

MANY HEAR LINDBERGH

Takes Hard Rap at the "Old Order of Things"

Congressman C. A. Lindbergh made clear his position on congressional matters and what he considered as his duty as a servant of the people, last Saturday evening when he addressed a large audience at the court house, the court room being taxed to its capacity.

He stated that while he believed in parties as a means to obtain good measures for the people, he did not believe in party government as exemplified by caucuses, such as was the case of the 61st congress which formed the tariff, and which he stated was not the kind that was promised to the people by the republican party by any means. The congressman defined the insurgent or progressive republican as one who represented the people of his party, while a stand-pat or reactionary republican as one who represented property or in other words the interests. Cannonism was deplored by him, as it gave to one man practically the power of making the laws of the country, but stated that happily it was quite certain now that this would be done away with at the 62nd congress.

Congressman Lindbergh charged that just previous to the organization of the 61st congress, when it was seen that there would be some difficulty in getting the required number of votes to carry the house, the leaders of the republican party called together the men on the floor of the house, who represented the interests, for a private consultation at which time their votes were obtained on the promise of a number of concessions to each in the make-up of the new tariff, thereby bartering away the rights of the people.

He stated that at the time, it was made clear to him by at least three different people, who were in a position to know, that if he could see his way clear to vote for a certain measure which he knew was not for the good of the people, he would find little trouble in securing certain postoffice appointments. He stated that he did not vote for the measure and it lost out by but two votes.

The congressman stated that while he had always known that patronage was used as a means to club congressmen into line to vote for measures which were radically wrong, it was with sorrow that he read of the admission of the president that such was the case.

He stated that the explaining by certain congressmen, and likewise members of the state legislature, of their votes on certain measures on the plea that it benefited their hometowns or that they were under obligations to the speaker because of having repeatedly been put on important committees, should not be listened to, as putting it plain to the audience he asked, "Who is the one that is under obligations, the member of the house who has been appointed to important committees by the speaker, or the speaker who has been appointed by the members of the house?" He stated that it was the duty of the congressman or member of the state legislature to represent his whole district and not vote for certain things just because it benefited his home town.

Congressman Lindbergh evidently voiced the sentiment of the audience when he stated that he believed that it was the duty of candidates for office to make known their position on the important issues, and that he did not believe in voting for anyone just because he was a neighbor or a good fellow, but for what he stood for, and that he had too much respect for the citizenship of anyone to offer them election cigars, which were in fact bids for their votes, and he was loudly applauded.

He stated that the voters are confronted with the same condition as existed just before the civil war, property having a vote in congress now as at that time except in a different manner, and that as the people met the issue squarely at that time they should do so now, but with the ballot at the polls.

The congressman stated that the leaders, who did not represent the wishes of the people, should be turned down, and that when the time came that the people could not get what they wanted through their own party then it was time to try to get it through some other party. In his remarks Congressman Lindbergh also charged that the president was over-doing things, and that while it was the business of the president to suggest legislation it was not his business to legislate, as this was congress's work. Mr. Lindbergh's address aroused deep interest, and was well received.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT BULLETIN.

An examination by this Department, of the Grand Degree of Honor, A. O. U. W., of Minnesota shows the following condition on June 30, 1910:

Receipts, Jan. 1, to June 30, 1910.....	$ 67,394.30
Disbursements, to June 30, 1910.....	37,124.94
Admitted Assets.....	118,888.20
Liabilities.....	13,798.92

The report shows that the society is honestly and economically conducted. The attention of agents is called to the fact that all trade propositions between agent and insurer are in direct violation of Chapter 427, Laws of 1909, which specifically forbids any inducements to insure not specified in the policy contract.

Complaints continue to come to this office from people who have taken insurance with unauthorized concerns and unable to collect indemnities. We are powerless to aid these complainants. We have repeatedly warned the people of the state against patronizing unlicensed companies.

Those who are willing to pay their money to such concerns have only themselves to blame for consequences. The fire losses in Minnesota for July, 1910, were $ 650,000.00 as compared with $825,000.00 for the same month in 1909. The losses in the United States amounted to $16,343,000.00 as compared with $13,553,000.00 as compared with July, 1909.

John A. Hartigan, Commissioner of Insurance.

200 YEAR OLD BUTTER.

Ghee is used in India as is butter in America and European countries, and in fact is butter, so prepared that it never grows stale. Instances being known of its preservation for as long as two hundred years. A luxury which we can all enjoy is golden grain belt beer. A most delicious food drink, pleases the palate, and satisfies the thirst. Order a case for home use from your nearest dealer or be supplied by E. S. Tamer, Little Falls.

AN EXCELLENT BOOKING

Six High Class Attractions for Star Lecture Course This Season

The Star Lecture Course committee held a meeting at the German American National bank last Friday, and perfected plans for the seasons' entertainment.

Six high class attractions are booked to show in this city, at a total cost of just double that of last season. They are:

Thursday, October 6, Mrs. Brown and Choir Boys.

Wednesday, November 2, Alton Packard.

Friday, December 2, Oriole Concert company.

Wednesday, December 14, Dr. Thomas E. Green.

Monday, January 2, Wm. A. Colledge.

Monday, February 21, John B. Ratto.

It is expected that this excellent booking will be appreciated by the people of this city, and that they will attend in large numbers, thereby insuring the Star Lecture Course's financial success. Last season's course was very well received and a balance of $24 remained in the treasury at its close.

METHODISTS IN CONFERENCE.

With their opening session last Tuesday, the Northern Minnesota conference of the Methodist church is in session at Fergus Falls this week. Many distinguished speakers of the Methodist denomination are present at this conference, and practically all the pastors of the Methodist churches in the northern half of the state are in attendance. It is understood that Rev. J. C. Jewell of the local Methodist church, is to be transferred to another field. Rev. M. C. Stockland of Grace Church in Duluth, who was at one time stationed here is likely to be retained at Duluth as the congregation has made an urgent request for his retention.

RESERVATIONS TO BE OPENED.

The United States government will on October 15 and November 1 dispose of a vast area of lands in the Crow Indian reserve in Montana and the Nintah Indian reserve in Utah. The land sale in the former case will be held at Billings, Montana, 1,500,000 acres going under the hammer at not less than $2 per acre. As much as 640 acres of it can be purchased by one person, either personally or through an agent. No qualifications are required to make entry under any of the public land laws.

In the latter case, the sale will be held at Provo, Utah, land to be sold at auction at not less than 50 cents per acre cash.

SHOT IN THE ARM WHILE HUNTING.

While out hunting rabbits in the eastern part of the county Thursday of last week, Ed. Froelich, the seventeen year old son of Jos. Froelich of New Pierz was accidentally shot in the arm with a 12-gauge shot gun which he was carrying. The exact manner of the accident is not known, but it occurred when passing a bridge, the charge entering his right wrist. There are some hopes that the arm will be saved.
