability and influence which has been displayed by Mr. Compton in the forum and in the councils of the Federal Legislature are unusual for a member serving his first term, and have won for him a well recognized distinction.

The redundancy and conflicting character of the far too numerous claims to official recognition set up in this district, have been a source of much care and anxiety to our representative, and, added to the essentially laborious character of effective congressional work, have made his duties burdensome in the extreme.

Mr. Compton's services to the true interests of the district, as distinguished from those of the politicians, have been very efficient. Many measures of importance bearing upon the material interests of our district, which had been pending before Congress for a number of years, neglected for want of an efficient advocacy, notably among them the bill for the establishment of a public building at Annapolis have been pressed to a successful consideration by the influence which Mr. Compton brought to bear upon them.

The sixteen delegates appointed by Gov. Lloyd to the Farmers National Congress, which will be in session in Minneapolis, Minn., for three days, commencing August 25th, will be a credit to the State in that assembly. They are men of intelligence and standing, fully versed in agricultural matters, and able to present in a forcible manner the agricultural needs of their section.

The following card appeared in a recent issue of the St. Mary's Beacon. It explains itself: "I have just time before your papers to press to refer to an article in the last Sunday American under the head 'He is not a kicker,' which says: 'There will be no opposition to Mr. Compton's renomination. The fight will be later. His election is a matter of great uncertainty. There are active elements of opposition in Mr. Compton's own party. George Wells, with a powerful faction in Anne Arundel, and Benjamin G. Harris in St. Mary's.' In answer to this, so far as it refers to me, I have to say, that if Mr. Compton is renominated by the Democratic party of this Congressional district, and I shall be able to attend the polls, I shall certainly consider it my duty as a Democrat to give him my vote. I would say more but time forbids." B. G. HARRIS.

The Cutting Imbroglia.

There is a perceptible and concerted effort on the part of certain Republican papers, organs of Mr. Blaine, to misrepresent the affair growing out of the arrest and imprisonment of Cutting, the Texas editor, by the Mexican authorities, and the prompt and firm policy adopted by the administration at Washington in dealing with this important question. It is said that Mr. Blaine himself is taking a personal interest in the matter. Efforts are made to show that Cutting is a man of disreputable character and to delude the people with the assertion that this government is using its great influence and power and threatening war to screen a disreputable man from punishment.

Efforts have also been made to show that the offense of Cutting, though primarily committed by publication in his paper at El Paso, Texas, was subsequently repeated by the circulation of his paper in the Mexican city of Paso del Norte. The true animus which lies at the bottom of all this is no doubt the chagrin that is felt by Mr. Blaine and his friends at the effective and complete manner in which the present administration has demolished the "aggressive foreign policy" of Blaine and his supporters. It is in bad taste indeed that Mr. Blaine, who in a time of profound peace, for the sake of political capital, almost involved this country in a causeless war with the South American States by his "aggressive foreign policy," should now be endeavoring to criticize the display of a little nerve in the protection of an American citizen in his rights of citizenship.

All efforts to impress the public mind with the danger of a war with Mexico will be unavailing, as no one can see anything but benefit to American interests to result from such a conflict. The attempt to make it appear that the gravity of the question involved is in any manner affected by the personal character of Cutting is simply absurd. The question involved is one of grave international significance with which Cutting's private character has nothing at all to do. He is an American citizen, being a citizen of the State of New York, and the question in controversy is shall an American citizen be imprisoned and punished in Mexico, under Mexican law, for an offense committed in the United States. To concede such a principle in this case would establish a precedent which in future might prove destructive of the rights and liberties of the best American citizens. No charge has been made against Cutting in the trial of committing or repeating any offense in Mexico, but, as shown by Secretary Bayard's letter to the President, the time of his arrest precluded any such offense on his part.

The only question involved is shall the government of the United States protect its citizens in foreign countries in the rights and privileges of American citizenship, and the administration has promptly and firmly decided this question in the affirmative. It is said that, under recent Republican administrations, so careless has the government been in the matter of outrages along the Mexican border, that citizens of Texas who have occasion to go over into Mexico, have been accustomed to represent themselves as Englishmen, to secure for themselves the superior respect and safety accorded to citizens of that government.

It is time that this disgraceful state of affairs had been stopped and the prompt action of the administration in that direction is fully endorsed by the people throughout the country. It does not now seem probable that any war will result; but the indications are that the matter will be peacefully adjusted by regular diplomatic negotiation. The Mexican government will recede from its position and Cutting will be released.

