If the people would stop and think how much time they spend in running after their cattle during the summer and then not knowing where they are most of the time if they had a pasture they would know where to find them without running all over the country. It is pretty hard for a new settler to put up a fence around every little piece he breaks up or plants something, and if he does not put a fence around every patch it will keep him busy chasing other people's cattle day and night to save his crop. We hope things will change at the election next spring. Everybody should bear in mind to keep his cattle home after Oct. 1st.

10,600,000,000—Pennies

The United States has minted over 10,600,000,000 pennies and yet they disappear like pins, no one knows where they go. Despite the vast number in circulation there is a constant shortage. Around the holidays and at Fourth of July millions of small boys are hearing their pennies and the rest of the world has a penny famine. It might be said right here that this is about the only sort of famine Golden Grain Belt beer will not relieve. If you are thirsty and hungry this beer refreshes and nourishes you at once. Keep a case on hand and use it regularly to get the most pleasure and greatest benefit from it. Order of the nearest dealer or be supplied by Joseph M. Ledoux, Little Falls.
