ABBIE BEN ADHEM

Abbie Ben Adhem, pretty as you please and dressed as neatly as one ever sees. One day was absent when her friends began to turn such absent ones beneath their feet.

"She paints!" vowed one and sadly shook her head.

"She fairs!" another, with a shudder, said. "I've heard that so and so and so and so," a third declared, and all cried, "Well, upon my word!"

And so in half an hour poor Abbie's fame, as well as reputation and once honored name, was torn to tatters, and her friends declared she was the sort by whom fool men were charmed.

And that if they were she they'd have more pride than to give cause for rumors denied.

In fact, they came to the conclusion then that Miss Ben Adhem should not be again held in their friendship as she once had been.

But that she should be spurned with glances keen.

And that, while some reports might not be true, of course "a person never really knew!"

The next day these same friends met to a list of those who should be asked to while away an afternoon at tea and whist. And each one then prepared her lengthy list.

Suggesting who to ask and who to snub. For it, you see, was an exclusive club.

And who, think you, was most important guest? Lo, Miss Ben Adhem's name led all the rest!

—Wilbur D. Nesbit in Life.

Not Encouraging.

Dr. Young—I feel very much discouraged over my practice.

Dr. Elder—Cheer up, my boy. You must have patience.

Dr. Young—Well, I hope I know that much. If I had patience I wouldn't be discouraged.

Why He Was Late.

Pat was late again, and the foreman was dealing out the usual reprimands. "Nine o'clock," he said. "What do you mean by coming at this time of the day? I wonder a man of your means troubles about coming at all. Now, then, what's your excuse?"

Pat considered for a moment, and at last the excuse came.

"Sure, sor," he said, "I dreamed last night I were at a football match which ended in a draw."

"What about that?" interrupted the foreman.

"Well, sor, the referee ordered an extra half hour to be played, and, begorra, I only stopped to see the fish."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Spilled the Story.

Tattered Terry—I'm a newspaper man, but I can't get a job.

Lady of the House—Indeed! Why not?

Tattered Terry—Yer see, I saved a train from a terrible accident once, and all de editors have been sore on me ever since.—Puck.

Merciful Provision.

Blobbs—At the next station we stop ten minutes for refreshments.

Slobbs—I wonder why trains stop only ten minutes at railroad eating houses.

Blobbs—Probably for humane reasons.—Philadelphia Record.

Ruling Passion.

"I knew Butts' smoking would get him into trouble."

"Well?"

"At his wedding, when it came to the ring part, he reached into his pocket and handed the minister a match."—Princeton Tiger.

Baby's Picture.

Willis—What! Your kid is three years old and has never had his picture taken?

Gillis—No; the first couple of years the photographs are all baby and no clothes, and after that they are all clothes and no baby.—Puck.

Also Pocketbook Conservation.

"Why don't you have your daughter's voice trained? She has a voice of fine timbre."

"Yes, but I'm for forest conservation."—Kansas City Times.

What Decided Her.

Arthur—They say, dear, that people who live together get to look alike.

Kate—Then you must consider my refusal as final.—Christian Register.

The Proper Cut.

Student—Want my hair cut.

Barber—Any special way?

Student—Yes; off.—Williams Purple Cow.

Pessimism.

I try to hope, and yet it seems a futile, foolish thing to do. My bad dreams are the only dreams that ever manage to come true. —Chicago Record-Herald.

Wednesday evening the second study club party was given at the home of Mrs. A. C. Wilson in honor of the "husbands." Supper had been arranged for seven o'clock, at which thirty-six were present to do justice to the menu. A party of this year's study having been on Norway and Sweden, it was thought fitting to use the flags and colors of these respective countries for decoration. There were three tables—one equipped in red for Norway, one in blue and yellow for Sweden, and the third in green and white, representing the Study club colors. Flags of each country were in evidence in the various rooms and the score cards were also dimly lit with the respective colors of Norway and Sweden. The hall was lined with American flags and bunting, which, together with plants and cut-flowers in the many rooms, gave a very brilliant and pleasing effect. After the inner-man had been refreshed and the debris of the supper tables removed, "500" provided entertainment for a time, and then the honored guests were escorted home.
