Here is a remedy for ridding plants of insects, such as slugs, green flies, leaf hoppers, thrips, mealy bugs, etc., that will be found generally successful. But four things enter into its composition, quassia chips, soft soap, kerosene and water. These ingredients should be combined as follows: One pint quassia chips; steep these for an hour or more in a gallon of hot water. One pint home made soft soap, made from wood ash lye; add a gallon of hot water and the gallon of quassia water, and beat this till you have a strong suds. One teaspoonful of kerosene oil; add this and thoroughly emulsify it with the suds. To this add two gallons of water, thus making four gallons of the remedy. Apply with a good sprayer or sprayer. For all purposes, indoor and out, this is the most effective insecticide that can possibly be used. It is said to never fail in its work, but, of course, it should be used carefully.

The Sun set for June opens with a $1,000 prize novelette entitled "The Middle Course," by Mrs. Poultney Bigelow. Mrs. M. E. W. Sherwood contributes to the number a very timely article, "The Wandering American," that will prove interesting to all European travelers and would-be travelers. A humorous and intensely readable story is "The Van Kuyper Verdict," by Fauny Gregory Sanger. Harriet Prescott Spofford writes a strong psychological study, "The Conquering Will," and a unique and fantastic $100 prize story is "In My Wife's Eye," by John Regnault Ellyson.

Embarrassment appears to be the natural concomitant of matrimony. At least this is true in the incipient stages. Invariably, however, there is a contrast between the relative composure of the man and woman. Both are nervous but never both at the same time. If they come a week beforehand to make arrangements she is rattled and he is cool; while on the day of the ceremony she rises to the occasion and he sinks under it. Thus, I have never seen a bride who was scared. I have never seen a groom who was not.—Rev. D. M. Steele, in The Ladies' Home Journal for June.
