

PIONEER VISITED HERE.

H. L. Gordon, who resided in Minnesota from 1857 to 1900, taking active part in the pioneer work of the state, visited here the latter part of last week as the guest of C. B. Buckman. Mr. Gordon was well-known here in the '60's, having tried many cases in the Morrison County court house building, which now stands on First avenue, southeast opposite the city hall. He later engaged in the lumbering business with headquarters in Minneapolis. Hole-in-the-Day and Little Crow were numbered among his friends, and he has seen the rapid development of the country from their time to the present date. Mr. Gordon now makes his home in California.

Willis Boudreau went to Minneapolis Saturday to accept a position as stenographer.

Miss Edith Dugas of Minneapolis was the guest of honor at a dinner given by Miss Noella Duclos at her home on Third street northeast last Saturday evening at 6 o'clock, at which the members of the G. U. B. P. were present. Games were played and a general good time had.

James Lakin was struck in the back of the head by a piece of lumber coming down the chute, while at work at the box lumber chute at the Pine Tree saw-mill Saturday night, the piece of lumber having struck the edge of the cart and glanced on him. His scalp was cut so that several stitches were necessary to fix him up.

Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Warren, who have been visiting in California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho and other parts of the West during the past several months, returned last Friday, after an enjoyable trip. Mr. Warren, whose main purpose of this was for his health, feels much improved.

When they left Couer d'Alene, Idaho, the big forest fire was within a few miles of that place, but was checked by the rains. Mr. Warren states that there was much suffering as a result of this gigantic fire.

Southwest Darling

Aug. 31.—There was a heavy frost last night, the garden stuff, corn and potatoes suffering to some extent. Farmers are busy cutting hay in Sections 30 and 31. War broke out, as they all wanted the most hay. John Regnell hauled a load of lumber Tuesday to August Blomquist's, and we understand that a number of Mr. Blomquist's friends, who will help him build a new house, were responsible for it. Mr. Blomquist was quite surprised and wishes to express his thanks to all.

A number of farmers are cutting their corn. All the youngsters are back with pa and ma. No place like home. Hunters will soon be around, but most of the game has already been killed in these parts.

Lars Johnson, who has returned from Sweden, says that places there are too high, and will stay in Darling for good. Parker and Grumble Corner had fires last Saturday, but the rain put them out.

The mayor is sick. Worked too hard at Grumble Corner last week. Misses Bertha and Emma Zillich will take in the state fair next week. Charley E. Anderson of East Darling was lost last Sunday in the big swamp in section 31. He wants the supervisors to put up guide boards or he will do it.

Mrs. Julius Abrahamson and family have moved on her father's place and will run the farm. Farmers have commenced plowing. Only ten need threshing done, so that this will soon be over.

C. W. Bouck Picked for Winner

Charles W. Bouck returned from a several days trip through Little Falls, Brainerd and the northern part of the district the first of the week and brings glowing reports of the progress of his candidacy for representative. He finds the sentiment growing stronger in his favor in almost every locality, owing to the natural trend of public opinion.

The voters of today demand a careful business management of all public affairs and nowhere is this needed more than in the legislature. As a careful and pains taking business man Mr. Bouck may well claim distinction. He has made his own way in the world, rising steadily from a farm and railroad day laborer to the ownership of several fine farms and a large hardware and implement business. This has been attained by keen judgment. His business success has been built upon an unswerving honesty that none have ever questioned, and in this he has built a foundation upon which rests the respect and admiration of all acquaintances.

Mr. Bouck moved from Iowa to Brainerd thirty years ago and was employed as a bridge carpenter for the Northern Pacific several years. This experience gave him an insight into the conditions as they exist among the laboring classes on the railroads and in the shops. He has since kept closely in touch with these people and anxiously awaits an opportunity to put into effect, thru legislation, plans for the betterment of many conditions that are at present needless and unjust.

