

CLOSES MANY SALOONS

Judge Morris' Ruling May Have Wide Effect All Over State

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 16.—Judge Morris' decision in Duluth, holding that the law forbids the sale of liquor in Indian territory covered by the treaty of 1855, has placed in jeopardy the liberty of every saloon-keeper in that territory.

According to the opinion held by Mr. Dickey, assistant United States district attorney, prosecutions can be started against every man selling liquor in the territory covered by that treaty.

The section of the penal code covering these cases is one of the most peculiar in the federal statutes. It provides that, upon conviction of selling liquor, a man may receive as a minimum punishment 90 days in jail with a fine of $100. No maximum punishment is noted in the statute, being left entirely to the discretion of the judge. The presiding judge in such cases could give life imprisonment if so inclined.

Just what action will be taken against the saloon keepers in the Indian country could not be learned as United States District Attorney Houpt has not returned from Duluth.

It is believed, however, that the saloon-keepers will be given an opportunity to quit business, and if they refuse to avail themselves of the clemency thus extended, wholes ales prosecutions will be started.

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 16.—All the saloons in Duluth may be closed and the sale of liquor be stopped as a result of the decision of Judge Morris in the federal court.

According to Judge Morris' decision territory once set aside by the United States government as Indian territory remains so until congress, by special enactment, decrees otherwise. The settlement of the tract by white men does not invalidate this ruling.

The decision was in the case of C. E. Johnson and nine other United States deputies, arrested for raiding saloons in Mahanomen county, on the White Earth reservation.

Judge Morris released the men, claiming that the county was still Indian territory, and that the men were simply doing their duty.

Exactly the same conditions apply to Duluth, it is claimed. Officers of the civic league have long held that this is still Indian territory, and that the sale of liquor can be stopped here.

CITY COUNCIL MEETS.

At a meeting of the city council Monday morning, at which Aldermen Kiewel, Bastien, Robie and Hall were present, the bond furnished by A. B. Trebiatowski for a liquor license was approved. A letter from W. R. Watson & Co. of Winnipeg was read. This related to the refund on the taxes of lots 1, 2 and 3, block 22, Thayer's addition. The company states that an agreement was made with the city, when the late E. E. Rothwell was agent for the company, whereby the city was given the use of three lots for the West side hose house on the condition that it pay current taxes. Since 1904 the taxes have not been paid by the city, and the company asks for a refund for five years on same. The matter will be investigated.

A motion was passed that the street commissioner construct a cement crossing between blocks 17 and 18, the matter having been approved by the board of public works.

SWANVILLE CHILDREN SEND $3.42.

St. Cloud Times: The pupils of the Swanville graded school today sent $3.42 to C. F. Macdonald, as their contribution to the John A. Johnson Memorial Fund. This is a generous amount considering the size of the place, and speaks volumes in compliment of the pupils. What a touching tribute to Gov. Johnson is these little amounts from the schools, representing the pennies and nickels of Minnesota children.

FIRST NUMBER DECIDED SUCCESS.

The Evelyn Bargelt Concert company, the first of the course to be given this winter under the auspices of the Star Lecture Course, entertained a large and enthusiastic audience at the Congregational church Thursday evening of last week, the main auditorium being packed to its utmost.

The program presented by this company was an exceptionally fine one, and brought forth rounds of applause. Encores were called for almost every number, and were responded to with numbers which received still other recalls.

Miss Bargelt's work as reader and crayon artist is wonderful, and she became at once a prime favorite with her audience. Her enunciation was clear and distinct, and her pathos in reading "Pardoned" marked her out as one of the leading entertainers.

The illustrations were of a very artistic nature, and were done with few and rapid strokes. Some of these and her readings called forth peals of laughter from the audience.

Joseph. Stezl's rendition of the "La Traviata" by Verdi was excellent, showing him to be a true musician. His accompaniment was also good. Leon Batchelder's flute and piccolo numbers took especially well with the audience, and with Wm. Clifford's, a fine tenor, vocal and trombone solos rounded out a very fine musical program.

It is safe to say that should the Evelyn Bargelt Concert company appear in this city again, its success will be even greater.

It is all very well when you have nothing to do but to kill time, to talk about keeping the boys on the farm, but you might as well spend your time spitting at a crack. Boys will stay on a farm as well as anywhere, if they receive decent treatment at home.

The boy who yanked out of bed by the hair, kicked out to milk and cuffed in to breakfast, as a preliminary to being roped through in the field all day, is not likely to be consumed by his love for the glories of agriculture nor his sire. Give the boy a fair show, and he'll stay with you till the cows come home. If you are so mean he can't stay at home, don't you go to your neighbors with a hypocritical snaffle and tell about your boy's ingratitude after you have raised him.—Ex.

SCORED 85 POINTS

Locals Overwhelm Sauk Centre High School Football Team Saturday

The local high football squad obtained a glorious victory over the Sauk Centre high school eleven Saturday morning, when it defeated the boys from the branch by the tremendous score of 85 to 0.

On the defense, the line was a veritable stone wall and the ends spoiled many of the opposing team's plays before they could be successfully put in action; and on the offensive, they could not be stopped. When an opening was wanted through the line, Roberts and Stoll could always be depended on to make one, hitting the line with telling effect.

What helped more than anything else to bury the Sauk Centre team under an avalanche, was the exceptionally fine interference put up by the home squad, and the success they met in the executing of the forward pass.

Three touch-downs were made though the forward pass, besides much ground being covered in this manner at other times. End-runs were also great ground-gainers for the home eleven.

A feature of the game was Richard's run through a broken field from one end of it to his opponents' goal for a touch-down. He got the pig skin on the kick-off and started down the field behind an excellent line of interference, which he left when in a short distance from the goal, dodging the last one of his opponents and scoring the touch-down. The back-field was fast and aggressive and made many gains. Longley's boot made itself evident by kicking the pig skin between the up-rights, in nearly every instance being successful at goal kicking. Dunphy and Gordon ran the team very smoothly.

At the end of the first half the score was 23 to 0, and the locals added 33 more in the last half. Most of the substitutes were given a chance in the game.

The Sauk Centre team was a little lighter and a great deal slower than the locals, and from the first it was evident that they stood no show at all. Eddy, their left tackle, had his back strained in the game and was removed from the field.

DISINFECTING SCHOOL BOOKS.

In France physicians have devised a scheme for disinfecting and cleaning school books. A machine sucks the dust from the leaves and automatically bathes them in a disinfectant, and in a great dryer, something like a modern clothes dryer, such as used in laundries, the books are dried. When you are dry remember that you can wet your whistle with golden grain belt beer. It invigorates, and should be kept in your cellar for daily use. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by E. S. Tanner, Little Falls.

Feeding Farm Hands.

Every farmer's wife knows what tremendous appetites farm hands usually have; but while they eat well they work well, too.

Here's a good suggestion about feeding farm hands. Give them plenty of Quaker Oats. A big dish of Quaker Oats porridge with sugar and cream or milk is the greatest breakfast in the world for a man who needs vigor and strength for a long day's work. The man that eats Quaker Oats plentifully and often is the man who does good work without excessive fatigue. There is a sustaining quality in Quaker Oats not found in other foods, and for economy it is at the head of the list. Besides the regular size packages Quaker Oats is packed in large size family packages, with and without china.
