FRUITS OF RECIPROCITY.

Those people who think that there is necessarily a loss to the extent of the excess of what we buy from a country over what we sell it will gain but little consolation from the treasury returns of our trade with those countries with which the late lamented administration had, with much flourish of trumpets, negotiated reciprocity treaties. Mr. Blaine clung tenaciously to this theory of trade. He was not surprised at a stringent condition of the money market, because the returns of trade showed that we "had dropped $40,000,000 into Cuba" in our dealings with her; that is, we had bought that amount of her more than she had bought of us. It was with the express purpose of preventing this that Mr. Blaine forced on an aversive congress the reciprocity features of the McKinley act. That proceeded on the theory that if we could get the other governments to tax their people less on what they bought of us they would buy more, and sell us less, of course.

The treasury report for February gives the amount of increase or decrease of imports and exports with those countries with which treaties have been negotiated since the date when they went into effect. The "dropping" process does not appear to have been checked to any very encouraging extent. While there has been a net increase of our exports amounting to $16,408,435, there has been a net increase of our imports amounting to $120,935,581. According to the Blaine theory then, we have made a net loss of $104,527,156 in our dicker, in spite of our efforts to make our trade relations really reciprocal, that is, dollars for dollars. Meanwhile we have been about $9,000,000 out of pocket annually because of the rise in the price of our coffee, resulting from the imposition of a tax of three cents a pound on that imported from Venezuela and Colombia, because those benighted countries refused to make their people pay more for the goods they bought of us. The Globe trusts that President Cleveland has not permitted the engrossment of his time by the seekers for place to make him forgetful of the fact that he can revoke President Harrison's taxation-by-proclamation at any time. If he has, the coffee cups of the country should rattle him into remembrance of it.—St. Paul Globe.

A BOB-TAIL FLUSH

"Bob" Dunn has made his report of investigation into the Mille Lacs pine land affair. He submits with it the portion of the testimony which he wishes to bolster up his assault. He omits some, and omits to mention that he refused to receive more. His report is signed by himself and Fleming, sometimes dubbed "Judge." The three other members make a report dissenting from the conclusions, and differing somewhat in the evidence. The house adopts the majority report and rejects "Bobs."

It is reported, but on an authority for which the Globe does not vouch, that "Bob" is ambitious to receive the Republican nomination for state auditor next year. He has "four of a kind" in hand in the little game, all clubs. If he could draw one more of the same kind in this investigation, he would hold a winning hand. The auditorship is in the jack pot, and "Bob" would rake it in. If this is the case, and again the Globe only bases its comment on a rumor more or less reliable, then it is clear that "Bob" has met the luck usual in such a draw. His investigation gives him only a spade. He has, for all his pains, only a measly bob-tail flush.

The testimony on which "Bob" flushed was a sort of bob-tail flush affair; it didn't fill expectations. There was Goss, the lumberman who wanted to buy the pine, and was willing to give $4 a thousand for it, after it was sold. Goss was very indignant that the other fellow should have got so good a bargain, and wanted a share of it. It was very wrong for Smith to get the better of the state unless Goss had a slice of it. It is evident from his letter to the land clerk—and which, by the way, "Bob" forgets to mention in his report—that his zeal for the state arose solely from being denied a share. In this letter he says, in his own original, lumbering way, that "I want the mater fixed up, or we see that Smith don't Hall this timber this winter twelve thousand is too much to take from the school fund and give to one man the N. W. quarter will due me." Dunn stated in debate that there isn't a lumberman who won't steal pine. This unique letter shows the foundation for "Bob's" opinion.

Then there was his other precious witness, Praat, the cruiser, who swore that the pine was worth $4 a thousand. It is a hard matter to decide whether this fellow is a knave or a fool, or a cross between both. He was one of the men sent to appraise the pine on this land for the state. He was sworn to appraise the pine at its full value. He made a sworn report that its full value was something less than $2 a thousand. When confronted with this formal appraisal he very coolly said that the appraisal was only a "startling price."

And it is on the testimony of such men as this Goss, who said "the N. W. quarter will due me," and this Praat, who swore to a falsehood either as appraiser or as one of "Bob" Dunn's witnesses, that the latter would smirch the reputation of Auditor Biermann. The house did well in sitting down so decidedly on "Bob" Dunn and his bob-tail flush of an investigation.—St. Paul Globe.