A wide and varied experience on farms of several states has given Mr. Bouck a range of ideas on this subject that fits him particularly for the important work of the coming legislature, regarding agricultural interests, conservation and good roads. These questions of live public interest doubtless affect the welfare of our country more than any other and the future prosperity of the state depends in a large measure upon the manner in which they are treated by the law making bodies. To carefully consider them, men of proven ability and sound business judgment should be selected, and no other plea should be so strong in favor of C. W. Bouck.

The voters may safely trust a man who has made a success of his personal business affairs. Individual success attained by honorable methods insures an energetic nature and a capacity for hustling, and these are essential for a representative. The foregoing are among the reasons given by the voters throughout the district for their interest in and support of Mr. Bouck's candidacy and expression of opinion that is manifested everywhere in his behalf.—Royalton Banner.

What Napoleon Couldn't Do.

An incident connected with Napoleon when he was in exile in Elba is commemorated on the island to this day by an inscription affixed to the wall of a peasant's house. A man named Giacomi was plowing when the famous exile came along one day and expressed an interest in his work. Napoleon even took the plow handles and attempted to guide it himself, but the oxen refused to obey him, overturned the plow and spoiled the furrow. The inscription runs thus: "Napoleon the Great, passing by this place in MDCCCXIV, took in the neighboring field a plow from the hands of a peasant and himself tried to plow, but the oxen, rebellious to those hands which yet had guided Europe, headlong fled from the furrow." —St. Louis Republic.

MILO N. YOUNG. Candidate for the Republican nomination for representative from the 48th legislative district, comprising Crow Wing and Morrison counties. A social will be given at the brickyards by the Epworth league this evening, convenances leaving the Methodist church for the brickyards at 7:30.

Brain of the Bee.

In a German scientific periodical C. Jonsescu gives the results of his studies of the brain of the bee. As might be expected from its wonderful instincts, this is found to be very complex. The various divisions of the brain are described in detail, but perhaps the most interesting part is the comparison of the brains of queens, workers and drones. The worker has a larger brain than the queen, and as the difference between queen and worker is the result of diet during the grub stage it appears that the food which develops size of body and fertility is not best for the growth of brain. The "royal jelly" as a mental stimulant is a failure. In the drone the brain is not larger than in the worker, but the optic lobes are large, corresponding to the large eyes.

Didn't Wait the Attack.

At Boulogne during a royal reception some years ago a number of English ladies in their anxiety to see everything pressed with such force against the soldiers who were keeping the line that the soldiers were forced to give way and generally were, as policemen say, "lundered in the execution of their duty." The officer in command, observing the state of affairs, called out: "One roll of the drum! If they don't stand back kiss them all!" After the first sound of the drum the ladies took to flight. "If they had been French," said a Parisian journal, "they would have remained to a woman."

A Tale of Heroism.

"I went for a bath yesterday," said an Auvergnat. "I had been in the water some time when I suddenly perceived an enormous shark advancing toward me with its jaws open. What was I to do? When he was a yard off I dived, took out my pocketknife and ripped up the monster."

Parplexing.

Territorial (his first experience as sentry, going over his instructions)—"If any one comes along I say: 'Halt! Who goes there?' Then he says, 'Friend,' and I say, 'Pass, friend; all's well.' But some silly ass'll say, 'Enemy,' and then I shan't know what to do. Rotten job, I call it.—Punch.

Indignant.

The mayor of a small town had come to Leipzig to see the fair. A stranger who had lost his way asked him, "Pray, good honest man, what is the name of this street?" "I am not a good honest man," said the former; "I am the mayor of Marburg."

Distinction, if No Difference.

"Why do you want to marry my daughter?" "I'm no object of charity; I wouldn't accept your money in any other way." —New York Press.

Superfluous.

Rollingstone Nomoss—Wot does "superfluous" mean? Tatterden Torn—A bath robe an' a cake of soap.—Phila delphia Record.

Queer, but the man who doesn't need credit is the one who can most easily get it.—Portland Express.

Egyptian Maxims.

An Egyptian papyrus which dates back to about 4000 B. C. has the following injunctions: "Calumnies should never be repeated." "Guard thy speech before all things, for a man's ruin lies in his tongue." The wise men of the race early learned good sense.