In an interview in the New York World recently ex-Senator Thurman, of Ohio, said he was out of politics, and that "there was not steam enough in the country to draw him into office again." But while he is out of politics, he takes as deep an interest as he ever did in the success of the Democratic party and the triumph of its principles. Being asked the opinion of the Ohio Democrat regarding President Cleveland and his administration Mr. Thurman replied: "My judgment is that Mr. Cleveland is growing stronger with his party. At first there was some complaint, I believe, because Mr. Cleveland did not turn the republicans out quite fast enough, but he appears to have improved in that respect, or the Democrats have become less impatient, for he has been gaining in strength and popularity. In judging Mr. Cleveland's administration one must take into consideration the difficulties that beset him at the start. It was not like one Republican succeeding another or a continuation of the same political succession. The Democratic party had been out of power for a long time, and Democrats were naturally a little impatient at any delay. Mr. Cleveland had demonstrated one thing, I think, to the satisfaction of everybody, and that is that he is an honest, courageous man, and intends to do as nearly right as he knows how. There is no doubt of his sincerity and his courage. People admire courage and they appreciate honesty. Knowing Mr. Cleveland to possess both, they can overlook minor defects." Mr. Thurman added that he could not see anything to prevent Mr. Cleveland's renomination and re-election.

The following card appeared in a recent issue of the St. Mary's Beacon. It explains itself: "I have just time before your papers to press to refer to an article in the last Sunday American under the head 'He is not a kicker,' which says: 'There will be no opposition to Mr. Compton's renomination. The fight will be later. His election is a matter of great uncertainty. There are active elements of opposition in Mr. Compton's own party. George Wells, with a powerful faction in Anne Arundel, and Benjamin G. Harris in St. Mary's.' In answer to this, so far as it refers to me, I have to say, that if Mr. Compton is renominated by the Democratic party of this Congressional district, and I shall be able to attend the polls, I shall certainly consider it my duty as a Democrat to give him my vote. I would say more but time forbids." B. G. HARRIS.

Samuel J. Tilden Dead.

Samuel Jones Tilden died at 8.50 o'clock Wednesday morning of last week, at Graystone, his country seat, three miles from Yonkers, N. Y. Mr. Tilden was taken ill on Sunday, and on Monday evening he was seized with a fit of vomiting, which caused him much distress. On Tuesday night he began to complain of severe pains in his loins, and it was found that gas was accumulating in his bowels. His bowels became very much distended and pressed so severely on the diaphragm that the action of the lungs and heart was seriously interfered with. Resort was had to stimulants, but the patient became unconscious about four o'clock next morning and grew rapidly weaker until his heart ceased its pulsations entirely. The intelligence of Mr. Tilden's death was wholly unexpected, although his intimate friends have known for several months that he was failing in strength very rapidly. He was completely paralyzed on his right side, and his left leg and arm were almost useless. His power of speech practically left him more than five years ago, and recently his voice, even in a whisper, has been getting fainter and fainter.

Mr. Tilden was born at New Lebanon, Columbia county, N. Y., on the 9th of February, 1814, and was consequently in the 72d year of his age. Mr. Tilden was a statesman of broad and comprehensive views and in this respect he acquired a national reputation, and he enjoyed the confidence and admiration of the people of his country in a degree that has never been surpassed by any public man. The people of his native State loved and revered him, for by the force of his honest principles and the power and comprehensiveness of his mind and statesmanship, he rid her of the degrading rule of a ring of corrupt politicians. The death of Mr. Tilden suggests the fact that the Democratic party has lost no more than four of its former candidates for the presidency within a comparatively recent period, viz., McClellan, Seymour, Tilden and Hancock, the candidates respectively in 1864, 1868, 1876 and 1880. Mr. Greeley, who was the candidate of the liberal movement of 1872, is also dead, so that Mr. Cleveland alone remains of those who have been the democratic standard-bearers since the election of 1860.

The turbulent waters of the Niagara whirlpool rapids were again navigated in a cask on Sunday, the perilous feat was successfully accomplished by two men. The voyagers were Wm. Potts and George Hazlett, two coopers, who were employed in the same shop with Graham, who made the initial trip about three weeks ago. The barrel boat was ten feet long, conical in form, and built of the best locust staves. It was supplied with a keel, rudder, screw wheel and a turret with glass covered portholes. About 300 pounds of sand ballast kept it right side up most of the time. The two men lay back to back while passing through the more turbulent waters, clinging to handles made fast to the sides of the cask. Each was likewise kept on his own side of the cask by means of a canvas sling made fast to staples. The start was made from the Maid of the Mist landing, on the Canada side, at 4:25 p. m. A rowboat towed the cask to a point just above the cantilever bridge, where it was turned adrift in the middle of the stream. The novel craft was submerged about half the time while passing through the rapids but while circumscribing the outer circle of the whirlpool its occupants thrash their heads through the opening, and Potts calmly smoked a cigar. The entire voyage occupied fifty-five minutes. The feat was witnessed by no less than 15,000 spectators.

