Bryan is stirring things up lively—for a dead one.
 John A. Johnson's prospects for reelection, always good, grow brighter as election day approaches.
 With Roosevelt in the senate, it would be great to see the pitchfork and the big stick get together.
 Mrs. Alice Fongworth's husband is running for congress again, and has quite a fight on his hands. Nick should have let Alice run.
 Hearst is scoring the vested interests of New York. He stands for something positive, which attracts people who don't like him.
 John A. Johnson's rise under tremendous obstacles to be governor of Minnesota is a better advertisement of the state than A. L. Cole's depreciation of Minnesota.
 In speaking of Gov. Johnson's Long Prairie speech the Todd County Argus, p. p., says: It must be acknowledged that his speech made an impression upon the audience and he doubtless made votes by his visit.
 Frank Eddy is having a hard time convincing republicans that they must swallow every bitter dose prepared for them. That's an aged doctrine. It was men who voted a split ticket that made Eddy a congressman, and he need to praise their independence.
 Cole's record as an opponent of pension legislation, testified to by reputable citizens of Motley, and his bitter remarks on the men who wore the blue, ought not to commend him very highly to any old soldier in Morrison county or anywhere else. Any old soldier interested should write to E. R. Tuttle, of Motley, a member of the G. A. R., a republican who can testify to Cole's opinion of the veterans of the Civil war.
 Headline in Duluth Evening Herald, October 16:
COLE'S MEETING A FROST WHILE JOHNSON IS GIVEN AN OVATION EVERYWHERE.
 Johnson Meeting With Largest Audiences in State's History.
 That's right, Cole is a frost, and when election comes Governor Johnson will "cut the ice". Cole doesn't cut any ice now and after November 6 he will cut still less.
 Minneapolis, the metropolis of the northwest, is achieving notoriety through many channels, but how about "the man that shoots"? For two weeks the resident districts of the Mill City have been terrorized by a bold bad robber man who seriously wounded one of his victims, and not yet has he been captured, although a large force of police officers are at work on the case. From all indications, it would seem that the "man that shoots" might be one of Dumas' creations or—on the other hand—his characteristics might be those of "The Tribune's Mysterious Mr. Sly."

FROM MILLE LACS LAKE
Nathan Richardson Writes of Trip to Popular Resort

TO THE HERALD:
 Feeling like getting out and getting the benefit derived from a little fresh air, I determined to take a trip out to Mille Lac lake. I had my picked up team hitched up to take me out, and for fear of getting lonesome invited Mr. Hyson to go with me, which invitation he readily accepted.
 We started at 10 o'clock a. m., and consumed two hours in reaching Pierz where we done justice to a good dinner. We were soon on our way again enroute for the beautiful lake. We reached Mr. Rucker's place at the second crossing of Skunk river in due time, where we were royally entertained. Mr. Rucker is a pensioner, and incidentally mentioned that among other things he learned to play cribbage while a soldier, and entertained the idea that he was the champion player of the state at that game. As there was no counting board at hand I had no opportunity of convincing him that he might be laboring under a false impression. Mr. Rucker had threshed and said his wheat went twenty and his oats forty bushels to the acre.
 We got an early start Saturday morning and reached the outlet of the lake at Vineland and put up at the Kathio hotel, kept by Mr. Tompkins. The town as well as the hotel should bear the name of Katho as that was the name of the Sioux capital which was said to contain 7,000 Indians and which was destroyed by the largest army of Chippewa Indians of which we have any account in about 1750.

Immediately on driving out the Sioux nation the place was occupied by the Chippewas' and has been headquarters for the Indians living on the Mille Lac reservation ever since they drove out the Sioux. It is a beautiful spot; slightly elevated above the lake for some distance back, and contains an extensive burying ground which has been plowed up and used as a garden since it has been occupied by white people. Most of the Indian graves were very shallow, many of their bones are plowed up and although some of their greatest chiefs were buried there; no one looks after their grave since the most of the Indians have been removed to the White Earth reservation.
 On Sunday morning we hitched up with the intention of driving around the lake, but gave up the idea on hearing that some of the road on the east side of the lake was not very good and contented ourselves by driving out to a little Indian village on a point that extends to within a short distance of M. M. Williams island, which shows off beautifully from Vineland about two miles distance. At this village I met one of the old time Indians named Jack-a-gaw-bo who has been up to White Earth and returned because the country don't suit him. As I had forgotten the name I was known by among the Mille Lacers, I asked him to tell me what it was. He said it was Che-back-we-na-ne—which means lawyer, as I had been attorney at one time many years for them. On returning back to the main road we followed northwest to the farm of E. E. Dinwiddie, an old settler living on what is called Wigwam bay. He has a beautiful place, raises stock principally; raises tame hay for his stock. The road to his place is hard to beat. It is nicely turnpiked all the way and he said it was about the same all the way around the lake.

 We got back to Tompkins at a quarter past eleven, and made ready for our home journey, getting away at one o'clock. We came by the way of Sullivan Lake. We turned west at the school house about two miles from the lake, and found some bad road for about six miles when we came into the old road that was some better but quite hilly and rough much of the way. We saw several lakes before reaching Sullivan and also several Indian trails made from lake to lake and places where they had camped on the lake shores.
 We came across but few settlers in the town bearing my name, but those I did not seem glad to see us and were glad to shake the hand of the man after whom their town was named. After skirting about Sullivan and meeting a Mrs. Ford who seems to be very much attached to the lake, and who seems to be a very intelligent man to be living what seemed to be the life of a hermit, and getting our bearings from her we took the road that seemed to lead in the direction we wanted to go, and pulled up to the front door of Mr. Kramer's at six o'clock and spent a pleasant night at his place. At nine in the morning we were on our way and struck home as the mill whistle blew for noon.
 We failed to even see a fish at the lake—much less to get a square meal of them. As soon as the fish begin to bite there will be no better place to go for a little recreation than Vineland.
 Yours truly,
 N. RICHARDSON.

 Wireless Telegraph in Germany. The wireless methods of communication are making more rapid progress in Germany than elsewhere. A new station has been established at Oberschonwede, which will place Berlin and Dresden in communication over a distance of 111 miles. Several other stations already exist. There are reports of a project for installing at Nordreich a wireless system of long distance telephoning.