TRICKY ART DEALERS.

Astute Parisian Scheme For Booming a "New Master."

For the booming of a new artist an astute dealer is necessary. He catches his artist as young as possible, preferably at the autumn salon of the independents' exhibition, and commissions him to paint 100 pictures a year. One by one, occasionally in twos and threes, at judicious intervals the dealer sends the pictures to the Hotel Drouot for sale by public auction. There he has confederates, who raise the price at each sale, and he buys them in himself.

After a few months the young artist's canvases have a certain market value, and the next step is taken to turn their painter into a modern master. The critics are attacked. One of them is asked to look at some daub, and when he cries out with horror the dealer says: "What? You don't like it? Take it home with you as a favor to me, live with it six months and then!"

In due course an art amateur calls upon the critic and cannot contain his admiration for the new artist's picture.

"What a masterpiece! The most modern thing in art I have seen for a long time!" he exclaims.

Doubt begins to invade the critic's mind, and when one or two more enthusiastic amateurs have visited him he is worked up to writing a column of panegyric on the new master. The amateurs are, of course, sent by the dealer.

One or two articles and the boom is in full swing. Wealthy and simple minded collectors, remembering how other painters have been decried in their early days and how their works later have commanded fancy prices, rush in.

The new master makes about 10 per cent of the profit and the dealer the other 90 per cent. The new master is at the mercy of the dealer. If he grumbles the dealer floods the auction rooms with a hundred or so of his masterpieces and orders his agents not to bid, the result being that the canvases sell at rubbish prices, and the boom is burst.—Gil Blas.

LONDON THEATERS.

They Charge From a Penny to Sixpence For a Bill of the Play.

At the London theaters when the young woman shows you to a seat she asks if you wish a program. If you do you pay sixpence in the orchestra or dress circle for a program handsomely printed on fine paper. The price ranges down through "thrillpence" and "tuppence" as the galleries ascend to a penny in the cockpit. The quality of paper and the general artistic merit of the program decline with the price, but exactly the same information is conveyed for a penny as for sixpence. The fastidious theater goer might prefer to pay a dime for a neat and simple program rather than to have a bulky bunch of advertisements gratis, as in New York, but these London programs, although not so thick as those of New York, are not devoid of advertisements. This gives the purchaser the feeling that he is being worked at both ends. A lady reminds me, however, that a program in a New York theater costs her 10 cents, as the sneaky printing rubs off on her white gloves, the cleaning of which costs a dime.

The quality of the performance at the better London theaters certainly averages no higher than that at similar theaters in New York. The music halls are the resort of the great middle class. These are great auditoriums with tier on tier of galleries, the seating capacity ranging perhaps from 3,000 to 5,000.—London Letter in New York Sun.

The Roman Tribune.

The tribunes in ancient Rome represented the people in much the same way that the house of commons does in England and the house of representatives in this country. For a long time the patricians or aristocrats of Rome had everything their own way. But when the plebeians (or, as we would say, the "plain people") got their tribune the reckless tyranny of the patricians ceased. The tribune had great power. He could veto almost any act and nullify almost any law passed by the Romans. Liberty among the Romans dates from the time the first secured their tribunes.—New York American.

Friendship's Tribute.

Gladys—Did you see what the society column of the Daily Bread said about Nin Gillard the other morning? "She moves with ease and grace in our most exclusive circles." Maybelle—Yes, I read it. It's dead certain that the editor who wrote that had never seen her on roller skates.—Chicago Tribune.

Against His Convictions.

"Have some of this Welsh rabbit Bjonson?" asked Bjonson as he stirred the golden concoction in the chafin dish. "No, thanks, Bjonsoney," returned Bjonson, patting his stomach tenderly. "I am unalterably opposed to all corporation taxes."—Harper's Weekly.

Off Again.

"I met your husband in town. He was very much elated." "The villain! He told me he would never take another drop."—Houston Post.

He who would do a great thing well must first have done the simplest thing perfectly.—Cady.