One of the most scandalous instances of the abuses of partisan power and the official use of it, is afforded in the career of Gildert A. Pierce, editor of the Minneapolis Tribune. There was a vacancy at the beginning of the present year in the position of minister to Portugal, and Pierce, who was a friend to Harrison, wanted to make a trip to Europe for the benefit of his health. He was appointed minister to Portugal January 6, and he took almost the last of his thirty days allowed in which to start for his post of duty, departing February 4, just a month prior to Harrison's retirement. He sailed and wheeled around to most of the chief points of interest in Europe, and finally arrived at his destination March 7, three days after President Cleveland's inauguration, and the only official duty he performed was to send in his resignation. He had made a trip through Europe at the expense of the government from January 6, and never gave the government a day's services.—Hutchinson Democrat.

The eminent Horace Mann once said: "If a father wishes to leave his son a legacy that will endure while life lasts, let him send him to an institution where he can obtain a general practical education, and he will have the satisfaction of knowing that he has given him what is better than houses, lands and farms, and even gold and silver; these things may suddenly take wings and fly away, but his knowledge will last while life and reason exist." Parents the words of Horace Mann should appeal to every one of you, and in response to them you should have your boys and girls take a course in the Little Falls Business College where a practical Business Education can be obtained. The Spring term will open Monday March 20th. Day and Evening school. Reduced rates to students entering Monday.

Burlington Route Trains.

For about seven years past our readers have seen in our papers the bright "locals" of the Burlington Route, setting forth the many advantages offered by that railroad as a route from the Northwest to Chicago, St. Louis and other prominent cities. Much attention has been given to these notices and many of our patrons have asked us when these trains leave Minneapolis and St. Paul, when they arrive at destination, and what are the accommodations. Here is a brief answer. The morning train leaves the Twin Cities every day, except Sunday, and its equipment consists of baggage cars, coaches and reclining chair cars—seats free. By this train a view can be had of 350 miles of the finest river scenery in America. Dinner can be had at La Crosse, supper at Savanna, and the train reaches Chicago in the evening in time to connect with several trains for the East. Passengers by this train reach Galesburg at 9:50 in the evening, where connection is made with fast Burlington trains for Kansas City, St. Joseph, Omaha, Lincoln and Denver, and also arrive without change at St. Louis next morning in time to make all connections. The evening train leaves every day in the year, and with its reclining chair cars (seats free), Pullman regular sleepers and Pullman compartment sleepers, all lighted by compressed gas, is one of the most luxurious and splendid trains in the United States. Passengers for Chicago arrive there at 9:00 a. m., connecting with all lines to the East, after a sumptuous breakfast in the Burlington peerless dining cars, which are attached to the train at an early hour. Passengers for Peoria arrive there at 11:40 a. m.; for St. Louis arrive in that city about 6:00 p. m., (meals being provided for in a Pullman buffet car) in ample time for supper and to connect with trains leaving for the south, southwest and southeast. If you want the finest train accommodations, the smoothest track, the most beautiful scenery, and the most courteous attention insist that your home ticket agent sell you tickets via the Burlington Route. ### Houses at the World's Fair.

There is no reason why anyone should be deterred from visiting the World's Fair by reason of possible inconvenience and uncertainty attending the securing of satisfactory hotel accommodations. The Northern Pacific Railroad will in due time publish low excursion rates to Chicago and return for this occasion, while its double daily passenger train service which has through sleeping cars of both classes (Standard and Tourist) to Chicago, will as usual be at the head of the list in every particular.

To help you in fixing in advance upon your place of residence while attending the World's Fair, we have placed in the hands of our agent at your station a book compiled by perfectly trustworthy parties, called "Homes for Visitors to the World's Fair." This little book which you can purchase for fifty cents contains a list of about 9,000 private families who accommodate visitors in Chicago during the time of the Fair; viz: May 1st to October 30th; gives their names and addresses, and number of rooms each will have to spare. The book also gives a list of hotels and their locations; has twelve full-page large-scale maps, each representing a section of the city, so that with this information before him the intending visitor himself can, at leisure, select the quarter of the city in which he would prefer to stop, corresponding in advance with one or more families in that locality with regard to rates and the accommodations desired.

The Habit of Variety.

An eminent contributor to the Philadelphia Public Ledger writes: "In all the affairs of life it is well to cultivate the habit of variety. To mingle with people having different tastes, opinions and pursuits, is better than limiting ourselves to those only who are strictly congenial. To see other countries, states and cities, with their various distinctive features, is better than always remaining at home. To know something of other standards of right, and other ways of life, is better than limiting our vision to our favorite point of view. The benefit of all this will be specially manifest in mature life and in old age. It will keep the sympathies warm, the feelings fresh, the open to improvement, and thus while the years bring the richness of experience they will also bring the continual delights and benefits of a wide and generous outlook."

In seeking this variety, use the peoples popular line—the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul—the oldest and best patronized railway in the Northwest. Four elegant passenger trains each day from Minneapolis and St. Paul to Milwaukee and Chicago. The only line running the famous electric lighted, vestibuled and steam heated trains.