The Democratic State Central Committee met in Baltimore last week, at Bar-num's Hotel, and arranged the time and place for holding the Congressional nominating conventions. Every county, except St. Mary's, was represented, and generally by the full membership. The time and place of the conventions was fixed as follows: First Congressional District—Ocean City, Thursday, August 26. Second District—Belair, Wednesday, September 15. Third District—Broadway Institute, Baltimore, October 13. Fourth District—Western Chimes Hall, Baltimore, October 13. Fifth District—Upper Marlboro' Wednesday, September 15. Sixth District—Hagerstown, Wednesday, September 22.

It will be observed that the dates have been so arranged as to make the campaign of this fall a short one. This is noticeably the case in Baltimore city, where the candidates in the two city districts have been given but little more than two weeks in which to work up their canvass. Mr. Frank N. Holmes has been announced in a card in the St. Mary's Enterprise, as a candidate for Congress from the Fifth Congressional District at the ensuing election, subject to the republican nominating convention. We fear, however, that the congressional bee will buzz around Mr. Holmes' bonnet for some time before he will obtain even the empty honor of a Republican nomination in this district. His "bar" has not as yet reached the required proportions, and our republican friends are on a still-hunt for another "barl."

After 164 ineffectual ballots, the Democratic Congressional convention of the 8th Virginia district, in session at Alexandria, adjourned on Saturday night last until August 25th. Gen. Lee received the highest vote recorded, which was 10,217, with a few hundred of the requisite two-thirds; but Mr. Frank Hume had a strong following in the convention and disputed the honors manfully with the others, frequently leading all in the ballots. The final result is still uncertain.

President Cleveland has reappointed James C. Matthews, of Albany, the colored man whose appointment to succeed Fred Douglas as recorder of deeds for the District, was rejected by the Senate. This action of the President shows that it is determined to stand by his colored Democratic friend. He has also appointed Dorsey Clagett, of the District, as register of wills, vice H. J. Ramsdell removed. This appointment gives general satisfaction in the District.

According to the records of the civil service commission, Maryland's quota of appointments to the classified grades of clerkships in the departments at Washington has been exhausted, and unless removals are made more rapidly than heretofore there will be no further certification of Maryland eligibles within the current fiscal year.

The President vetoed the bill appropriating $100,000 for the erection of a public building at Annapolis, which our representative Hon. Barnes Compton succeeded in getting through the House last week. The reason given by the President for vetoing the bill, was that he did not think the public needs of Annapolis justified the expenditure of so much money on a public building.

IN MEMORIAM

Died, at his late residence near Brentwood, on Sunday, July 25th, Mrs. Teresa Howland, widow of Wm. H. Howland, deceased, in the 84th year of her age. Thus from the trials of life to the peaceful slumbers of the land beyond the tomb, has journeyed one who owed to earth no mission unfulfilled. Venerable in age—yet of brave and tranquil heart—having long since passed the bound that marks the limit of the average life. Surrounded by those to whom she bore the sainted name of mother, and in rearing whose destinies she gave the training service of a mother's loyal love. She passed away life's evening just when the golden sunset rays were fading into twilight dim, and gently dropped into the dreamless sleep that knows no waking save in eternity.

In marriage and in death, through storm and calm, she was ever true to the path of duty and quiet and unobtrusive devotion to earth's cares and duties, she pursued the tenor of a Christian life. And when, at last, with wearied step she came, a pious pilgrim, to the sequestered, shadowy vale upon the verge of the great river, she lay her burden down without a murmur and with her eyes turned to the brighter shore of perpetual springtime and youth, in the flowery scenes and pathways of the spirit land.

Whether as daughter, sister, friend or neighbor, in word, in deed, or in the way of life, she did her duty faithfully and well, and in the appreciation of her friends she has left the world better than she found it. Not in ambitious walks or aims she beat her footsteps, but in the path of duty and quiet and unobtrusive devotion to earth's cares and duties, she pursued the tenor of a Christian life. Her reign was by the bedside, by the fireside, in the sanctuary of the home. Her was the ability of genuine modest worth, her's the crown of true and generous womanhood, and were such ones to whom a day's duty was a life's duty, and a life's duty a life's duty. Her's the ability of genuine modest worth, her's the crown of true and generous womanhood, and were such ones to whom a day's duty was a life's duty, and a life's duty a life's duty.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a child, we used Castoria. When she became Miss, she used Castoria. When she had children, she gave them Castoria.
