Remove the incentive to graft, and graft will disappear.

The president's efforts toward peace between Russia and Japan are worth more for real progress than all his talk about the big stick.

The Wellington, of Maryland, is out of office and out of mind, but now comes Bonaparte, of Maryland, to occupy the center of the stage for a while.

The bride of the German crown prince pronounced the word "obey" in the marriage service. Maybe she didn't mean it any more than the average bride does.

The people at large should prepare for a great looking. The bureau of engraving and printing delivered 77,000,000 stamps to the post office department last week.

The federal party of the island of Luzon met in Manila the other day and resolved that they wanted immediate independence. "Such an ungrateful people it is yet," as Mrs. Katzenjammer would say.

Get the fortune—disease how you got it afterward, for then you will have it anyway. If you stop to think about methods in the first place you may not get the fortune. This seems to be the argument now fashionable.

The democrats elected a congressman in West Virginia to succeed Mr. Dayton, appointed a federal judge. It is the first democratic congressman elected in that state since 1894, but there isn't much significance otherwise.

What on earth the Norwegians want of a king, just as they are through with one, is a mystery. Norway is an intensely democratic country, with no hereditary nobility. It would seem a land and people well suited for a republic.

Piracy was once considered stately business, and many a proud English commercial house was founded on the spoils of adventures of the sea. Doubtless a few in those days protested against such a method of getting wealth, but very likely were rebuked with the statement that those were common methods, and all who wished could use them.

The new secretary of the navy was so much an anti-imperialist that he opposed the action of Harvard college in conferring a degree on McKinley. He is so independent that his antagonists claim it is a disease with him, and he is known as "Soup-house Charley" in Baltimore because he said that free education was as much a charity as a soup house. He may last as long as Morton to the cabinet.

The Mississippi state agricultural college refused the offer from Carnegie of $25,000 for a library building. They said that they did not want a building "built up and furnished by this money which has been coined from the blood and tears of the toiling masses, demanding the unity of self-respect which we cannot afford to pay." And a great many people are likely to sympathize with that utterance.

No evidence has ever been presented, statistical, economic, social, or otherwise, to the effect that an increase in the daily hours of labor was a mark of industrial progress—rather the reverse. Every writer on political economy, no matter what school of thought may be, nails the general reduction of the hours of labor which occurred during the last century, as one of the great events for good in the development of mankind.

The greed of capitalism, and the fever of exploitation which instead of calming down, "gets worse" day by day, is making more socialists than all the arguments by the apostle of a new social dispensation. And if the greed and the exploitation continue, no power, no matter from where it comes or by whom wielded, will prevent the people from putting an end to the reign of privilege and the fictions of vested rights which are vested wrongs.

The control of the Equitable by the Ryan syndicate puts one Wall street group in place of another. There is nothing very reassuring about it to policyholders. It is about time for the national government to concern itself in the insurance problem. It would be one of the ironies of fate if the big old line companies, which have been persistent in advocating stricter control and supervision of the fraternal, should, on account of their own faults, become subjected to rigid supervision by the national government.

If everything goes well, Norway will be an independent nation for the first time in hundreds of years. Every achievement of this kind is a sort of leaven which works on other nationalities. The broad plains of Hungary feel the ferment and it will not be strange if Ireland feels a renewed and strong impulse toward independence. In the true and best sense, therefore, Norway, a small nation, is a world power. Whether the separation from Sweden was politically wise or not, it was a move toward independence, and as such affects every struggling nationality on earth. That kind of world power does not need fleets and armies to accomplish results for the good of mankind.

The Irish Standard seems to think that the good citizens of Hibernian extraction in this state have not been rightly treated by the powers that be. Possibly this refers to the turning down of Mr. Walsh, who wanted to be a member of the grain appeals board. The Standard ought to look around throughout the state, and it will find hundreds and hundreds of men of Celtic blood, honored, and deservedly so, by their fellow citizens. One of the most influential men in the state administration is certainly Hon. T. D. O'Brien, and he is but one of many connected with the "powers that be." The capital of the state is in the control of men who have, because of their blood, the right to belong to the A. O. H. Every municipality in the state has children of Erin among its respected citizens, and it would require a great deal of space to enumerate the positions of trust and confidence that they occupy. If the Standard meant that there had been some failure in recognition on the part of the state administration, it should specify.

AS TO GOLD PRODUCTION.
It is the opinion of all those who are well informed on the subject that the world's output of gold for 1905 will be a record breaker by a large majority, surpassing 1903, which showed the largest output of record up to that time, and also the yield of 1904, which, when returns are all in, is expected to beat the previous year named, says Farm, Stock & Home. Commenting on the situation, Mr. Roberts, director of the mint, says:

"A great increase in the production of gold means the coining of a proportionate number of coins. There is no limit set by law upon the amount of gold that may be put in circulation. No amount of gold production could lower the value of money, so long as the law says that a gold coin shall consist of a specific number of grains of metal. An increased coinage means more money in circulation. The banks will have more money to lend and currency will be more easily secured. There is no immediate danger of a fall in the price of gold."

In 1896 talk like this would have put a man into the ranks of the 50-cent-dollar-free-silver-cranks-and-repudiators at once. Yet this talk is sound. So long as laws of all nations unite to maintain a certain price for an ounce of gold that price will not fluctuate, no matter how much of the stuff is produced. That being true as to gold how can it be false as to silver, or wheat, or wool, or any other product? The little quotation given reveals also why the moneyed interests of the country put up millions of dollars in 1896 to buy the consent of the people to the establishment of the "single gold standard": for abundance of money, ease of getting it by borrowers, and low interest rates, are what the money lords put up their money to buy exemption from. And they would have got the exemption if Mother Earth had not given up hitherto unknown stores of gold to increase a money supply that the money lords thought they were preventing by forcing silver into the family of base metals.

Piles

In order to prove to you that Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment is a certain and absolute cure for any form of itching, bleeding, or protruding piles, the manufacturers guarantee a cure. You can use it and if not cured get your money back. Mr. Casper Walton, laborer, Michigan City, Ind., says: "I work hard and lift a great deal. The strain brought on an attack of piles. They itched and they protruded and bled. Nothing helped them until I used Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment. That cured them." 50c. a box at all dealers, or Dr. A. W. CHASE MEDICINE CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment.

Colonel Wm. Colville, the "Chevalier Bayard" of Minnesota's union troops during the Civil war, the leader of the celebrated charge of the First Minnesota at Gettysburg, was found dead Wednesday morning in his room at the Soldier's home at Minnehaha, where he had been resting while preparing for the flag day ceremonies at St. Paul. The death of the brave old soldier, just as he was about to attend the reunion of his comrades, is a dramatic finish to a dramatic career. Colonel Colville was of the highest type of the citizen soldier loyal in civic duties as well as brave and fearless in war. His name will be ever dear to Minnesota.

Traits of Women.
The woman who looks as if she would not hurt a fly is the very one who would face mice, cockroaches and sudden death without more than a first involuntary shudder. It is she who will effect a daring rescue or a startling collapse, she who in emergencies does not wait timorously for Johnny to get his gun, but gets it and uses it herself.
